$6,000,000,000 More. Strikes Without Whisky. Silver Limps Back.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE HOUSE appropriations committee winds up a session of cash distribution such as no nation has known, except in war time, by giving the President authority to spend for "relief" SIX THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS.

That is a large sum, and on the old-fashioned pawn-broker plan of issuing interest bearing bonds, the interest would increase the six billions to twelve billions all to be paid by taxpayers.

The government's currency, the government's guarantee, would be exactly as good as bond, with the same guarantee, and would save interest charges. The trouble is that if currency were issued, there would be "nothing in it" for those that lend money, whereas, with bond issues there will be six billions in it for those gentlemen. And as they get the money they "lend" to the government from the government's Federal Reserve the system is attractive. Eventually it may occur to the government to ask "where are the taxpayers to get all these billions?" They cannot get the money from the Federal Reserve or pay the government five per cent on account, and "owe" without interest on the 95 per cent balance. On the contrary, they have the bond and the government pays interest to them. Sounds incredible, but it is the fact.

GENERAL JOHNSON, with capacity of getting things done, is believed to have postponed the textile strike of 400,000 for the moment.

The threatening strike of steel workers causes more anxiety than numerous other strikes that are suggested. The late Judge Gary, head of the biggest steel company, referring to a strike just ended, said to a well-known American diplomat:

"We had no trouble with that steel strike, thanks to prohibition. It was only necessary to keep bootleggers away from the works and the men, and with no whisky available, there was little trouble. Without whisky to make men indifferent to danger, there is no prospect of success for steel strikers."

PROHIBITION HAS gone, however, and there is plenty of whisky, including the most poisonous bootleg kinds for sale everywhere. The strike, if it comes will not necessarily be a cold water strike. About 400,000 are employed in the steel industry, and about thirty thousand, fewer than one-tenth of the men are on the rolls of the unrecognized steel union, paying dues to that union.

Whether the other 350,000 organized, and of many nationalities would join the strike, pay dues and fight it out, remains to be seen.

THE STEEL WORKERS are said to have broken away from control of their leaders, determined to strike this month unless their union is recognized. This offers another opportunity for General Johnson to prove that the word "impossible" was left out of his dictionary. Steel workers are said to demand a thirty hour week, six dollars a day minimum.

THE AMOUNT of gold in the world amounts to nothing compared with the world's need for real money, possession value everywhere. Therefore the people applaud the President's consent to use as an "auxiliary" form of money the other precious metal, silver. This is hardly "financial radicalism," considering that more than three quarters of the world's inhabitants have no gold, silver being their only money, and considering that silver for more than three thousand years, was the world's only money in general use. The French word for money today argentine means "silver." Judas got thirty pieces of silver, not gold.

WE ARE going on a partial, limping semi-silver basis, which means having back of our money twenty five dollars worth of silver at the nominal imaginary rate of $1.29 per ounce, for every hundred dollars worth of gold.

The government must purchase some thirteen or fourteen hundred million ounces of silver, that will cost, with silver prices probably rising, between seven hundred and one thousand million dollars.

Interesting question: How will the government pay for this new silver? Will it pay with more interest bearing bonds, on the assumption that the silver is really worth nothing? Or will

LOIS MARSHALL, 21

'CHUTE DEBUT POSTPONED

When no pilot would take Lois Marshall, 21-year-old blonde, aloft for her debut as a parachute jumper, hundreds of persons at Bettis Airport yesterday were disappointed, as the scheduled leap was postponed.

Downie Marshall, 25, of East Pittsburgh, brother of the disappointed girl and who has to his credit more than 500 jumps, added two more during the afternoon.

None of the pilots at the airport would assume the responsibility of taking Miss Marshall up for her first jump. Airport officials promised the throngs Miss Marshall would make her debut next Sunday.

Woman, 92, Survives 2 Major Operations

CINCINNATI, O., June 4.—(AP.)—A 92-year-old woman was informed by her surgeon today that she was out of danger after having undergone two major operations within a month's time. Hospital officials reported that Mrs. Mariah Horton was doing very well, following an operation for a ruptured appendix last Tuesday.

Rockefeller Drives As Health Improves

LAKEWOOD, N. J., June 14.—(INS.)—Neighbors of the nonogenarian John D. Rockefeller, reported today that the oil millionaire's health apparently is considerably improved. He made his first appearance yesterday outside his local estate since his recent return from Florida. He took an hour's automobile drive in and around the city.

Poison Slayer's Appeal Time Cut

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 4.—(AP.)—The Arkansas Supreme Court today allowed attorneys for Mark H. Shank, Akron (O.) attorney under sentence of death for a quadruple "picnic poison" murder, only two weeks in which to prepare briefs in support of their petition for a rehearing of the case. They had requested 60 days.

'Spike' O'Donnell Beaten by Gang

CHICAGO, June 4.—(AP.)—Edward (Spike) O'Donnell, known as a beer baron during prohibition days, received a fractured hip in a street brawl late last night. Reports said he was severely beaten by a band of men who halted his car on the far South Side.

O'HALLORAN ACCUSED IN VOTE TRIAL

P. J. Maloney, Sixth of Defendants, Goes On Stand

BULLETIN.

The defense executed a surprise move by resting this afternoon without calling Pat O'Malley, only one of the seven defendants who did not testify in his own behalf. If O'Malley had been called to the stand, prosecutors were armed with a record of his trial in Criminal Court. Several years ago he was convicted in a vote case and later pardoned.

Frank O'Halloran, on trial with State Senator James J. Coyne and five other Republicans, today was accused in Federal Court of changing the testimony he had given before the grand jury which indicted him on charges of a vote-stealing conspiracy.

O'Halloran was followed to the stand by Assemblyman P. J. Maloney, sixth of the seven defendants to testify. He gave a detailed account of his movements election night and the morning after, which dovetailed with accounts of other witnesses. He did not pretend to remember any of the minor details of that day.

O'Halloran was the fifth witness accused by Prosecutors James I. Marsh and Louis E. Graham of telling different stories.

O'Halloran testified today that from 7:30 p. m. on election night, November 8, 1932, to the next 4 a. m., he was in the engine house polling place of the Ninth Ward's Ninth District, that he made no mysterious telephone calls and sent no mysterious messages.

Upstairs, in the fire engine house, was a kind of headquarters for gathering the ward's returns, according to testimony.

O'MALLEY TRACED

Prosecutor Marsh, seeking to strengthen the government's case against Pat O'Malley, the Coyne leader in the Strip, asked O'Halloran today whether O'Malley was in the polling place on election night.

O'Halloran testified he didn't see O'Malley.

Marsh then read this quotation which he indicated O'Halloran had made before the grand jury, asked the same question:

"I didn't see him, I heard he was there. I was upstairs."

O'Halloran conceded that if he had so testified before the grand jury, then his answer must have been correct. He explained that all this happened two years ago. He admitted his recollection, when testifying before the grand jury, should have been better than it is now.

DISCREPANCY CHARGED

On one other detail Marsh implied that O'Halloran had told a different version. Before the grand jury, according to Marsh, O'Halloran testified district lead-

Dillinger Hurt, U. S. on Trail, Says Keenan

International News Service.

BOSTON, June 4.—America's Public Enemy No. 1, John Dillinger, is wounded, and in hiding in an Illinois hospital, while federal agents are slowly, but surely closing in on him, Joseph B. Keenan, United States Assistant Attorney General, declared today on his trip here, where he addressed the convention of the Massachusetts Credit Union League. Keenan declared:

"The information on Dillinger came to federal agents from a source that received it direct from a Dillinger henchman."

Keenan, a native of New England, and drafted by the government as a "gang buster," also admitted his trip included a survey into affairs of the closed Federal National Bank of Boston, and complaints on the acquittal of Daniel C. Mulloney, its former president.

MISSING YOUTH SLAIN IN CAVE

PHILIPPI, W. Va., June 4.—(AP.)—Police announced today that a posse has found the body of Dale Janes, 15-year-old school boy, who disappeared from home a week ago. The officers said they believed he had been beaten and buried, perhaps alive.

The body, found yesterday, was concealed by rocks and leaves in a cave about a mile from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Barbara Hoffman.

Lieut. H. C. Myers, of the state police headquarters in Charleston, said State Trooper Paul Thomas, of Philippi, told him two men are being detained for questioning.

A physician who examined the body said the boy had been dead about a week. He left home a week ago Sunday.

The theory was advanced that the boy might have fallen into the cave, striking his head on the rocks, but officers said the fact that the body had been covered by rocks and leaves indicated he had been murdered.

2 Killed in Riot In Cuban Province

HAVANA, June 4.—(INS.)—Two persons were killed and three wounded in riots in the city of Camaguey as the Cuban cabinet went into session this afternoon to consider a critical political situation.

The rioting occurred at the Public Works Building and the dead included Camaguey's chief engineer. The Army at once took over the plant to prevent further disorder.

Husband Who Sued Singer Prisoner

ROME, June 4.—(AP.)—Young Pietro Vernati, who once was denied a court injunction to prevent the singer Luisa Tetrazzini from "squandering her money," was bound over for trial on charges of extortion in a decision published yesterday. Vernati is married to the famous singer, although they are separated.

Writer of Horror Plays Scared to Death

PARIS, June 4.—(AP.)—Thousands of persons have been thrilled and terrified by the mystery books and plays of Gabriel Bernard.

At the Grand Guignol Theater—which specializes in dramas of terror—M. Bernard has been acclaimed as an expert in the art of imparting vicarious horrors to audiences.

No only in Paris has his imagination chilled theatergoers—Buenos Aires and other Latin-American capitals as well have been thrilled by his works.

Yesterday a boy on the street suddenly shoved a paint brush soaked in iodine under his nose. M. Bernard apparently mistook it for a revolver.

He fainted, collapsing on the sidewalk. In the evening, at a hospital, he died.

STEEL PEACE SOUGHT IN CAPITAL

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt was informed today by Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, that the steel companies are arming in preparation for the threatened strike of workers.

Leaving the White House, Gov. Pinchot said he had called to report "the situation is bad," but that he is ready "to meet whatever situation arises." He said he had not asked for federal intervention.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—The threat of a paralyzing steel strike simmered today while NRA watched closely for the next move.

With his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson, he went to the Mayflower Hotel, giving no explanation of his mission. However, it was learned that W. A. Irvin, president of the United States Steel Corporation, with whom Johnson held a telephone conversation earlier, was at the Mayflower.

It could not be learned definitely that Johnson and Irvin were together, but indications were the administrator—already in possession of demands from the union leaders—was acquainting himself with the position of the industrialists prior to a visit to the White House to lay the whole situation before President Roosevelt.

WHITE HOUSE PARLEY

Usually well informed sources said last week such a conference was in prospect, but White House secretaries said today steel was not on the President's immediate program for immediate action.

Johnson has enlisted one of his principal labor advisers, Edward McGrady, for study of the steel situation.

Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, had been expected to come to Washington today for new conferences with Johnson on the union's warning of a general strike in

BRITISH TO FAIL ON DEBT

International News Service.

LONDON, June 4.—The British government's decision not to make a partial or token payment on the installment of the foreign debt due America June 15 unless assured such a payment will not be regarded as a default, will be announced in the House of Commons tomorrow.

The text of the note, stating the British attitude, was cabled to Sir Ronald Lindsay, ambassador to Washington, for presentation to the State Department today.

Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, will announce the government's position to Commons, declaring it is out of the question for Great Britain to meet the June 15 installment in full.

At the same time he will make public the Anglo-American exchange of notes on the subject.

Takes Girl on Trip, Slain by Her Father

HAGERSTOWN, Md., June 4.—(INS.)—George Saum, 22, married and the father of three children, died in the hospital today of bullet wounds police said were inflicted by the father of an attractive 16-year-old girl whom Saum took to Washington on a two-day automobile trip.

Police said he told them in a death bed statement that Allen Hollar, 45, father of Jane Hollar, a junior high school student, shot him.

Open the Pools!

Everyone who has followed municipal affairs in Pittsburgh over a number of years knows that complaints arise annually over the delay in opening and the premature closing of the municipal swimming pools. It is a fond hope that an administration will come along some time that will be foresighted enough to have the pools going at all times when the people are sweltering and in need of relief.

The intense heat of the last few days has made the need of the opening of the pools manifest to everyone. People are suffering. But the pools remain closed, and may remain closed until June 30 unless action is demanded by the people with sufficient sternness to make the municipal authorities yield.

Recriminations pass between Mayor W. N. McNair and Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston on the one hand and City Council on the other hand as to who is responsible for the situation. The public is not interested in this bickering. It knows that if there is a will to open the pools they can be opened at once.

Open the pools! Open them immediately! This is an emergency with which the city is confronted, and should be dealt with as such. No quibbling! No raising of technical objections! If the money is not available now it can be raised later. The city's credit is first rate.

Open the pools!

NATION RUSHES DROUGHT AID

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—A report that famine conditions would prevail in at least one drought-stricken section unless early rain or federal aid intervene today brought quick government response.

President Roosevelt opened conferences with his aides to size up the situation and outline relief plans within a matter of hours after returning to the capital this morning.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, predicted drought relief legislation. The amount to be recommended, he added, has not been determined. Estimates from interested quarters have ranged between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

Every resource of the Emergency Relief Administration today was centered on getting food and work relief into the drought areas.

Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Chester C. Davis, Agriculture Administrator, and William I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, made up today's White House war council against the drought.

Auto Crash Kills College Ball Player

INDIANAPOLIS, June 4.—(AP.)—Kenneth Francis Dugan, 24, captain of the Indiana University baseball team, was killed, and three other students were injured early yesterday when an automobile overturned and rolled down on embankment east of Indianapolis.

Verne Olsen, 25, of East Chicago, Ind., was critically injured, and Wallace DeHart, 20, and Herbert Allison, 20, both of Indianapolis, were less seriously hurt.

Fishermen Escape Storm in Korea

LONDON, June 4.—(INS.)—Fears that almost the entire fishing fleet of small boats off the west coast of Korea had been wiped out by a storm which descended without warning were dispelled today as further dispatches from Seoul stated that many of the fishermen had found safe refuge among the islands.

Spurns Fine Rum To Flee With Gin

KITTANNING, Pa., June 4.—(AP.)—It was gin he wanted—that fellow who smashed the window of a state liquor store early Sunday morning.

The store window contained more than $100 worth of various liquors, but the thug, after breaking the plate glass with a brick, departed with only a 90-cent bottle of gin.

SHOWERS COOL PARCHED WEST

Associated Press.

The parched Middle West cooled off today under June showers, but the effects of May's unparalleled aridity remained.

While week-end rains brought the mercury well below the century mark in sections where it soared to record heights last week, government officials met in Washington at the call of President Roosevelt to consider various proposals for alleviating the distress of farmers and stockmen in the devastated areas.

Soaking rains fell over Central and Southern North Dakota; a two-inch downpour was welcomed in the sugar beet section near Scottsbluff, Neb.; heavy rains fell in sections of Illinois; Ottawa, Kan., had 1.06 inches, and elsewhere there were scattered showers, but none of drought-breaking proportions. Weather bureau officials reported the drought appeared to be broken in the Rocky Mountain section.

HEAT WAVE HOLDS GRIP ON CITY

Emergency Measures Speeded as Children Suffer

BULLETIN.

Council late today adopted a resolution authorizing Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston to open the city swimming pools, if in his judgment this was advisable and to use the money already appropriated. The vote was 7 to 2.

An answer to the cry of a host of sweltering youngsetrs for relief from the oppressive heat was expected late today in emergency measuers to open the city's 22 swimming pools.

Council President Robert Garland said a resolution would be presented this afternoon instructing Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston to open the pools immediately and informing him that money would be provided later by Council.

Adoption of the resolution was foreseen as ending the bickering between the administration and Council over failure to provide cooling waters for heat-stricken children.

HUMIDITY GAINS

The unseasonable hot wave was intensified today by mounting humidity. Scattered thunder showers appeared the only hope of a temporary break in the high temperatures. The mercury was climbing toward yesterday's peak of 90.

As children gazed longingly at arid pools, Director Johnston reiterated that he would not open them unless Council provided the money to pay lifeguards, matrons and caretakers.

Johnston was asked:

"Do you have authority to open the city pools and expend money already appropriated?"

He replied:

"Yes, but I will not do it. The ordinance provides funds to operate pools for 66 days. If we use the money now and run out later we would be justly criticized for bad judgement. I will not open the pools until council provides more money."

Under the existing set up, the pools would open June 30. Johnston on May 31 sent an ordinance to Council carrying an appropriation of $8,775 to permit opening the pools part time beginning next

Quintuplets Imperiled From Forest Fire

By CHARLES E. BLAKE

International News Service.

CALLANDER, Ont., June 4.—Marie Dionne, youngest of the Dionne quintuplets, clung to life with a fierce tenacity today as the five baby girls began their seventh day of life.

Their mother, Mrs. Alizire Dionne, was happy and cheerful as Dr. A. R. Dafoe told her of the improvement in the condition of little Marie.

Two members of the provincial police of Ontario guarded the Dionne farm, keeping loiterers, curiosity seekers and theatrical promoters away from the little farm home.

A roaring forest fire raged to within a mile and a half of the Dionne farm yesterday. Oliva, father of the quintuplets, notified officials and men were rushed to fight the flames and to guard the home.

Dr. Dafoe said:

"That fire had us worried. I was not so much afraid of the fire getting up to the house as I was of the smoke that might have blanketed the entire countryside and would have quickly snuffed out the lives of the babies."

As hardy, soil-stained, toil-bent men guarded the baby girls from the dangers of a forest fire, three nurses and Dr. Dafoe stood guard over Baby Marie. Her life was despaired of yesterday as she lay motionless in the incubator, her eyes heavy and dull.

But she rallied from the sinking spell. At 5 o'clock this morning she was seven days old.

The babies were being fed warmed human milk from a nipple attached to a brech feeder—a long, thin glass tube—today. At the other end of the tube is a rubber bulb to force the milk into the tiny mouths if necessary.

The babies are fed five cubic centimeters of milk every two hours and between feeding are given drops of warmed water. Twice daily they are given two drops of milk of magnesia. When one of the babies shows signs of weakening she is given two drops of rum.

O'HOLLORAN ACCUSED OF CHANGING VOTE TESTIMONY

ers telephoned returns to the engine house. Today he testified the district men brought them in.

Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, O'Halloran's counsel, countered by insisting that Marsh read all of O'Halloran's grand jury testimony into the record, contending it was "substantially the same." Judge F. P. Schoonmaker said no.

Two of them were government witnesses, Mike Stabile, county detective, and Charles G. Lane, Jr., who last year was defeated for a seat on the Juvenile Court bench, for which he ran with Coyne support.

WITNESSES ACCUSED

Friday, with two defense witnesses, the prosecutors contended they had told different stories, one before the grand jury, the other to a government investigator, E. J. Connelly, who returned to Pittsburgh today to testify in rebuttal for the government.

Waiting to follow O'Halloran and Maloney to the stand today was the only other defendant who has not yet testified—Pat O'Malley. There is a possibility O'Malley may not be reached until tomorrow.

Senator Coyne, his brother, Tom Coyne; Walter Butler, district chairman of the Fourth Ward, and Martin Mullen, Tenth Ward district chairman, testified last week.

Tomorrow will also be given over to rebuttal testimony, closing arguments of counsel, and Judge F. P. Schoonmaker's charge. The case will go to the jury late Tuesday, or Wednesday.

ACQUITTAL SOUGHT

Before the jury of 12 men retire the defendants once more will ask for directed verdicts of acquittal.

O'Halloran, who was on the stand Saturday, returned today for cross-examination by Prosecutors Louis E. Graham and James I. Marsh.

His defense did not differ much from the facts brought out by the prosecutors, but O'Halloran denied the government's interpretation of them.

The Ninth Ward district chairman said he spent election night, from 7:30 o'clock to next 4 a. m., in the engine house polling place of the Ninth Ward's Ninth District, that from there he strolled to Penn avenue and Main street for a cup of coffee and happened, simply by coincidence, to meet Senator Coyne and other defendants.

NOT PREARRANGED

He insisted this meeting—which the prosecutors contend was the culmination of the conspiracy—was not prearranged.

He admitted having made a telephone call from the Regal Restaurant. But he said t'·'s was only to summon Louis Conley, one of the defendants who have been acquitted, with the returns of a missing district. The Senator ordered him to call Conley, O'Halloran said.

It was at Senator Coyne and O'Malley that the prosecutors aimed most of their testimony.

O'MALLEY'S TEST

O'Malley will have to explain away the government's contention that he was in the polling place of the Tenth Ward's Fourth District after the polls closed; that he asked James Bailey, the government's star witness, to join in a vote-stealing conspiracy, that he said Senator Coyne was "taking care of things" in the Fourth and Fifteenth wards, and Martin Mullen had promised to tie up the vote in the Tenth Ward district.

The case against Assemblyman Maloney required less time to answer. The government's accusations against him are that he was in that Ninth Ward polling place, showed up at the Penn and Main curbstone session, and later toured the district for returns.

Question and Answer Vote Trial Story

Frank O'Halloran, district chairman of the Ninth Ward, returned to the witness stand in Federal Court today for cross-examination. On Saturday he testified that he spent from 7:30 p. m. election night to next 4 a. m. in the engine house polling place of the Ninth Ward's Ninth District, that from there he headed for the Regal restaurant at Penn avenue and Main street for a cup of coffee. Meeting with Senator Coyne and other defendants at the corner was merely chance, he testified. He admitted telephoning Louis Conley, but he denied there was anything mysterious about the call. He simply told Conley to bring down the returns from a missing district requested by Senator Coyne.

Porsecutor James I. Marsh cross-examined.

Q.—From 7:30 until 5 after 4 you were either sitting on this pumper (in the fire engine polling place) or walking in front of it?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you talk to anybody?

A.—Oh, yes . . . various district leaders who came in with the returns and we would talk about them.

Q.—Were those returns telephoned to the (Republican headquarters at) William Penn?

A.—I don't know. I presumed they were supposed to be.

Q.—Did you recall being asked before the grand jury how you got these returns and you replied that different district chairmen would 'phone them in? Did you so testify?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you see Maloney at the polling place (Assemblyman P. J. Maloney, for whom O'Halloran was campaign manager)?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you recall being asked before the grand jury whether O'Malley was there and you replied, "I didn't see him. I heard he was there. I was upstairs"? Do you remember so testifying?

A.—I don't recall that. If it's on there I must have testified.

Q.—Well, were you upstairs (Previous testimony indicated that the upstairs — the fire chief's office—was a sort of headquarters for gathering returns from the district)?

A.—If I testified I must have been . . . that's been two years ago, you know.

A.—Absolutely.

Q.—Why did you go to Penn and Main?

A.—To get a cup of coffee. I was tired, been on duty almost 24 hours.

Q.—Did you get the coffee?

A.—I don't recall now whether I did.

Q.—Didn't they have coffee at the engine house?

Q.—Who were the first persons you saw near Penn and Main?

A.—Paddie Maloney, George Savage and O'Malley.

Q.—What did you do?

A.—I said hello and we talked about the landslide—the Democratic landslide.

Q.—Who joined the group then?

A.—Senator Coyne . . . it seemed like he came in a machine.

Q.—How long did you talk to Senator Coyne?

A.—About two minutes.

Q.—What did he say?

A.—To get Conley. I assume he wanted the returns.

Marsh then read from the grand jury record and asked O'Halloran?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Let me read these questions—You were asked "What did Senator Coyne say," and you answer, "Get Conley." Then you were asked "What did he want Conley for?" and you answered "I don't know."

Attorney Margiotti here objected, declaring the answers were substantially the same and adding:

"He said as his assumption that the Senator wanted to get the returns."

Judge Schoonmaker agreed with Margiotti and so ruled, and cross-examination was resumed.

Q.—After further conversation where did you go?

A.—I went into the Regal restaurant across the street.

Q.—What returns had you in?

Q.—You got Conley?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the telephone number?

A.—I couldn't recall now. But I know he was in a club.

Q.—Did you know where the club was?

A.—Not them, but I do know.

A.—At Fiftieth and Harrison.

Q.—How far is that from where you were?

A.—About seven minutes by auto.

Q.—Did Conley give the returns when he arrived?

A.—I don't think so. I don't believe he had them. He didn't give them to me, anyhow.

Q.—When you returned was the same group there?

A.—Yes, and five or six others were scattered around.

Q.—Who were they?

A.—I don't know.

Q.—How did Conley arrive?

A.—He and Metzier came in a car.

Q.—What kind of a car?

A.—I wouldn't know.

Q.—What was said?

A.—I don't recall now. The Senator had stepped away.

Q.—What did Conley say?

A.—I forget.

Q.—Did the Senator return soon?

A.—Yes, he got there almost at the same time as Conley.

Q.—How long did they talk?

A.—I'd say a few minutes.

Q.—What then?

Q.—Which direction?

A.—Towards Main street.

Q.—Did you recall if the Senator got into his car and drove away?

Q.—What did you talk of then?

A.—I believe we got talking about the Eighth District of the Tenth Ward. Someone said, "Mahoney works for you, maybe you can get the returns."

Q.—And you got into a car?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was driving?

A.—I don't remember, it was sort of an afterthought that I got in when one of the fellows said, "Jump in, the ride will do you good."

O'Halloran then repeated the story of the visit to Mahoney's home, of finally leaving Savage and O'Malley outside Savage's home, where O'Malley complained of what seemed indigestion.

Margiotti then countered by asking that Marsh produce all of O'Halloran's grand jury testimony to show that his story then was "substantially" the same. Judge Schoonmaker turned him down.

Marsh resumed cross-examination.

Q.—Didn't some members of the election board tell you Maloney and Savage and O'Malley had gone to Penn and Main.

A.—They told about Maloney and Savage had gone there . . . I don't remember about O'Malley.

Joseph H. Rodgers, a Democratic watcher in the O'Halloran district, then testified that he was at the polling place from 7:30 to 11, that O'Halloran was there all that time.

Two character witnesses for Assemblyman Maloney followed. They were Thomas McMahon, City Assessor, and Assemblyman William Walker, of Avalon.

Albert Carelli, a clerk for Allegheny County, was called by Margiotti, and testified he had been in the Regal restaurant from around 3 to 5 morning after election.

Q.—How far were you from the telephone?

A.—About six feet.

Q.—Did you see O'Halloran there?

A.—The first I noticed was when a man on the phone mentioned Lou Conley. Then I heard him say "Senator Coyne wants to see you."

Q.—In what tone of voice did O'Halloran speak?

A.—Normal.

Q.—Did you see O'Malley come in?

A.—Yes. He went to the counter and got a glass of water from the girl.

A.—No.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Maloney there?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Maloney in the restaurant at any time?

A.—No.

Paul Reagan, of 435 Taylor street, a chauffeur, testified he was in the restaurant. He heard O'Halloran, as Carroll did, but said he did not see any others inside or outside the restaurant.

John Connors, an electrician, testified to the same nature, but saw O'Malley there.

Charles Dascolas, owner of the restaurant, said in the 12 years he was there, he had never seen P. J. Maloney in the restaurant.

Clarence Brennan and John L. Friel, Democratic legislative candidates beaten in that fight by Maloney and George Metzier, then were called as defense witnesses. They denied discussing the election fight with two government witnesses, Mary Ryba and Stella Schwartz, waitresses in the Penn and Main restaurant. But they said the waitresses had told them of seeing Coyne and O'Malley across the street.

Assemblyman P. J. Maloney, sixth of the seven witnesses to take the stand, was called and questioned by Margiotti.

Q.—Where were you when the polls closed?

A.—Well, I was at my son's—James P.—for dinner. I left his home about 7:15. He drove me to my own home. I remained there till possibly 9.

Q.—Then where did you go?

A.—Then I walked up to Penn and Main, dropped into the cigar store and talked with the proprietor. Then I walked up to Squire Holleran's—that's not the defendant. From there I went down to the Ninth Ward headquarters in the chief's headquarters (above the polling place) about 9:30 or 10.

Q.—Now there has been testimony that you were there about 7:30, too. It that correct?

A.—Yes, sir. When I was coming from my son's home in his car I just dropped in and said hello.

Q.—When did you get a report on your own district in your own fight?

A.—When I was at the engine house (later) . . . Sorry to say, I lost it.

Q.—Where did you go from the engine house?

A.—I went to Republican headquarters in the Sixth Ward to see if Mr. Metzier, my running mate, was there. He wasn't . . . Then I went to the Second Ward headquarters to see if they had any returns. Mr. O'Malley was there. I asked him if he had any returns and he said it was too early yet. I asked him to 'phone them to our headquarters . . . He was playing cards when I entered.

Q.—What did you say to O'Malley?

A.—I asked him for returns, but he said it was too early.

Q.—Prior to going to the club, had you seen any of the defendants?

Q.—Where did you go from the club?

A.—I stopped at a tobacco store and then went to the fire chief's headquarters. Mr. Savage and I hadn't any returns from the Sixth and Tenth wards. We were going to Charley Martin's real estate office (he is the ward chairman) when we met Fire Chief Callahan. He spends a great deal of time with Charley Martin, and Mr. Savage asked him if Martin had any returns. Callahan said Martin's office was closed up, and I remember Savage saying, "It's pretty early for a ward chairman to close up." Chief Callahan said Mr. Fullen, secretary of the Republican organization, might have returns, and he offered to direct us to Fullen's home, and he did. He instructed the driver of his fire car to follow us. He pointed out the house, and Mr. Savage went in. Cornelius Bulger was with us.

Q.—Where did Chief Callahan go?

Q.—What then?

A.—Mr. Fullen said several district were missing. He gave us some returns. And then he directed us to a school house, the Eighth of the Tenth Ward. But there was no sheet there to show the returns.

Q.—Where did you go then?

A.—Then we drove into the blind alley, pulled out again and went to Mr. Mahoney's home. He was chairman. But he either wasn't at home or was asleep. I didn't leave the car.

Q.—Where then?

A.—We went to Alderman Scott's office and it was closed. We went to his house, and he came down and took us to the office. We got some returns there and then went to Charlie Martin's house.

Q.—Did you go in. There was something said about keys.

Q.—Then where did you go?

A.—Then we drove back to the engine house. That was about five after three and we remained there to 4. Then Savage and I left the headquarters intending to go up to Penn avenue and get a glass of beer at Finell's across from the Regal Restaurant when we met O'Malley, . . . Mr. O'Malley came up and handed me the returns for the Second Ward.

Q.—Did you go to Finnell's?

A.—No, sir. We got pretty near Finnell's and stopped there talking.

Q.—Who walked with you?

A.—Mr. Savage and Mr. O'Malley.

Q.—What did you talk about?

A.—The Democratic landslide.

Q.—Who did you see next?

A.—Senator Coyne—no, I'm wrong there. First I saw O'Halloran, then I saw Senator Coyne coming up street.

Q.—Did you go in Finnell's?

A.—No, the place was closed. We thought on election night he'd be open.

Q.—What occurred after Coyne appeared?

Maloney then gave the same version of the Coyne conversation testified to by O'Halloran. Then he told of going to Mahoney's home and to Alderman Scott's office seeking returns.

Q—Did O'Malley and you go into the Savage home?

A—Yes.

Q—How long did you stay?

Q—And you remained?

A—Yes, a few minutes. I'm friendly in Savage's home.

Q—Where did you go then?

A—I went home.

Q—Mr. Maloney, please state whether during the day or night of election day or the morning after you were solicited by any one of these defendants to engage in election fraud?

Q—Were you solicited by anyone at all to engage in election fraud?

A—No.

Q.—Did you ever engage in any conspiracy or agreement with Senator Coyne or anyone else to engage in election fraud?

A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you see Senator Coyne aside from the meeting at Penn and Main street, during the election?

A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you ever engage in any election fraud?

A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you see Tom Coyne, Walter Butler or Martin Mullen election day or night or the next morning?

A.—I did not?

A.—No.

Prosecutor Marsh objected and answered Margiotti by stating that the ballot box was not before the court. Marsh then took up cross-examination, consulting his grand jury record.

A.—Yes.

Q.—At that time you were asked what you did after the polls closed and you answered that you just loafed around the fire engine house and you didn't tell about all these visits. Did you so testify?

A.—If it's on the record, I so testified.

A.—The chief's.

Q.—Who was there?

A.—There were a good many, but I remember Chief Conley, Edward Dodson, Joe Moore, George Savage.

Q.—How long did you stay?

A.—Perhaps until 10:30.

Q.—Did you get any returns?

A.—A few.

Q.—What were they?

A.—For the Legislature only. I was only interested in my own fight.

Q.—I didn't asq you what you were interested in. I asked you what the returns were?

A.—And I don't recall, other than my own.

Q.—And you went from there to the Sixth Ward Republican headquarters?

A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you know where it was?

A.—How did I know where it was? Hadn't I been in office for two years and a Republican and wouldn't I know where our own headquarters was?

Q.—Did you stay?

A.—I just asked for the returns and went to the Second Ward Republican Club.

Q.—Well, it was a club?

A.—Yes, the Republican Club of the Second Ward.

Q.—How many people were there?

A.—Ten or 15.

Q.—How long did you stay there?

A.—Two or three minutes.

Maloney then told of touring the district the first time for returns and finally getting perhaps nine districts in Alderman Scott's office, then returning to the engine house. When Marsh asked whether, on his return, he had given these fresh returns to Conley, the ward chairman, Maloney said he hadn't because he and Conley weren't friendly at the time.

ADJOURNMENT WAITS FINISH OF PROGRAM

President, Congress Determined to Push To Conclusion

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt and congressional leaders determined today to withh ld decision on an adjournment date until the administration program is pushed to a conclusion.

The Capitol Hill chieftains expressed the opinion to the President that adjournment could be reached within 10 days.

DATE UNCERTAIN

The President told them he wanted the tariff, silver, housing, and Wagner Labor Board bills passed.

Senator Robinson, Dem cratic leader, declared:

"It is not possible now to indicate when the work of the session will be finished.

'Consideration is being given to passage of the silver, tariff, housing and Wagner labor bills."

Speaker Rainey and Representative Byrns, the Democratic House leader, joined in the White House Parley.

Rainey expressed confidence that adjournment would be reached next week, but both agreed it was impossible by this week-end.

KEEPS DOOR OPEN

President Roosevelt flatly declined to fix a definite date with the several administration measures still pending, but he emphasized that he wanted adjournment as quickly as possible.

Asked about social legislation, once placed near the top of the administration's program, Byrns asid "the President might send up a message on that soon." He added, however, that previous plans for establishment of a joint congressional committee to study social legislation had been abandoned.

At the White House it was said later that Mr. Roosevelt is keeping the door open on the program and no limit has been fixed upon the legislation he will insist upon.

PAUL F. PHELAN, 21

COLLEGE GRAD ON BLOCK

Paul F. Phelan, 21, son of Deputy Fire Chief Nicholas Phelan, of 519 Avery street, North Side, will receive answers at his home today to his advertisement offering a "college grad for sale."

Paul is the "grad for sale." He will accept, as he says in his ad, the best bid he receives. All bids, he explains, should be in the form of jobs.

He graduated from the University of Pittsburgh engineering school with honor last June. He wants a steady job. His advertisement points out that he has been a lifeguard, gymnasium and swimming instructor, boys' counselor and recreational director; that he can do office work, write an article, lead a meeting, put on a stunt entertainment, and spin yarns.

At Pitt, he didn't have time to go out for sports. Engineering is a "tough" course, and Paul had his work at Kingsley House and Sarah Heinz House to occupy his spare minutes.

About his advertisement Paul says:

"What I want is a job that will give me a chance to use my head. I like a problem that takes brains and ingenuity to solve."

M'GOVERN JOINS PINCHOT PLEA FOR RELIEF

Pair Flies to Capital For Parley With Hopkins

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Accompanied by Col. Charles C. McGovern, Allegheny County commissioner, Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, flew here from Harrisburg today to confer with Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator.

Hopkins said he expected to be able definitely to allocate the amount of funds to be used in Pennsylvania through the agency of federal relief after a talk with Gov. Pinchot, who advised Hopkins that he had prepared a schedule which he hoped would be carried out in co-operation with the relief administration.

The requests from Pennsylvania have been before Hopkins for consideration for more than six weeks and it is understood that the administrator will be pressed for a decision on the state's application for funds to cover a period of the next 10 months.

States Meeting Half Of Funds for Relief

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—Slightly more than one-half of the relief funds expended in the United States the first three months of this year was provided by states and local communities.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, today made public figures showing expenditures totaled $180,451,625 of which 51.6 per cent, or $93,047,669, came from states and local communities. The federal government supplied the remaining $87,403,956.

Among states which supplied more than half of the relief funds during the first quarter was Pennsylvania with state and local funds of $14,236,902 and federal, $9,269,438, for a total of $23,056,340.

It was pointed out that the situation changes from month to month. Pennsylvania, for instance, received $10,000,000 for May, more than all of the money supplied by the federal government during the first three months of the year.

Hoover, Former Critic, Pays Rolph Tribute

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—(AP.)—Men who a few months ago sharply criticized Gov. James Rolph, Jr., for his approval of a lynching became mourners at his funeral here today.

Former President Herbert Hoover headed a line of dignitaries in final tribute to the California Governor whose death Saturday smoothed away their controversy over the mob hanging at San Jose of the two kidnapers of Brooke L. Hart.

Shortly after the lynching last November, Mr. Hoover signed a statement issued by prominent civic leaders condemning the mob's action and Gov. Rolph's declaration that "It will show the rest of the country what California does to kidnapers."

That the criticism did not extend beyond the lynching incident was made clear by Mr. Hoover when he declared after Gov. Rolph's death that his long service to his city and state "will be held in grateful remembrance."

Three prominent San Francisco church leaders, Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, of the Catholic archdiocese; Rabbi Irving F. Reichert and Dean J. Wilmer Gresham, of the Episcopalian Grace Cathedral, who also opposed the Governor's attitude on the lynching, were to officiate at the public service at the City Hall.

Private services will be held from the Rolph home tomorrow.

Today

the government issue nice new green money saying "there is good silver back of this?" How long is the most dangerous kind of "inflation," through interest-bearing bonds to continue.

GOVERNOR ROLPH, of California, is dead. When kidnapers "snatched" a young man, murdered him coldly and brutally, and proceeded to extort money from his parents, promising to restore the kidnaped youth, already murdered, there was excitement in California.

There was more excitement when the kidnapers, caught and jailed, confessed and were lynched by the mob. In the first excitement, thinking only of the man kidnaped and murdered, Governor Rolph expressed what was interpreted as approval of the lynching.

IT IS probable that, in the first hour, ninety per cent of the public approved what Gov. Rolph said.

But next day photographs of the dangling bodies, and the unpleasant lynching crowd changed the views of the ninety per cent, and friends of Gov. Rolph say that public criticism of his hasty utterance aggravated his illness and caused his death.

The wise politician says nothing on the first day. He waits to know what the ninety per cent think and say on the second day. Then he says very little, with not much meaning.

THE FEDERAL control administration says only "brandy distilled from the fermented juice of fresh grapes may legally be called brandy." So-called brandies made in any other way must be clearly labelled as "apricot, peach, blackberry," etc., brandy.

This wise ruling, probably intended to protect grape-growers, will also protect consumers. Alcohol properly distilled from grapes contains no fusel oil or other impurity.

THE MOST expensive thing in the world is carelessness. In New York state alone last year accidents to workers cost one hundred million dollars. Twenty-five million dollars was paid in compensation. The entire loss of $100,000,000 in the long run is paid by the public.

The important thing is the loss to workers and their physical suffering. There is no remedy, except greater care on the part of workers who become careless. Men that handled dynamite for instance, often throwing the sticks about as they would throw sticks of wood. Also, there should be ever-increasing vigilance as regards use of safety devices on machinery.

WEALTHY YOUTH KILLS MOTHER AND BROTHER WITH AX

HACKER TELLS DETAILS OF SLAYINGS

Mysterious Woman Linked in Crime Hunted by Police

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—(AP.)—Louis Rude Payne, 21, cracked under the strain of an all-night grilling by police and confessed early today, Detective Capt. H. J. Walles said, to the details of the hatchet slaying of his mother and brother in their Westwood mansion here.

Police quoted the youth as crying:

"I killed them last Tuesday night.

"Many things my mother and brother had done to me finally multiplied themselves a million times in my mind and at last something set off the spark and I couldn't stand it any longer—so I killed them."

Mrs. Carrie L. Payne, 45, and her son, Robert, 14, were found hacked to death in their bedrooms of the luxurious Spanish-type Payne residence near the University of California at Los Angeles campus yesterday.

SURRENDERS TO POLICE

An alarm was broadcast for Louis, but before the extensive police net had had time to spread, he nonchalantly walked into the Huntington Beach Police Station, 30 miles south of here, with the announcement that he was wanted in Los Angeles for murder.

Hurriedly returned to Los Angeles, Louis at first responded to all police queries concerning the slaying with:

"I don't know. I can't seem to remember."

Several hours later, however, the strain of the intensive grilling beginning to show in his features, he startled officers with the admission:

"I did it!"

At the time of his surrender, officers found in Louis' pockets a letter and a telegram, both addressed to his father, Lucius F. Payne, wealthy St. Louis utilities company executive, and both confessing the double slaying.

Detectives quoted the youth as saying, after he finally broke down:

"I struck my mother first. Then I tied a piece of rope around her neck and tied it to the bedstead. Then I went into my brother's bedroom, where Robert was sleeping."

Detectives said Louis told of crashing the light hatchet down several times upon his brother's head. They said Louis, pale and trembling, moaned:

"I don't know how I could have done it."

Detectives said Louis smiled as he told of stripping his mother's pajamas from her body and trussing up his brother's form with another length of rope. They quoted him as saying:

"I did that just to confuse the police."

MYSTERY WOMAN

Meanwhile, police instituted an extensive search for a woman who they said, posing as Mrs. Payne, called last Friday at Beverly Hills High School and told an instructor that Robert had accidentally shot himself in the foot and was unable to attend classes.

The woman, police said they had learned, asked for Robert's trumpet—the boy was a member of the high school orchestra—and selected it from a large assortment of similar instruments.

Detectives made no announcement as to whether they had questioned Louis concerning the woman's presence at the high school.

The bodies of Mrs. Payne and Robert were found by police summoned by Dr. James T. Fisher, a neighbors, who said his curiosity was aroused by the fact that lights in the Payne residence had been burning night and day since last Wednesday.

The body of Mrs. Payne lay nude on her bed, a wound in her head, a tightly drawn noose of small rope around her neck, the end fastened to the bedstead.

Authorities said Louis was involved in an automobile accident about a year ago in which an elderly woman was killed. Since that time he frequently had suffered melancholia.

R. R. BUILDING, SCHOOL BURN

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 4.—(AP.)—An explosion of a shipment of Fourth of July firecrackers yesterday is believed by authorities to have caused the fire which destroyed the Pennsylvania Railroad freight warehouse and St. Joseph's Parochial School.

The blaze, which caused damage estimated by firemen at $75,000, was not brought under control until companies from half a dozen neighboring towns joined Johnstown firemen in the fight.

Fireman Ed Benson was overcome by smoke and half a dozen others escaped with minor injuries as the third floor of the three-story frame school and auditorium collapsed.

Father Wilfried Frins, pastor of St. John's Catholic Church, who has been in ill health for some time, was helped from the rectory. Fifteen nuns in the convent near the school were also forced to temporarily abandon their home.

SOLANA CANVAS BOUGHT HERE

Announcement of the acquisition of a painting by Jose Gutierrez Solana, known as "Bullfight in Turegano," was made today by the Carnegie Institute.

The painting, now on exhibition at the institute, will be added to its permanent collection through the Patrons Art Fund. Since the art fund was established in 1922, the institute has acquired 32 paintings.

Solana is a Spanish artist, widely known for his interpretation of Spanish scenes and customs little known to the world. He has won numerous awards at various exhibitions.

SHIP COLLISION IMPERILS 60

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The lives of at least 60 seamen were endangered early today when two small freighters collided in a dense fog about eight miles outside Ambrose channel. The ships were the S. S. Chiloil and the S. S. Cubano.

A radio dispatch intercepted by the Radio Marine Corporation indicated the Chiloil was returning to New York for minor repairs. The Cubano radioed that it would not require assistance and was proceeding to sea.

2 DIE IN AMBUSH LAID BY POLICE

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 4.—(AP.)—An extortionist's greed for $3,500 cost him his life in a police trap and brought death to a sleeping innocent man.

"A martyr to the law's campaign against kidnapers and extortionists," federal agents called Robert Perkins, 29, who was fatally wounded in bed by one of the bullets intended for Louis Walsh, 30.

A Coroner's jury was called today to hear the story of the two deaths which early yesterday climaxed Walsh's attempt to extort $3,500 from I. Diamond, wealthy department store owner.

Walsh was killed in the roar of riot guns, rifles and revolvers fired from ambush by federal agents and police. He was challenged immediately after receiving the currency from his intended victim.

The money fell in Perkins' yard, not far from the porch cot where his parents found him dying.

Notre Dame Honors Hull With Degree

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 4.—(AP.)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by the University of Notre Dame at its ninetieth commencement yesterday.

Hull received the degree when three other honorary doctorates were conferred and diplomas were awarded 506 students in the university gymnasium.

Law of '50-50' Works—And Pennies Prove It

Coins of Two Dates Are Almost Even in 100,000 Draws

ATHENS, Ga., June 4.—(AP.)—The underlying law of 50-50 is O. K.

That's what Prof. Pope Hill, of the University of Georgia, has found after 100,000 tests.

Several years ago the professor placed 200 pennies in a can. A hundred of them were dated 1919 and the remainder 1920. They were weighed on chemical balances and paired according to weight: For each 1919 penny of a given weight there was one 1920 penny of the same weight.

The 200 pennies were thoroughly mixed and one coin was drawn and its date recorded. It was returned to the can, the pennies stirred and another coin withdrawn and its date recorded.

This was done 100,000 times.

Of the 100,000 draws 50,145 came out 1920 and 49,855 were 1919. The professor says:

"The experiment gives very strong evidence that the underlying law of half and half actually does work out in practice."

Another point studied was the number of "runs," of which the professor said:

"If one date came out six times in succession we would call it a run of six, or eight times in succession a run of eight, etc.

"The theoretical number of runs of one and two combined was 37,500. The actual number 37,860. The theoretical number of runs of three, four and five is 10,938; the actual number 10,757.

"Of the runs greater than five the theoretical number is 1,563 and the actual number was 1,587 and these apparently check closely enough but there was a rather elusive but at times very strong suggestion that the number of actual runs will not check with the theoretical laws. Further study of my data will throw light on this point."

Erie People to Pray In Street for Rain

ERIE, Pa., June 4.—(AP.)—Prayers for rain to relieve drought-parched Erie County will be offered in Perry Square tomorrow night.

POOL OPENING SPEEDED

Saturday. Council tabled the measure.

Blaming Johnston, Councilman P. J. McArdle said the works chief could use some of the money already appropriated. To which Mayor McNair retorted:

"Ridiculous. If Johnston did that, Council would jump all over him."

Hundreds of North Side children grateful to the Mayor for overriding the objection of Park Supervisor William Hartlep that Lake Elizabeth was in no condition for swimming, basked in its cool waters yesterday.

There was one more casualty—a youngster cut his foot on the broken glass. Two were cut Saturday.

After glancing at the weather map, Observer W. S. Brotzman said the thermometer likely would repeat yesterday's skyrocketing which made Pittsburgh the warmest spot in the Ohio valley. He added:

"A uniform barometric pressure known as a 'flat' condition exists which is favorable to thundershowers."

Yesterday's shower which swept the downtown district was confined to a narrow strip. No rainfall was noted on the North Side or most suburban communities.

The drought continues unabated. May was the driest, with one exception, in the history of the Weather Bureau. Only 66-hundreds inch of rain fell here. The exception was May, 1894, when the rainfall measured .44 inch. In that year, however, the precipitation was normal in the other spring months. This year April was abnormally dry.

The weather continues warm over the eastern states, while over the west cool weather prevails.

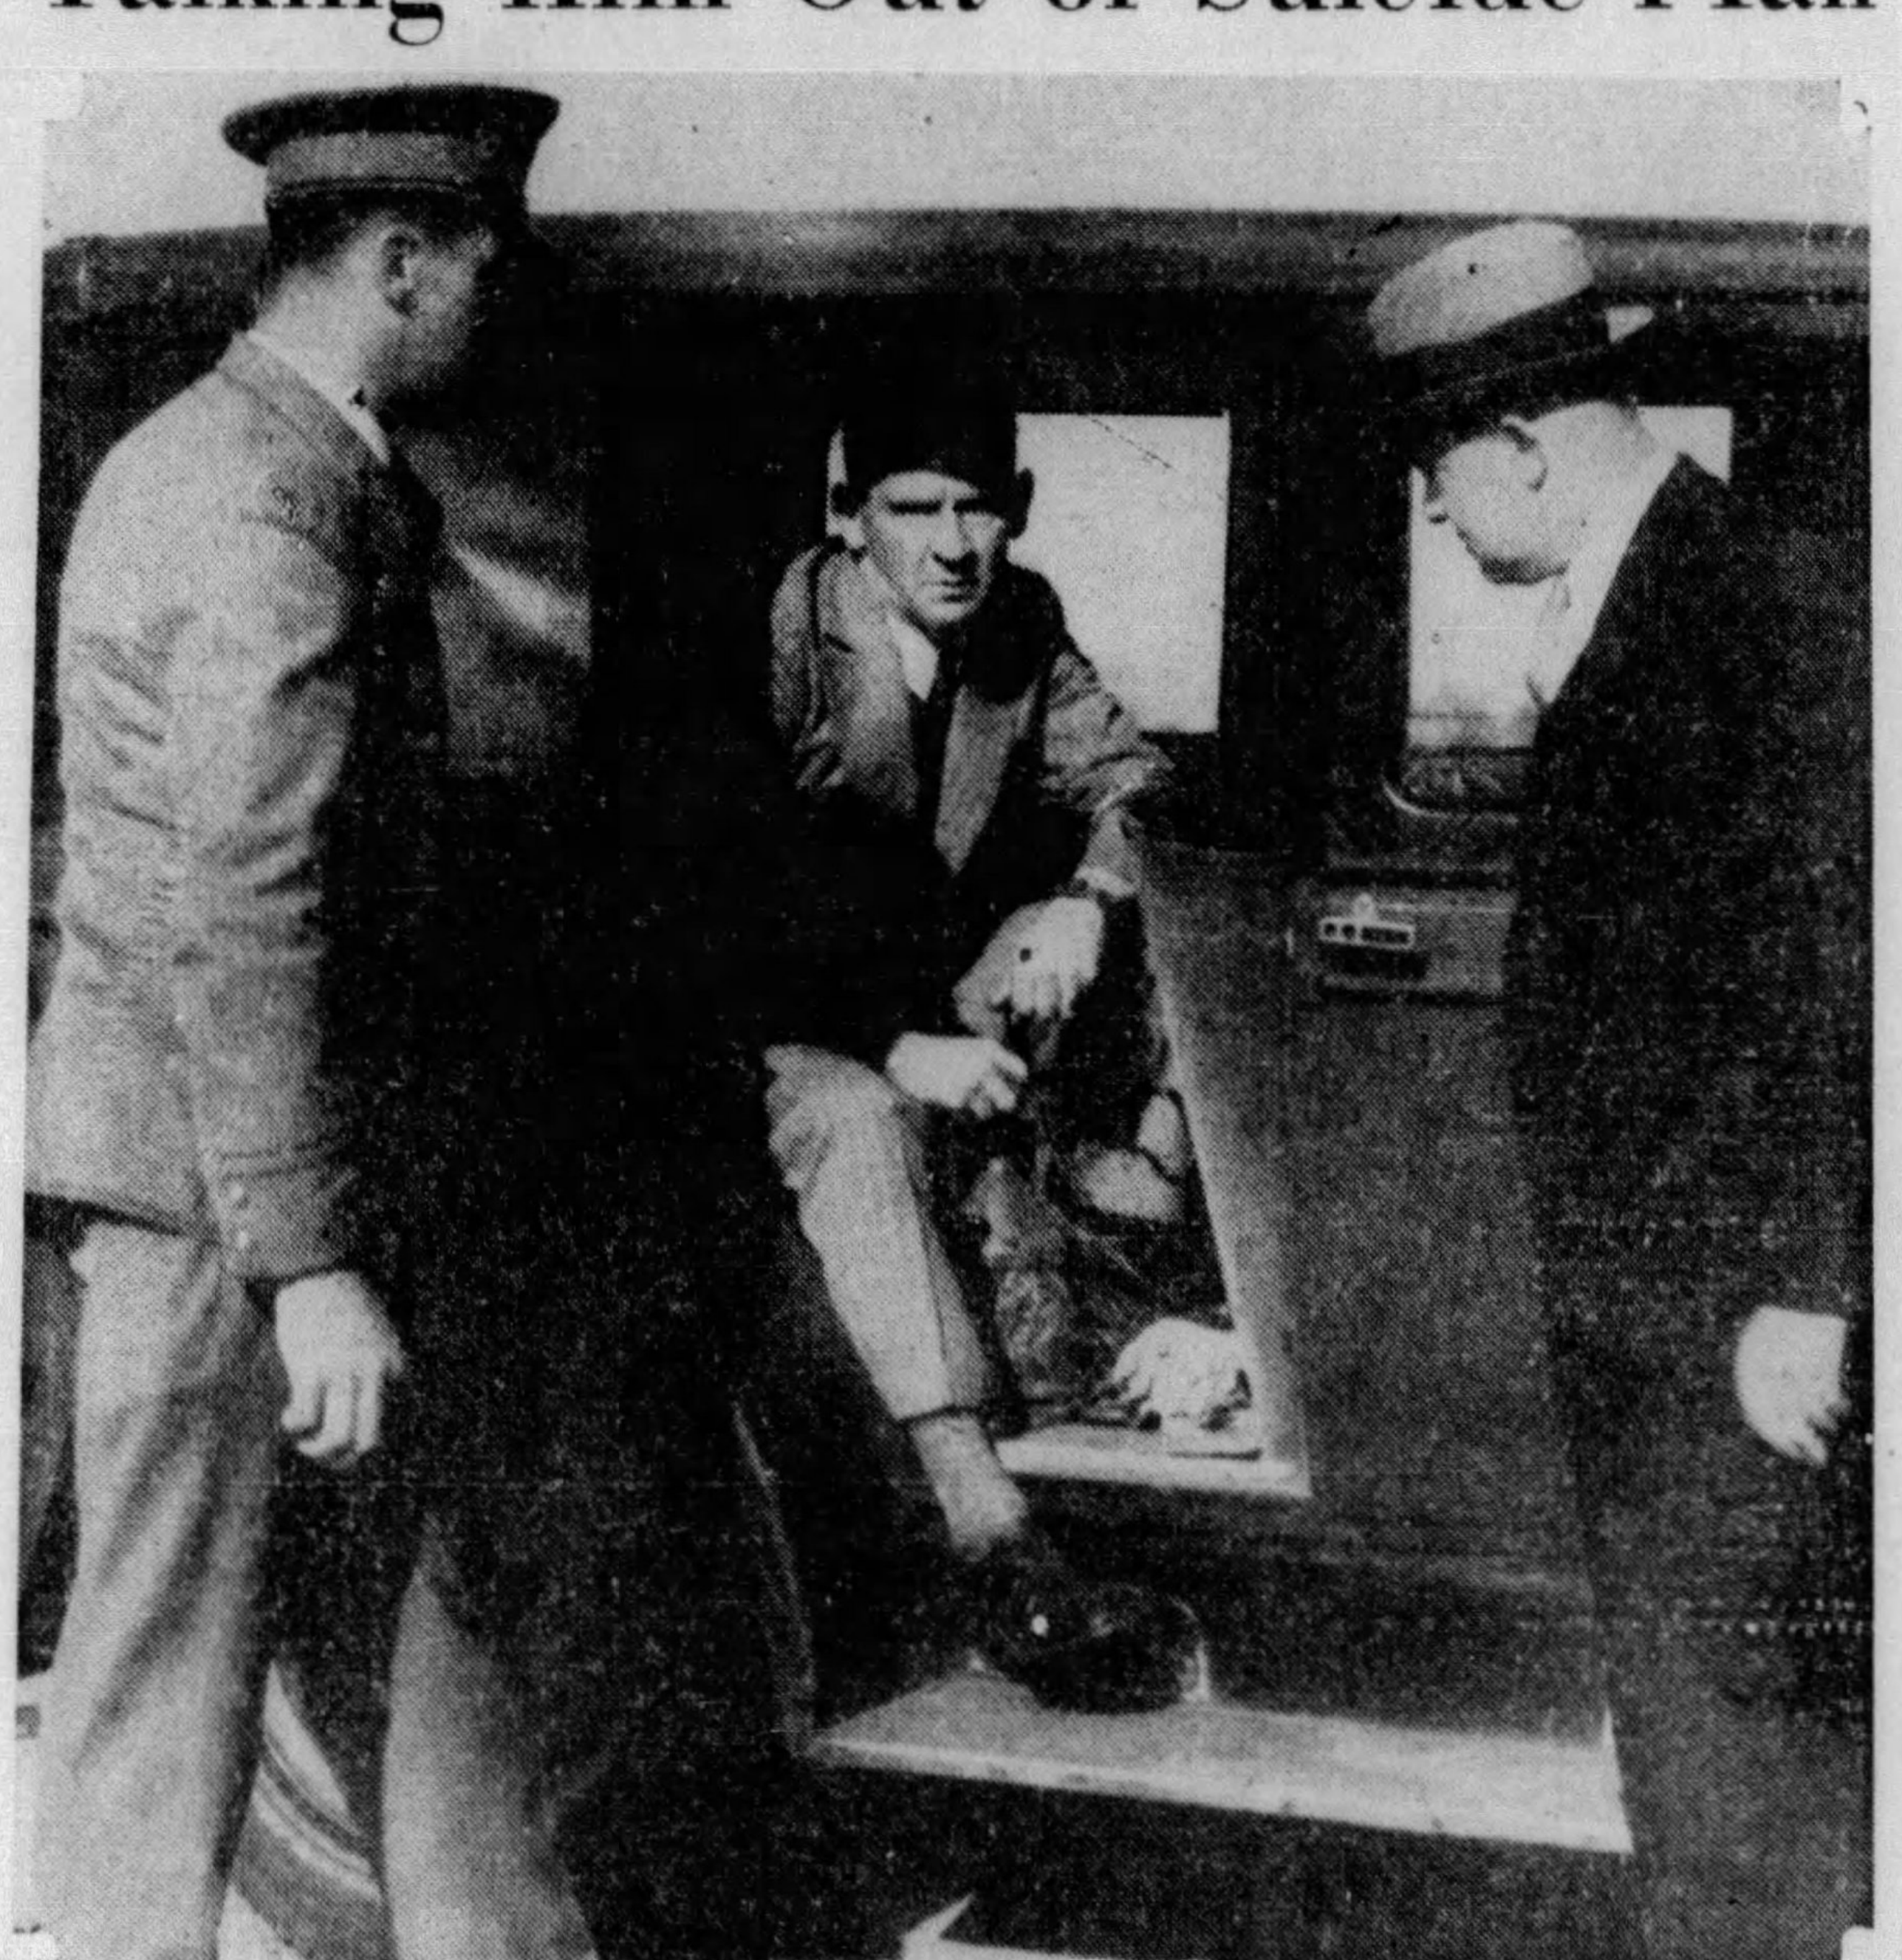
Talking Him Out of Suicide Plan



PATROLMAN JACK BAILIFF FRANK BENNETT INSPECTOR AL ATURZINGER

Policemen using all their eloquence on Mr. Bennett, 42, shell-shocked war veteran, as he sat in his car in Alameda, Cal., and awaited sleep that would cause his hand to relax, thus set off five pints of nitro-glycerine and some 100 sticks of dynamite—which would have blown him and probably much of the district to bits. Police couldn't seize him so long as he held the trigger, convinced him that life, perhaps, was worth living after all, promised him a job and relief aid for his needy family and money. PAGEANT MARKS BIRTHDAY OF GEORGE V.

'Black Beauty' Author Among Canadians Granted Honors

LONDON, June 4.—(AP.)—Leaden skies, a biting east wind and more than a suspicion of sadly-needed rain, made an incongruous accompaniment today to the stately pageantry of the official celebrations of the King's sixty-ninth birthday.

The actual birthday anniversary Sunday was spent by His Majesty quietly at Buckingham Palace, the aged but still vigorous Duke of Connaught, former governor general of Canada, being one of the first callers to offer his congratulations. Princess Victoria, sister of the King, King George of Greece and the Grand Duchess Xenia of Russia were among the visitors.

KING CHEERED

To the cheers of thousands the King rode from the palace to the Horse Guards' parade to take the salute at the famous ceremony, trooping of the colors. His Majesty wore full dress scarlet of the colonel-in-chief of the brigade of guards, with the blue ribbon of the garter across his breast.

Behind him rode the Prince of Wales in the uniform of colonel-in-chief of the Welsh Guards, the Duke of York as colonel-in-chief of the Scots Guard, and the Duke of Gloucester in his Hussar uniform. The Earl of Harewood, husband of Princess Mary, followed in the grenadiers' uniform, the Earl of Athlone in Hussar uniform and the Duke of Connaught in the uniform of the Scots Greys.

In Plymouth Sound 22 ships of the home fleet assembled for the celebrations, providing the finest naval spectacle seen in the cradle of English seamanship since the war.

HONORS AWARDED

Dr. Frederick Grant Banting, research worker who gave the world the insulin treatment for diabetes, was made a night commander of the Order of the British Empire. The aging Charles Edward Saunders, former Dominion cerealist and discoverer of four famous varieties of wheat, was named a knight bachelor.

Science and literature bulked large in the Canadian section of the list. Dr. Duncan Campbell Scott, a noted poet and former superintendent of Indian affairs, was made a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and Miss Margaret Marshall Saunders, author of "Black Beauty" and "Beautiful Joe," horse and dog stories for children that have been read the world over, a commander of the Order of the British Empire. Miss Saunders received her honor for service to the Canadian Humane Society. She has made lifework of teaching kindness to animals.

MILLEN PAL'S DEFENSE RESTS

DEDHAM, Mass., June 4.—(AP)—The defense of Abraham Faber, on trial with Irving and Murton Millen for murder, rested in Dedham Superior Court today after Faber had completed his cross-examination.

Under examination by District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing, Faber denied he had ever said that Murton Millen would "fake insanity," but admitted he had said he would "get even" with Joseph Millen, father of the other two defendants, for calling him a "sap."

Faber and the Millen brothers are charged with the slaying of Policeman Forbes McLeod in the robbery of the Needham Trust Company February 2.

Bagby, Rail Head, Dies in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, June 4.—(AP.)—George Poindexter Bagby, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, died in the Union Memorial Hospital here late yesterday. He had been a patient there since an operation for a stomach ailment on April 14.

Bagby, who was 54, was promoted to the presidency of the railroad in 1930, after the death of President Maxwell C. Byers.

NOTRE DAME PRESIDENT DIES

Educator Recognized For Championship Of Athletics

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 4.—(AP.)—Father Charles L. O'Donnell, for almost six years president of Notre Dame University, died early today from a streptococcus infection which had incapacitated him for more than a year.

Father O'Donnell's last public appearance was exactly a year ago today when he appeared at the 1933 commencement exercises and presented the Golden Jubilee Laetare Medal to John McCormack, famous singer. The 1934 commencement was held only yesterday.

The Rev. John F. O'Hara, appointed vice president of the university last July, will serve out the remainder of Father O'Donnell's term as acting president.

Priest, educator and poet, Father O'Donnell had an important part in the life of the University here for many years, first as a student, then as a professor and later as its president.

He was a native Hoosier, born in Greenfield on November 15, 1884.

When the United States entered the World War in 1917, Father O'Donnell accompanied the expeditionary forces as a chaplain first to France and later to Italy and Austria.

Notre Dame experienced her greatest period of physical expansion during Father O'Donnell's administration, adding eight large beautiful buildings and a great stadium to the campus. Father O'Donnell was a close friend of the late Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame's football coach, and as president of the university won national recognition for his championship of intercollegiate athletics as part of college training for men.

KILLS CRIPPLED SON AND SELF

International News Service.

NANTICOKE, Pa., June 4.—Unable to bear the suffering of her crippled 13-year-old son, Mrs. Mary Kocaj shot and killed the boy, Theodore, and then ended her life with the same gun.

So police today reconstructed the tragedy from the pathetic note asking forgiveness the mother left behind. It read:

"I am responsible for this. I can't understand religion. I was no good to my husband or children. I can't look at my crippled boy suffering. Forgive me."

Theodore, stricken with infantile paralysis when he was a child of 2, lingered for several hours in the Nanticoke State Hospital but died Sunday morning.

For 11 years the mother's hope had been sustained by the belief that medical science would yet straighten the twisted limbs of her son. Saturday night her hope died.

London Spoofs Barbara's $1,000,000 Tummy Ache

LONDON, June 4.—(AP.)—Maybe, London society speculated today, the "affair Mdivani" was something of a molehill made into a mountain, after all.

All seems harmonious between Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani and the Georgian prince she wed a year ago in Paris, despite reports that a split between them was what sent her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn L. Hutton, rushing to London to act as peacemakers, possibly to return Barbara to America.

The frail young heiress has left a clinic and is in seclusion in a London hotel with Prince Alexis. London circles called her illness a "million-dollar stomach ache."

Mr. and Mrs. Hutton want to take Barbara, who only recently completed a world tour with Prince Alexis, to Austria on a shooting trip. She, apparently, is undecided whether to accompany them.

In any event, Alexis, captain of the polo team "Les Diables," has indicated he will stay here to play in a series of matches.

125,000 Visit Fleet, N. Y. Resumes Fetes

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—The fleet today faced a comparatively quiet time after a busy Sunday, in which 125,000 visitors went aboard various ships.

Not until night was the round of social activities for officers and enlisted men to be resumed.

Heading the list of scheduled entertainments was a ball at the Waldorf Astoria for benefit of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's clubs for unemployed girls.

The New York Newspaper Women's Club will entertain fifty officers of the fleet at another function, and the Hotel Pennsylvania, opening its roof garden, will entertain the captain and 24 officers of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania.

Police estimated that 100,000 persons who tried to board the 90 ships of the fleet yesterday were turned away.

The first serious accident in connection with the fleet's visit took the lives of a tugboat captain and his 7-year-old daughter by drowning in the Hudson river.

The father, James Hallowell, 27, of Staten Island, was attempting to rescue the child, who slipped from the tug when a door blew open.

STEEL HOLIDAY THREAT STIRS NRA ACTION

mid-June unless demands were met.

But Tighe said yesterday at Pittsburgh that he would stay home—that he expected Gen. Johnson to present the union's case to President Roosevelt.

Last week, spending several hours with Tighe, Gen. Johnson obtained an outline of the labor grievances and issues involved.

It was expected he would sound out the employer executives on their attitude before deciding what could be done to avert the walkout called for June 16.

CLASH OF STATEMENTS

The steel masters in New York issued a statement through the American Iron and Steel Institute saying the union wanted the mills closed to all non-union labor—which, they said, would be unfair to employes who didn't want to join an organization affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Tighe, in Pittsburgh, denied the union ever made any absolute demand for the "closed shop" and said he would issue a counter-statement to the institute's charges later.

The union leaders claim violation of the collective bargaining provisions of NRA and demand reopening of the revised steel code.

Tighe said he expected Johnson to present the union's demand to President Roosevelt. The Chief Executive returned today from his trip to New York and New England.

Tighe's comment that he proposed to stand on the demand of the union backed up his declaration Saturday that the workers had placed the responsibility for warding off the threatened strike squarely up to Mr. Roosevelt and Johnson.

Labor, he said, looked to the administration to support what it construed to be an NRA guarantee of the right of collective bargaining on wages and hours.

OTHER SIDE OF FEUD

On the other side, the American Iron and Steel Institute charged in a formal statement issued in New York that the strike threats were due to activities of workers' leaders who sought government intervention "to maneuver themselves into positions of power and dominance over the steel workers of the nation."

The institute statement asserted only one point was at issue—"the closed shop." Agreement to this, said the institute, would be "treachery" by the employers, because it would "force the employes into the union in most cases against their wishes."

The administration prepared to bring its conciliatory powers into full play in the steel trouble directly after a peacemaking victory in the cotton textile industry.

Late Saturday, Johnson succeeded in bringing the cotton textile workers and manufacturers into an agreement, and a strike called for today was called off pending a study by the government of the whole situation, not only of the workers' wage and hour demands, but the interrelated question of production and demand.

TIGHE DENOUNCES ATTACK ON UNION

M. F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, described as "a bedtime story" a charge of the American Iron and Steel Institute that the union leaders are seeking power.

Tighe, saying he would make a complete counter statement when he receives the full report from the institute, added that the institute's assertion was a reiteration of "the same old charges." He added:

"They can't point to a single instance in the Amalgamated's history where there has been an absolute demand for the closed shop.

"Our organization has existed and will continue to exist as a voluntary membership group. They are making a grave error in trying to make people believe our group is arbitrary. All we ask is collective bargaining."

With "company union" elections scheduled for this month in practically all the principal plants, officials of large companies were watching the outcome closely as indicating to what extent the men are standing by their plant unions.

Officials of large companies pointed out that in the first reported election in Steubenville, O., 92.6 per cent of the employes participated and no one voted for any "outside union" men. Steel leaders are hoping these election results will lend great weight to their argument in the labor controversy, it was learned.

Steel Institute Scores Strike Threat Leaders

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP.)—The American Iron and Steel Institute charged last night that strike threats in the industry are due to the activities of union leaders who seek government intervention "to maneuver themselves into positions of power and domination over the steel workers of the nation."

In a formal statement, the institute asserted relations of steel companies and a great mass of their employes are "peaceful," and that the whole difficulty lies with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The "closed shop" is the one point at issue, the statement says, and for the employers to "accede to such a request would be rank treachery."

The statement, in part, follows:

"The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers has presented to various steel companies demands for recognition of the union and has threatened a strike if its demands are not met.

"Although the overwhelming majority of the 430,000 employes in the steel industry have refused to join the union and have evidenced their desire to bargain collectively through their own employe representation plans now in effect, the union seeks the exclusive right to speak for all employes and the union is receiving attention in Washington and in the press entirely out of proportion to its importance.

"There is only one point at issue—the 'closed shop.' The by-laws of the Amalgamated Association require the closed shop. This means that employers would be required to permit only members of the union to work in the steel mills.

"To accede to such a request would be rank treachery on the part of employers since it would force the employes into the union in most cases against their wishes, and compel every employe to pay tribute in the form of union dues for the right to work.

"The employers in the steel industry will make no agreement that denies to their employes, whether or not they are members of the union, equal opportunity for work and advancement.

"The great majority of the employes in the steel works do not want to strike and the companies will co-operate in every way possible to enable them to remain at work.

"The union leaders have attempted in public statements to convey the impression that employers in the industry have denied their employes the free right of collective bargaining. Such is not the fact.

"The industry has been a leader in the development of the modern method of collective bargaining, in which the employes participate without discrimination. Under employe representation plans, representatives may be union members if the men so choose.

"The employe representation plans recognize a community of interest between employes and employers. They substitute peaceful negotiation for conflict and bring about a mutual association of men and management in solving their problems for the common good.

"The opposition of the steel industry to the closed shop is fully warranted by its own experience and that of other industries, where there have been many instances of jurisdictional disputes, strikes, racketeering, excessive dues, fines, penalties, limitation of output and intrusion of agents having no acquaintance with the industry or with the employes whom they claim as their constituents.

30-Hour Week Urged For Hosiery Workers

READING, Pa., June 4.—(AP.)—As a remedy for overproduction and a means of eliminating price-cutting and wage reduction, a 30-hour work-week is advocated for the hosiery industry by the national executive committee of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

By resolution, the executive committee, meeting last night in advance of today's opening of the federation's twenty-third annual convention, urged the reduction in hours with increase in the pay scale to counterbalance the cutting of 10 hours from the present schedule.

TOLEDO STRIKE END LOOMS

TOLEDO, O., June 4.—(AP.)—Sanction of a tentative agreement for settling the strike of automotive workers in three Toledo parts factories was expected today.

The proposal which the executive committee of the automotive workers' federal union said was approved by a "substantial majority" Saturday night in a vote by the union membership, was submitted yesterday to the Electric Auto-Lite council, which strikers have called a "company union."

It was reported unofficially that the peace plan embraces a 5 per cent wage increase with a minimum rate of 35 cents an hour (the union had asked a 10 per cent increase), recognition of a union committee for collective bargaining and an apportionment of jobs first to employes who refused to strike, next to strikers and lastly to workers hired after the strike began.

CHAMBER GROUP SEEKS POWER

A change in the by-laws of the Chamber of Commerce providing the executive committee may act for the board of directors in emergency matters will be voted on at a meeting of the chamber June 12.

Under the proposed change, the committee could act even if a matter of policy is involved and report its action to the board. Another amendment would eliminate the provision that standing committees shall consist of not less than five members.

HOSPITAL UNITY STEPS URGED

Abraham Oseroff, director of Montefiore Hospital and newly-elected president of the Western Pennsylvania Hospital Association, today urged co-ordination of the program of hospital service through joint planning and action by the hospitals.

Oseroff pointed out that a paradox exists. He said that owing to financial difficulties hospitals with half of their beds unoccupied have been forced to limit their services to non-paying patients at a time when widespread unemployment has led to a greater need for health service than ever before.

The hospital chief called for a study of the problem of tax support in the financing of hospital service to indigent patients.

Tug Strike Spreads Through Lake Ports

MILWAUKEE, June 4.—(AP.)—Tugboat service in the Milwaukee and Port Washington harbors is at a standstill today, with tug and dredge operators striking in sympathy with affiliated unions in other Great Lakes ports.

Union leaders said union tugmen, firemen and dredgemen were demanding an eight-hour day instead of a 12-hour day and a definite labor contract.

TAX BOND LAW VIOLATED BY COLLECTORS

Although more than a score of tax collectors in boroughs and second-class townships are violating the law through failure to file bonds with the clerk of Quarter Sessions Court, officials are unable to remedy the situation because the law governing the filing of bonds lacks a penalty for violation.

Samuel J. Topley, Clerk of Courts, today said that approximately a score of tax collectors have failed to file bonds in his office to cover the township and borough taxes collected during their term in office. He pointed out that bonds must be filed as soon as the collector ascertains the amount of taxes he is expected to collect. The law, however, does not state what should be done with the collectors who fail to file.

Collectors can only be forced to file bonds through action taken by taxpayers in the community the collector is working. If taxpayers bring the matter before the Court of Common Pleas, the judges have the right to force the collector to put up the necessary bond.

Collectors of school taxes must file their bonds with the local school boards and the collector of township taxes in the first-class townships must file bonds with the board of township commissioners. Clerk Topley pointed out that the law governing the filing of bonds is similar to that governing the filing of auditors' reports in his office by the elected auditors of boroughs and townships.

Here again the law states that within 30 days after the auditors complete their check of the borough, township and school board accounts, they must file a copy of the report in his office. The Clerk of the Courts, however, does not have the power to force the auditors to obey the law. Once again it is up to taxpayers in the community to take exceptions to the work of the auditors and appeal to the courts.

Although it is not his duty, Mr. Topley has many times sent letters to collectors and auditors urging them to file bonds and reports in compliance with the law.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

There has not been enough rain for many weeks. The grass is dry, the crops in the fields are becoming less; even the trees are losing their green beauty in some parts of the country.

The Pittsburgh district, luckily, has not suffered so much as some of the Mid-Western states, but it is bad enough. To keep your lawns nice and to have new grass grow, and flowers, we have had to water them almost every day.

Maybe your mother or father is trying to grow a lawn or flowers in your yard and garden. Could you help them by watering them with your garden hose? Why not ask your father or mother?

With hot weather really here now, fellows, we want to caution you about the hot sun. Don't go bareheaded in the sun too long, or you may have a sun stroke.

Also, you want to be careful about sunburn. If you swim—and we hope every Junior Patrol member does—you may be going into the water for the first time outdoors this year. Your skin is tender—without any tan. If you let the sun shine on it, you may burn your whole back and arms. Even if you don't get sick from sun-burn, you may be burned so badly that your skin will blister and peel off. That wouldn't be much fun, would it?

Get your sun tan gradually, by just letting the sun shine on you a little at a time.

But speaking of being careful in hot weather, we know one man who is plenty cool. He is Admiral Byrd at the South Pole. It's a curious thing but the bottom part of the world, or southern part, down in Antarctica, around the South Pole, has winter while we are having summer. And so, Admiral Byrd and his crew are living in a very cold country, and the blizzards are blowing there, colder and colder.

Please write and tell us, fellows, where you would like to go for a vacation this summer. One summer we went for a cruise on the great lakes and we are going to write and tell you what we saw and did on that trip. And another summer we visited Yellowstone Park, where there are great geysers and beautiful hot springs and mountains and fields of beautiful flowers, all colors.

Hilles Now Mystery Figure Behind G. O. P. Meet

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The big figure at the Republican reunion in Chicago today will not be Mr. Hoover, Mr. Saunders, Ogden Mills or any other of the publicized figures of the party.

It will be a barely mentioned elderly gentleman who hates publicity, Mr. Charles D. Hilles, of New York.

Mr. Hilles has been found asleep at very few political switches during the last 20 years.

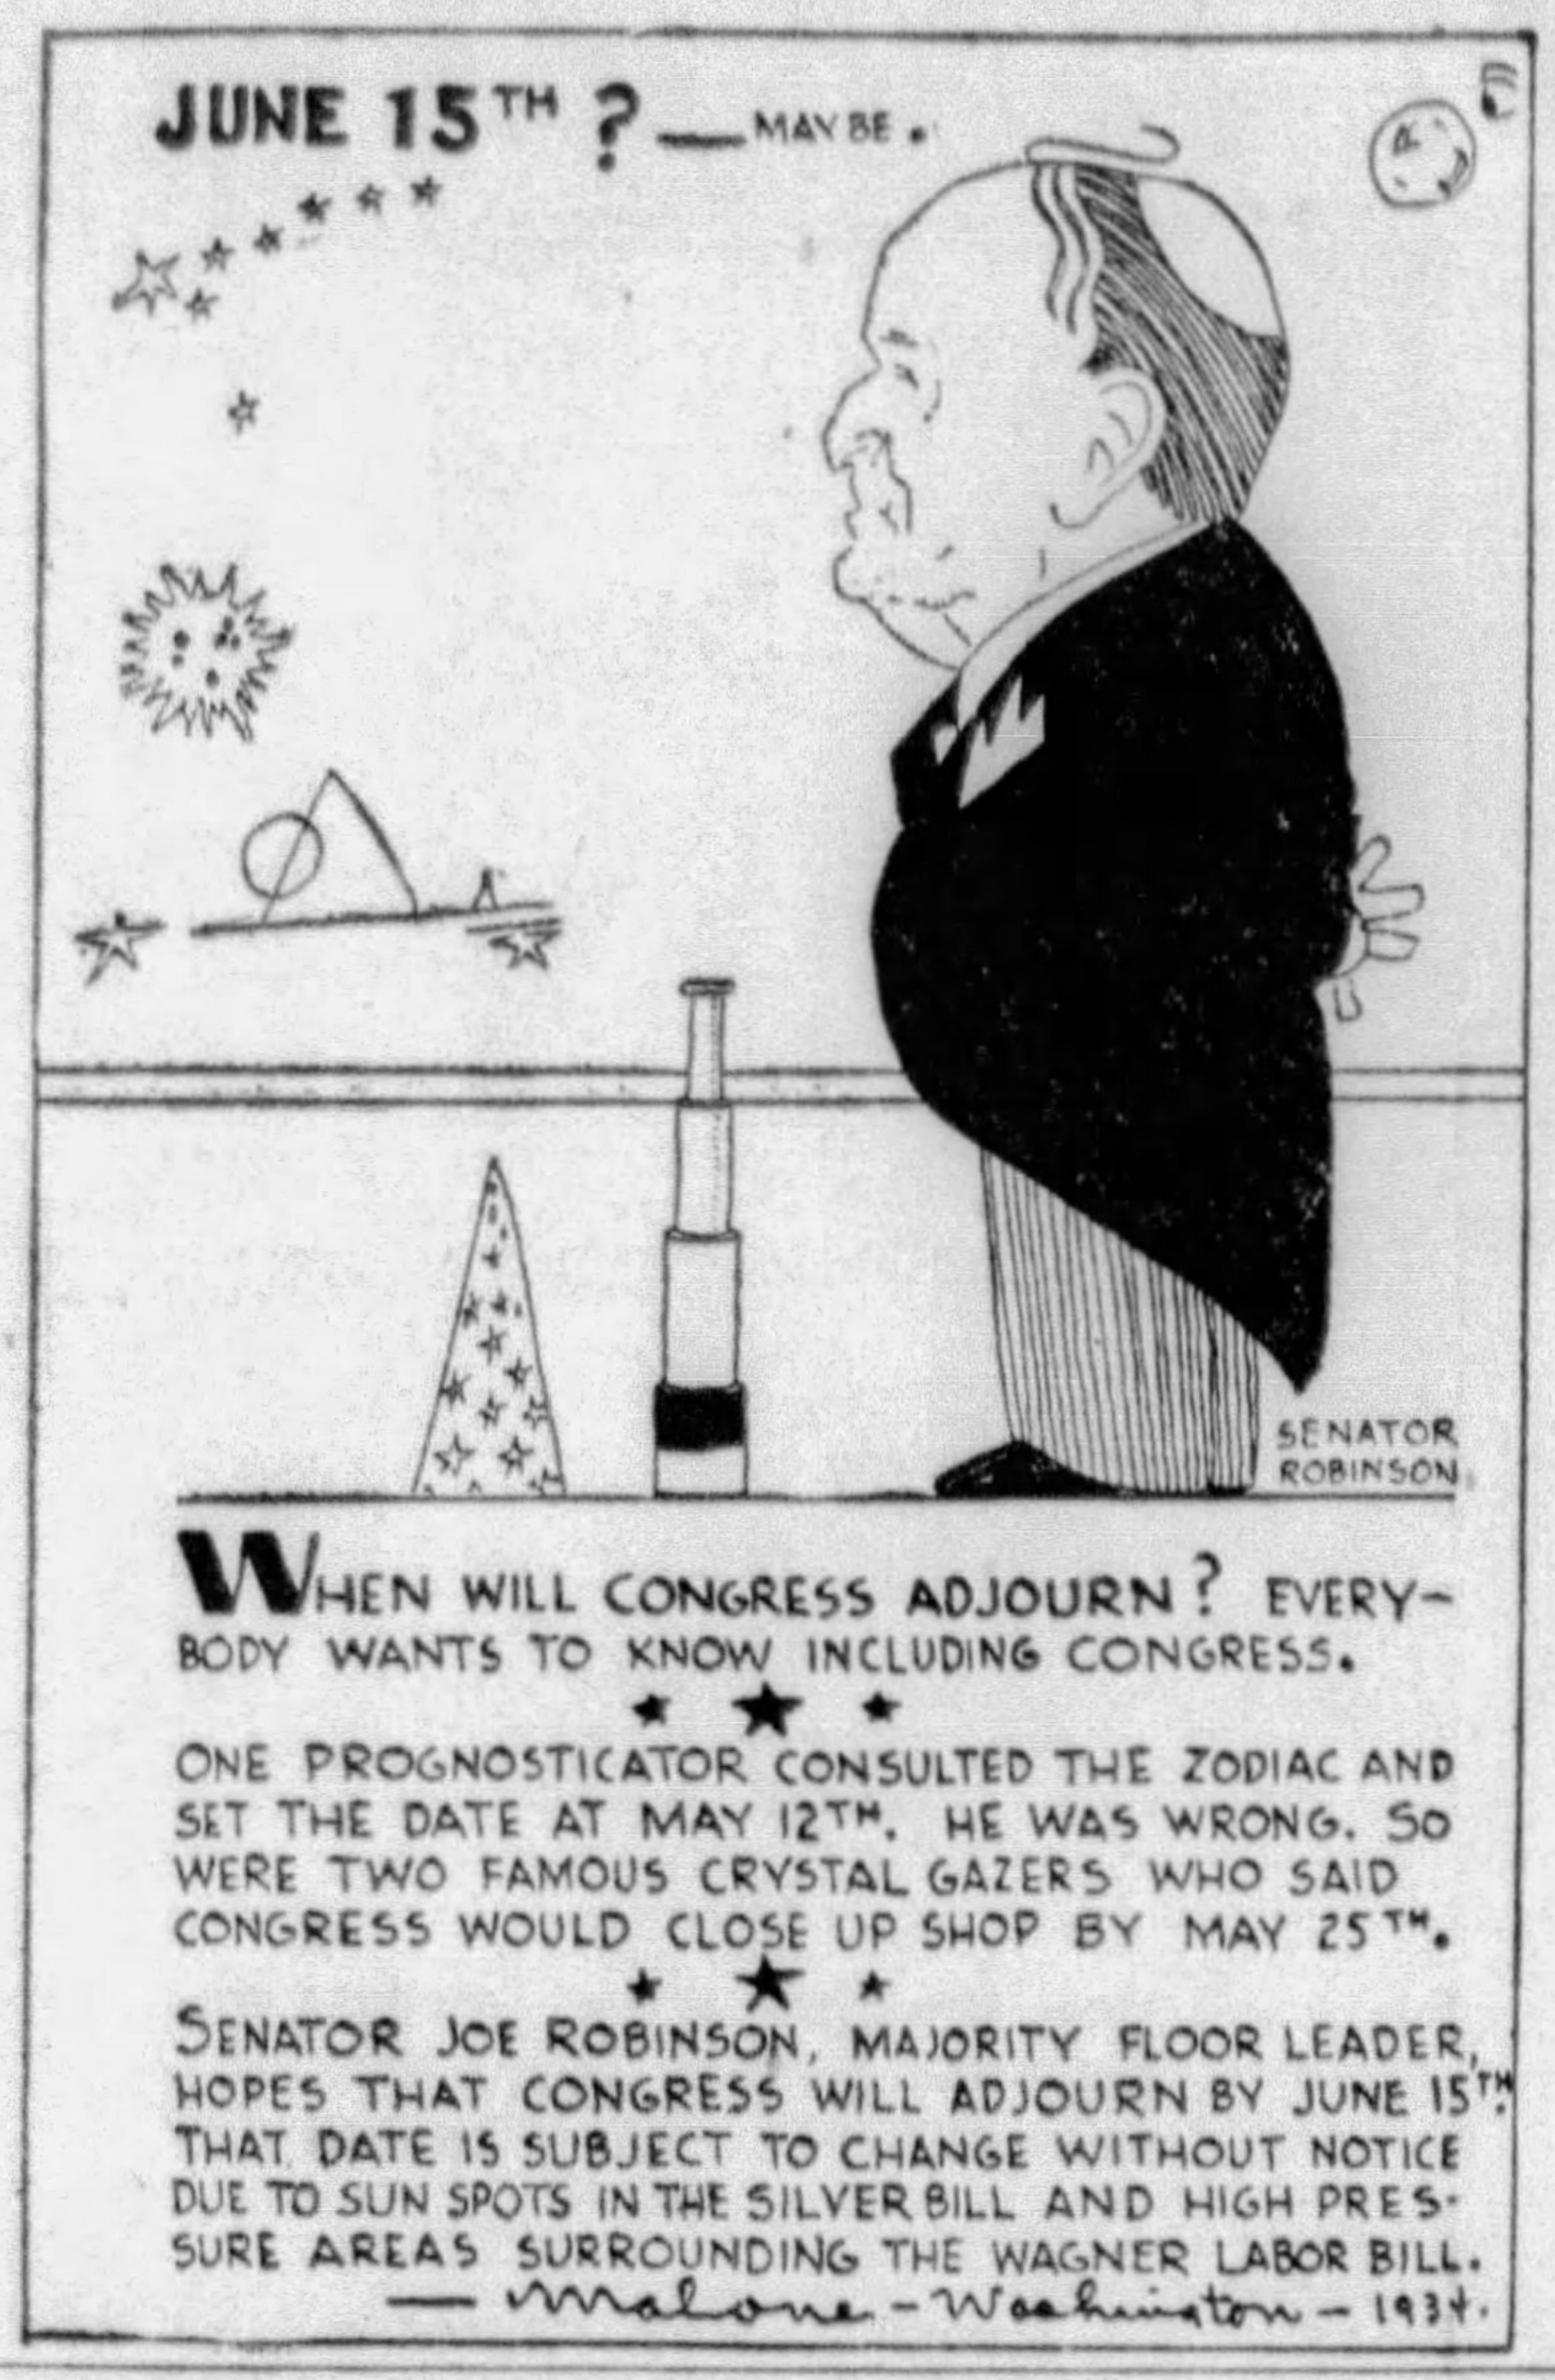
Some months ago, Mr. Hilles bought an extra supply of stamps and began writing letters around the country. His innocent purpose was to get the views of national committeemen and women about a new national chairman and other party matters.

Soon, he had established a mutual correspondence understanding with nearly every national committeeman and woman.

CANDIDATES

This state of affairs was discovered by the party insiders when they started out a few weeks ago to organize the national committee for election of a successor to Saunders. They found Mr. Hilles played his game carefully, as he always does. He had no candidate of his own. At least, no one was ever able to find out that he had one. But he expressed in his correspondence some very vigorour views about who should not be chairman of the national committee.

In short, Mr. Hilles turned thumbs down on about half a dozen aspirants who were trying to get support from committee members. In this (nearly everyone seems to agree), Mr. Hilles had no personal feelings, but was working for the best interest of the party.



JUNE 15TH ?—MAYBE.
SENATOR ROBINSON
WHEN WILL CONGRESS ADJOURN? EVERYBODY WANTS TO KNOW INCLUDING CONGRESS.
★ ★ ★
ONE PROGNOSTICATOR CONSULTED THE ZODIAC AND SET THE DATE AT MAY 12TH. HE WAS WRONG. SO WERE TWO FAMOUS CRYSTAL GAZERS WHO SAID CONGRESS WOULD CLOSE UP SHOP BY MAY 25TH.
★ ★ ★
SENATOR JOE ROBINSON, MAJORITY FLOOR LEADER, HOPES THAT CONGRESS WILL ADJOURN BY JUNE 15TH. THAT DATE IS SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE DUE TO SUN SPOTS IN THE SILVER BILL AND HIGH PRESSURE AREAS SURROUNDING THE WAGNER LABOR BILL.
— Malone - Washington - 1934.

NAMES

Some of the readers of Mr. Hilles' mind have an idea he would be pleased by the selection of either West Virginia Committeeman Hallanan, or Henry Fletcher, of Pennsylvania. Both fit the requirements of money and common sense, although they lack a publicity value which would go well with the job.

Textile Mills Not Excited Over Strike

Also three dark horses are supposed to have bobbed up in Mr. Hilles' correspondence. One is from Illinois, another from Nebraska and a third is supposed to be from Missouri.

1936

It is too early for anyone except Republican politicians to talk about presidential candidates for 1936, but they talk a good deal about it in an off-hand way.

Coming to the fore in their discussions is Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan. He is young, makes a good appearance and is a sharp campaigner. Unqeustionably, he will be a leading candidate.

TEXTILE STRIKE

The textile mills are not excited about the threat of a strike. They have been begging the NRA to cut down their production schedule 40 per cent for the next three months because they are heavily over-produced.

GLASS

Life is just one thing after another for Senator Glass. His physician, Admiral Grayson, ordered him to cancel several engagements down in Virginia because of his health. For once, Glass followed the doctor's instruction. Then the good doctor insisted on dragging Glass off to a prizefight here to make certain that Glass relaxed. Radio announcers spotted Glass and broadcast his presence all over Virginia. News photographers spied him and snapped his picture. Now Glass is trying to explain to his constituents. He would stage a prizeless fight of his own with his good friend, the doctor, if he were able.

HARMONY HOPE OF MARTIN IN PARTY TANGLE

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 4.—(AP.)—Gen. Edward Martin predicts the meeting of the Republican State Committee Saturday will be "entirely harmonious."

He made this statement last night when asked to comment on reports that he may be replaced as chairman of the committee.

Martin said he was at a conference over the weekend attended by United States Senator David A. Reed and Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican gubernatorial nominee. Martin added:

"All I can say is that everything is working out smoothly."

Martin denied he is a candidate for the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee. He said he rejected such proposals "some time ago," explaining he could not afford such a position.

Mark Shields, in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, said yesterday that both Martin and Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, may be replaced before the November elections.

Democratic leaders refused to comment on the subject.

SLUM PARLEY TO MEET HERE

Representatives from the housing and planning departments in Washington and Harrisburg are to attend a conference on slum conditions in Pittsburgh to be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in the Irene Kaufmann Theater.

The conference will be under the auspices of the League for Social Justice here.

The meeting will take up ways of ridding the city of slums. Speakers will include George E. Evans, superintendent of the City Bureau of Building Inspection; Frederic Bigger, of the City Planning Department; Joseph Tufts, of the Pittsburgh Housing Association; Sidney A. Teller, of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement; David Goldner, Pittsburgh architect; Mary J. R. Condon, of the Family Society, and Eleanor Webster, social worker.

E. N Montague, of the Bureau of Business Research, will preside.

Bowman to Get Degree at U. of P.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—(AP.)—Harlan Fiske Stone, associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, is one of three men who will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws at the University of Pennsylvania's commencement exercises, June 20.

Dr. John Gabbert Bowman, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, and Dr. Ralph Dorn Hetzel, president of the Pennsylvania State College, are the other two.

Sharpsburg Schools To Picnic Tomorrow

Two thousand public and parochial school children of Sharpsburg will picnic tomorrow in Kennywood Park. Children from St. Canice's parochial school also will picnic. In charge will be Vincent F. Olszewski, secretary of Sharpsburg schools; J. J. Donovan, supervising principal, and the Rev. J. C. Fitzpatrick, of St. Canice's.

Committeemen See 'Dark Horse' As G.O.P. Leader

CHICAGO, June 4.—(AP.)—Republican committeemen, gathering here to choose a chairman for their own national recovery drive in 1936, predicted the selection of a "dark horse."

The national committee meets tomorrow to elect a successor to Everett Sanders, of Washington, former Indiana Congressman, who resigned because of ill health.

Walker J. Kohler, former Governor of Wisconsin, and James A. Watson, former Senator from Indiana, are two of the Republican stalwarts most frequently mentioned for the job.

George Getz, Chicagoan, national treasurer and a new face among the powers-that-be in the party, says he expects at least 90 committeemen to be present when the gavel falls. This would leave no more than a dozen voting by proxy.

Among those suggested for the chairmanship are Col. Theodore Roosevelt, New York, son of the former President and a former Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Col. Hanford MacNider, Iowa, former national commander of the American Legion and erstwhile Minister to Canada; Walter F. Brown, Ohio, former Postmaster General; Walter E. Edge, New Jersey, one-time Senator and former Ambassador to France, and Henry P. Fletcher, Pennsylvania, past Ambassador to Italy.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Girl Deeply in Love, but He's Never Proposed

Desperately in love, and yet the man never mentions MARRIAGE.

And it isn't Leap Year, either.

Her parents filled with the fear that they have an OLD MAID on their hands, and jog her a bit about this fellow who calls so often.

These two of an older generation do not realize this JACK hasn't popped the question. They take it for granted a shadow that crosses their lawn so often must be something permanent.

Miss Brunot

Two other young men have asked her to be their wife, and they have the ear-marks of being good husbands, too. But the girl's heart is all for JACK . . . She says she would be willing to live in a BARN with him . . . but he hasn't mentioned that barn. . There are plenty of them in Connecticut, too. Half of the Village folk in New York live in them in the summer.

WANTS TO TRAVEL

But the thing is, the fellow's ambition is to TRAVEL. He's one of those rolling stones that doesn't want to gather either MOSS, or a WIFE.

And so this Speak Up Sister asks me if she is WASTING HER TIME.

I wonder, sometimes, if it is ever a WASTE OF TIME to LOVE. I ponder over the thought of whether it ever is giving up too much, when the soft wings of Cupid flap right at our ears . . . Life is well worth losing for genuine heart emotion, the poet says . . . And then, too, there is always hope knocking . . . Maybe tomorrow, he will be more in earnest. Perhaps next week he will be in the frame of mind, to long for the church aisle and the bridal bouquet.

'TRAVELER' OFTEN SETTLES

I'd wait a little longer, R. F., for Jack . . . The traveling man, who takes his trips only in fancy, sometimes settles down to a small apartment and an everyday street car ride . . . I have known young people who never thought in less than 3,000-mile jaunts, who never got beyond their state's limit.

The man who has a hunch that he will see the world isn't so bad . . . He has imagination . . . he has an eye for distances . . . he isn't commonplace, nor a slow-poke.

And that may be what you like in this Jack of yours . . . and so in time, if you keep on loving and being faithful, you may win him . . . For the imaginary wanderer often ends by holding tight to a ballast . . . and if you like the job, you might as well be it.

ON ROAD TO WIN

Dear Miss Brunot:

Again I am asking for your kind advice. This time it is about a young man in whom I am very much interested. For years I have disliked him, and during the time he paid attention to me. But I was still in my 'teens and didn't care to be bothered. Gradually I have learned to like him, and this year I have become deeply interested in him and his friends.

He has been keeping steady company for several years with me? Occasionally dating some one else, though. My friends say he treats me differently, though. I have never tried to interfere with him and any other girl. We both are in our early twenties.. I have tried to interest myself in others, but they fade out of the picture and he still remains.

As I am an eager reader of your column, I am anxious to have your help. DUB.

I believe you are on the right road to WIN this young man. Just keep on going at your even gait, and you will LAND him. He has been faithful for so long, that I feel assured he intends to remain so . . . If you feel uncertain, however, a little interest in another fellow might make him declare himself . . . To do this, you must work with care. For it isn't every man who sees such a performance in the right light . . . Sometimes he thinks you MEAN it, and quits.

LET PAST REST

Dear Miss Brunot:

I read your column careully every day. But none of the problems you have settled, quite settles mine. You see, I go with a certain fellow, and have gone with him a number of years, but he never took me seriously until about a year ago.

He is a friend of the family, and before he took me seriously, I went out with another fellow. I was only 17 at the time. He made considerable love to me, and I reciprocated. Now I am sorry, and want to know if I should tell this serious beau of mine. Please help me. MISS.

When a man marries a girl he scarcely tells her everything in his past, and so I cannot see that it is advisable for a girl to do so . . . Love at 17 is not the same sort of affection a girl experiences when older . . . It is the same with a man . . . and often things that have gone are only dead and buried when they are not mentioned . . . One's day by day actions, one's faith and helpfulness, one's love as it is now . . . these are the important things, sister.

Of course if this PAST of yours burdens you, and you cannot have peace of mind without a confession, then you had better tell your boy friend. However, remember, men are the SENTIMENTAL SEX . . . They are also the ones who build on DREAMS where the one woman is concerned . . . and it is up to the girl to keep them in this state of bliss.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Exception to the Rule

Inasmuch as there are 635,200,000,000 possible bridge hands, it is obviously impossible to lay down rules that will apply to all possible holdings. Rules regarding bidding are made to apply to a vast majority of hands, but every now and then a deal comes along which requires exceptional treatment.

In the hand below the South player was faced with an exceptional situation after his partner had made an Opening bid and the player on his right had made an Overcall. However, an application of logic to the bidding situation should point unerringly not only to the proper response on the first round of bidding but to the future bidding as well.

The hands were:

♠ J 10 9 6 5 3
♡ A K J 7 4
♢ 8
♣ 9

The correct bidding of this hand is:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♢	3 ♡ (1)	Pass
3 ♠ (2)	Pass	4 ♠ (3)	Pass
4 NT (4)	Pass	6 ♠ (5)	Pass
Pass (6)	Pass

1—Ordinarily 3½ honor-tricks are required for a Forcing Takeout, but South has singletons in both diamonds and clubs and has magnificent support for his partner's bid suit. Hence, although his hand contains but two honor-tricks, he should make a Forcing Takeout.

2—North is perfectly safe in showing the rebiddability of his spade suit. It is a better call than four clubs.

3—While South would like to bid more, after all there is a possibility of losing at least two tricks unless his partner can take further action.

4—Assured now of support for the spades, North feels a greater interest in the hand and makes the conventional Slam try, which shows two Aces and the King of a bid suit.

5—By bidding six spades, South denies that he holds both remaining Aces but indicates that he has a hand of Slam calibre.

6—North now knows that there is a trick off the hand somewhere and hence does not bid a Grand Slam.

Obviously the contract of six spades is easily made, the only trick for the opponents being the Ace of diamonds.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending out wedding invitations to persons related to you, such as an uncle and aunt, who have grown up children living with them, is it proper to send one to the uncle and aunt and one to each of the cousins, or is it better to address one invitation to Mr. and Mrs. and family? The wedding is to be held at a synagogue and is to be informal. M.

The best form for sending formal invitations is to send one invitation to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morris, and a separate invitation to each adult who is to be invited. If this means too many invitations to be considered, the next best thing is to send one invitation to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morris, one to

or
Miss Mary Morris
Miss Anne Morris
Miss Jane Morris

and one to

The Messrs. Morris
or
Mr. Walter Morris
Mr. Henry Morris

Don't ever address an envelope to . . . and family. This form is taboo, for this so-called "blanket" form of invitation does not give enough compliment to individual members.

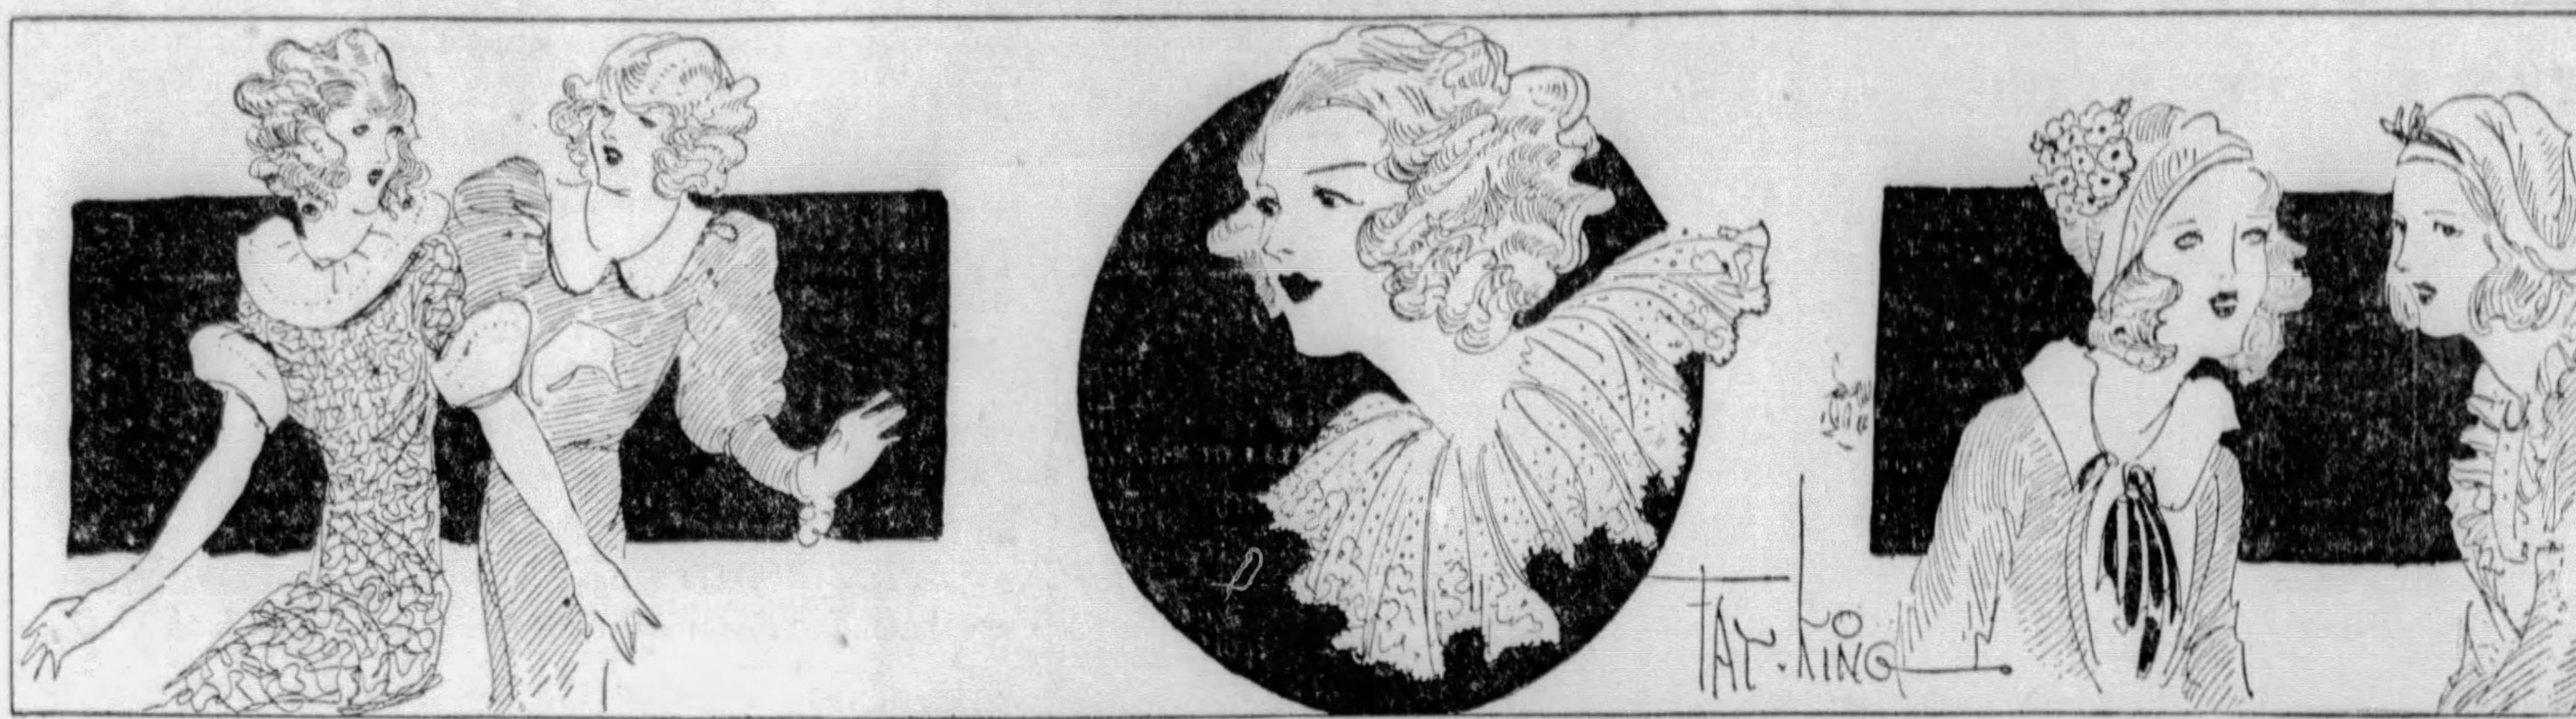
RETURN OF FRILLS MAKES GIRLS NATURAL, FAY KING OBSERVES



By FAY KING

Curls and frills are back in style again with a vengeance, and it certainly is nice to see girls looking like girls again.

It was dreadful, sometime ago, when one would look across a dining room and for the moment could not tell whether a young man or a young woman was sitting at the table over by the palm.

Severely tailored clothes are difficult, even for the prettiest and most feminine girl to wear becomingly.

It's nice to be a girl and have the privilege of indulging all one's inclinations for bows and laces and ruffles and fluff, and why any woman ever wanted to discard them is more than I could ever understand.

I'd rather be out of style than out of frills and laces.

Given in Marriage :: A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Avis Proves to Be Window-Tapper

The rain tapping on the window was more fraught with terror for me than a revolver shot would have been. Why should anyone wish admittance from the balcony outside the nursery, and how, except in the improbable manner Lillian had conjectured, could anyone have gained access to the window upon which we were still hearing the faint taps?

Was it a trap, an ambush? Had Lee Chow succeeded in eluding my father? I felt myself grow cold all over at this last thought, and was roused only by the sudden plunging of the room into darkness as Hugh again switched off the light.

There was no assuaging of my terror by his action, for I reasoned that if Hugh were taking so elaborate a precaution, there was a sound excuse for alarm. But I mentally echoed his disgusted anathema as from outside the window came Avis Arlen's voice saying plaintively:

"Please let me in. I'm so frightened!"

"My sainted aunt and her stepchildren!" Lillian exclaimed. "What next?"

For answer Hugh switched on the light again, and looked at Lillian and me oddly.

AVIS SWOONS

Lillian looked at him with suddenly dancing eyes, which showed her relief from the uneasiness that had gripped us at those faint tappings.

"What's the matter, Hugh? Afraid to face the fair enemy?"

Not a muscle of his face changed, but I though I caught a gleam of amusement back in his eyes as he answered inscrutably:

"Perhaps! You never can tell. I really think you would better admit the lady."

"That's oke by me, pal," Lillian said with her gamin grin, and on the word went to the French windows, undid the bars with which my father's super caution has provided them, and threw them open.

Avis Arlen was so close to the other side of them that she stumbled and would have fallen into the room if Lillian had not put out a hand to steady her.

But beyond a perfunctory "Thank you," Avis paid no attention to Lillian. Her eyes roved quickly around the room until they located Hugh, and then she ran straight to him. With outstretched hands that clutched his coat, she slumped against him in an apparent swoon that gave him no choice but to catch her in his arms to save her from falling.

He looked over at us with helpless, astonished eyes that tugged at my laughter muscles and, I was sure, at Lillian's as well. That he was unversed in the wiles of designing young women was plainly to be seen as he looked helplessly from Avis' pale face and limp figure to Lillian and me.

"Why; she's fainted!" he said weakly.

HUGH EMBARRASSSED

"Yes, that's a little habit of hers," Lillian said caustically. "She pulls it at every opportunity."

"But," Hugh stammered, "what am I to do with her? Oughtn't we to try first aid or something.

I could not believe my ears. Hugh Grantland, always poised, imperturbable, ready for any emergency—Hugh, babbling like an embarrassed school boy! Then I realized that the combination of Lillian's gibes, my presence and the effrontery of Avis had combined to rob him of his usual composure.

For it was effontery, this apparent swoon of Avis, I was sure. She was shamming; I would have taken my oath upon it! But I could not tell Hugh of my conviction.

"What am I to do with her?" he asked again, and this time there was a hint of impatience in his voice. He probably considered us criminally unconcerned, I told myself.

"If you consult the lady's wishes," Lillian drawled, "you'll stand there holding her until she makes up her mind to come out of the ether. But as it's usual to put a swooning person on a couch, bring her over to this one. I'll thrown some cold water on her. It will spoil her make-up, but it will bring her to most effectually, I promise you."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Styes Won't Return If Cured

Dr. Copeland.

That you must have a stye every seven years is an ancient belief. It is no longer accepted by the majority of people. Yet I frequently receive an inquiry as to what measures can be taken to prevent the seven-year appearance of this disagreeable condition.

It is important to make sure that the inflammation and infection caused by the stye have been overcome. Once this is accomplished and ordinary hygienic measures are followed it is probable there will be no immediate recurrence of the stye.

A stye is an infection in the root of an eyelash or of the nearby tissue in the margin of the lid. Usually it can be traced to the lack of cleanliness, or to rubbing the eye with dirty fingers or a soiled handkerchief. As a rule the victim of a stye is in a rundown condition because of lack of sleep, improper food or some chronic disturbance.

The first sign of trouble is redness of the eyelid. The inflammation spreads and within a few days the whole lid is swollen and inflamed. Soon there is a yellow, tender spot. This is in reality a tiny abscess of the lid.

The abscess may rupture and evacuate the pus. When this happens the pain and discomfort subside. Within a few days the lid returns to normal size and appearance.

Unfortunately, not all styes disappear so easily. As a rule the swelling persists and the pain increases.

I can think of no more simple and efficient treatment for styes than the application of hot boric acid solution. This should be repeatedly applied to the eye with soft, sterile gauze. The heat localizes the abscess and causes it to come to a head.

At night apply an ointment of 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury to the margins of the infected eyelid. Cleanse the eyelid with warm boric acid solution upon arising in the morning.

Never rub your eyes with your fingers. Do not use a soiled handkerchief to wipe your eyes. If you read a great deal or feel you have overtaxed your eyes have them examined. Find out whether you need glasses. Avoid eyestrain and keep your eyes clean and you will escape styes.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Bright moments for a dark blue frock or suit are easily achieved. Just add a hat, blouse and gloves in blue tie with white polka dots, or a similar set in red tie-silk with white or blue dots.

A colorful career awaits the fox, since his fur is being dyed in every color. A new evening cap has bands of white fox alternated with fox dyed a deep blue. A similar cape uses beige fox, with bands of rose-colored fox. The fur is worked in garland form.

Just like mother in her smart shirtwaist frock, little sister is wearing a frock also made on shirtwaist lines. These charming frocks are made with the same care and detail, and are available in tie-silk or in cottons, usually, in striped color combinations.

Theft of Letters Explains Kevin's Long Silence

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

Pippin repeated slowly: "You know what happened?"

"Yes. Kevin wrote to you. The letters were stolen."

Pippin looked at Kathleen with amazement. "Stolen? Did he say he wrote?"

"No—but—"

"Ridiculous! All that went out of date with Nana!"

"Perhaps—but it was for stealing letters Paula Meade was booted out of the house. She stole my letters. I caught her at it. I never dreamed she'd also taken yours. You didn't say you missed any. But of course, from the moment Colleen made her admit you wrote the play, it was YOU she wanted to get.

"While you were south with Bill, I noticed her snooping about the mail boxes. One day as I came upstairs, I saw her standing at the rack. She took letters, stuck them in a book and glanced stealthily up and down the hall.

"When I found my box again empty and a long overdue letter from Scotty not arrived, I was suspicious. I watched her all evening. At 12 o'clock I saw her making for the backstairs. She wore her kimono and carried a book. I woke up Colleen. We tip-toed after her. Surprised her in the kitchen steaming open a letter.

"She tried to run. She sprang like a cat when we flashed on the lights, then quickly threw papers into the gas flame. I grabbed them out. She fought with me. Said they were hers. And she'd come downstairs to make a cup of tea! She was cold.

"Colleen said to her, 'Must you steam open your own letters? And why do you make tea in the dark?'

Letters Stolen

"The letters were from Scotty to me. She swore they were the only ones she had taken; no others as far as we knew, were missed. She was told to leave the house. But as it was so near commencement and no real harm—so we thought—had been done, we agreed not to talk of it . . . But it's perfectly clear now that she stole Kevin's letters."

"No, it isn't. He may not have written."

Pippin said flatly: "It doesn't matter."

She went to her room after Kathleen was gone. She felt shaken and drained. Would this explain his long, cold silence?

She stood at the window watching the twilight drift through the Golden Gate. It came with wistful quiet. Colors faded in the sunset sky; the burning sea turned amber. She watched until the hills went down in purple mist and only a ripple of fire edged the clouds.

As she turned, she heard Kevin speak. She saw him standing at the door and wondered if it were the trick of a dream.

They regarded each other with eyes locked. Then he came quickly and took her hands.

"I've just been talking with Kathleen. She drove down to see me. Did you really not receive letters from me, Pippin?"

"I heard from you in the beginning. Only then."

"You wrote me a letter saying it was your last. I airmailed an answer the very night I received yours. Did you receive that, Pippin?"

"No. Nor any. I never heard from you at all after that."

Wrote Many Times

"You could have written again!"

"I did. I wrote you long and completely. That last letter of yours made me suspicious. I guessed you had heard rumors. I wanted no mistake on your part as to my intentions. I told you just where I stood. I left nothing to your imagination."

"Why would I not answer such a letter as that!"

"That's what I wanted to know. So I wrote again. This was in the first week of May. I asked you to wire an immediate answer. It was very urgent."

She felt tears stinging and kept her head lowered.

"Won't you look at me, Pippin?"

"Oh, why?"

"Just for old time's sake. Do you care now whether I wrote or not? Do you want me here?"

"Yes."

"But you are angry and silent. You would not be if you knew what was in those letters. I asked you questions you would fail to answer only if you wanted to be through with me, Pippin."

"Could you not know something must be wrong?"

"How could I guess my letters would be stolen? One letter might go astray. Not three or four. I knew you were well. I found out about that. Then I wrote a last letter. It wasn't very sweet. But you would know how deeply I cared. I said you must answer at once or I would know your feeling had completely changed. I would cease to trouble you. Of course, you didn't reply. Then came the word of Bill's death."

"Is this his ring?"

"Yes. How did you know?"

"It was in the New York papers. When no word came from you I concluded the report of your engagement was true. And it was Bill, after all, that you loved."

"How could you think that, remembering all I said, unless you judged me worthless and false?"

Told of Hildegarde

He folded his hands over hers: "How were you judging me, Pippin, in all these silent months?"

She tried to lower her head, but he raised her face with his hand and made her meet his eyes.

"Don't be angry with me, Martha."

"But even at commencement you didn't write! I thought surely I would hear then."

"I know how you felt because I have felt the same. You wrote once demanding an answer and received none, apparently. I wrote four times demanding word. I had no pride about it. But I couldn't keep on and on intruding."

He held her close in his arms and now looked into her face and faintly laughed: "Don't let us waste any more time! Do the things you promised the night I went away hold true?"

She could not take her glance from his. She said trembling and almost afraid of the silver ripple of joy: "What did you write in those letters, Kevin?"

"In the first I spoke of Hildegarde. I wanted you to have the truth. She did not come to America to marry me, Pippin. In all the time I knew her, there was never a thought of marriage on my part. She was aware of this. She came to this country because her brothers are here. I took her to dinner and a symphony. That's all I saw of her. She has no claim on me.

"No one has but you, Martha. I told you this in the second and third letters. I went away with the thought of you in my mind. I have come home thinking of you—loving you. Do you care for me?"

She closed her eyes and for moments lay motionless against him. She felt her whole life slipping away in a happy dream.

"Martha, do you love me?"

"You know. Too well. I have been weak with worship—always. It is no way for a girl—"

'On Any Terms'

He stooped quickly and stopped the words with his lips on hers. Time ceased. Their two beings flowed together in a strangely perfect, overpowering rythm. She was aware only of the warm, beautiful nearness of his face and his eyes, full of tenderness, fixed in hers.

"Kevin!"

"Sweetheart!"

"Say you love me."

"I love you. I have loved you. All your life, Martha. When you were little, Martha. When I first went away. I half knew, then. I've been afraid. I shouldn't love you. Shouldn't want you. I have nothing. But myself. Is that enough, Martha? I and the future and all you want of love?"

"Enough for me, Kevin?"

"No one else. Will you marry me, Pippin?"

She looked up to him, so tall above her and now so exciting with his intent and darkly shining eyes, his stern young mouth, so warm and tender. She gave a bright, free laugh.

"Our mothers will be so glad!"

"You take me, Pippin? You realize what being a very poor doctor's wife will mean? You will do without things you've always had. You'll—"

"Come second always! Second to you, Kevin, and your work and anyone's broken leg. I'll be left alone nights and nights, and you'll be preoccupied and forget I exist—oh, do I know!"

"Will you take me on these terms, Pippin?"

She reached up to touch his lips. He took her hand in both of his, kissing one by one the tips of her fingers.

"I take you, Kevin, on any terms!"

THE END.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Plastic surgeons of high standing are able to remove small birthmarks. And they find that large ones can be made less noticeable by proper treatment. Moles and warts are easily vanquished. The X-ray will do the business, and there are other means equally safe and scientific.

When a girl is "adorned with all the blooming treasures of youth" it seems ridiculous for her to apply commercial blushes. They make her look older. No synthetic product can compete with the splendor of nature's cheek tinting. But the gals can't see it that way. Besides, the mammas and papas rage about it, and that spurs them on with their portrait painting experiments.

After the teeth are brushed the mouth should be rinsed to free tissues from chemicals produced by food deposits. Men and women who have a gift for collecting tartar on their teeth seldom give sufficient attention to mouth hygiene.

Twice a year the biters should have a thorough going over by the dentist. This practice saves time, money and aches.

What the home shampooer does not realize is that she can get the hair fairly clean with that first rinsing, if she uses a spray, water is fairly hot, current strong enough to knock the wits out of her.

Following the first showering there should be two rousing soapings, two rinsings. Even more sudsings and rinsings if hair is inclined to be fine, stick together and collect oil. Before the shampoo is the right time for a vigorous brushing—50 to 100 strokes.

BANK PAY-OFF BACKERS PUSH HOUSE VOTE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The demand of sponsors of the McLeod 100 per cent bank depositors' pay-off bill for a vote in the House was to be renewed today.

With leaders driving toward adjournment, Representative McLeod (Rep.), of Michigan, urged the measure be brought before the House for speedy determination.

Under a petition signed by 145 members, the McLeod bill is slated to be called up on June 11. An early adjournment would make the action useless.

While Democratic leaders have the power to prevent a vote by virtue of a special rule adopted by the House, they have thus far refrained from using it.

Representative McGugin (Rep.), of Kansas, declared the so-called "gag" rule adopted to break a Republican filibuster was aimed at the McLeod bill and the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing measures.

A petition signed by 145 members also made possible a vote on the Frazier-Lemke bill on June 11. The administration is violently opposed to this measure, which would make possible refinancing of $8,000,000,000 mortgages by "greenback" inflation.

Congress Condemned for Gag-Rule on M'Leod Bill

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(Universal.)—Strong condemnation of members of Congress who suppressed the McLeod bill and passed the House "Gag" rule was expressed at the closing session of the National Depositors Committee here.

Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, and Representatives MacFadden and Strong (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, pledged their wholehearted support to the McLeod bill or a similar measure.

Senator Copeland warned the 10 million depositors in closed banks to elect as their representatives in Congress only those who would be in support of such legislation in the coming congressional elections.

MEETINGS SET

A resolution was adopted unanimously demanding passage by the next Congress of a 100 per cent payoff bill of the nature of the McLeod proposal.

Other resolutions provided for four regional meetings in the next two months to prepare for the battle during the congressional campaigns and in the new Congress and for the creation of an actions committee to push the drive.

The four regional meetings will be held in Atlantic City, Cleveland, Chicago and either San Francisco or Portland, Ore. Clarence H. Mutz, of Philadelphia, head of the Pennsylvania delegation, was made chairman of the actions committee, with chairmen of all local depositors' committees throughout the country as members.

HEARST PAPERS LAUDED

Another resolution asked a congressional investigation of the office of the Comptroller of the Currency in the handling of receiverships and liquidations of closed banks.

Messages were read from 22 governors assuring their backing for a 100 per cent payoff bill.

Charles P. Bloome, of Philadelphia, was re-elected chairman of the national committee, and H. S. Cadallader, of Atlantic City, secretary. A. Mitchell Palmer, former Attorney General, was retained as counsel.

Socialists Start Political Rallies

A series of outdoor meetings by the Hill Top Socialist Club will open tomorrow night in the Grandview Park bandstand. The meeting will mark the opening of the campaign to elect a full slate of Socialist candidates in the Sixth Legislative District. William Adams, David Rinne, candidate for Legislature, and Frank Van Essen, candidate for Congress, will speak.

REPEAL FAILS, SAYS M'BRIDE

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—Six months of repeal are said by F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, to have provided convincing evidence that the various control systems offer no hope for a cure of liquor evils.

Repeal has failed deplorably, McBride said in a statement yesterday, declaring:

"So increasingly tragic are the results that the ignoble control experiemnt is tottering toward collapse."

Conceding that Anti-Saloon League workers were at the last line of defense against repeal "evils," McBride urged them to redouble their efforts to thwart repeal of state and local prohibition laws. He said:

"The saloon is back, with added evils, in New York, headquarters of the repeal movement, and in Chicago, where both the Republican and the Democratic parties made their most solemn declarations and platform promises that the saloon must not come back."

Daughter Willed $66,000 by Mother

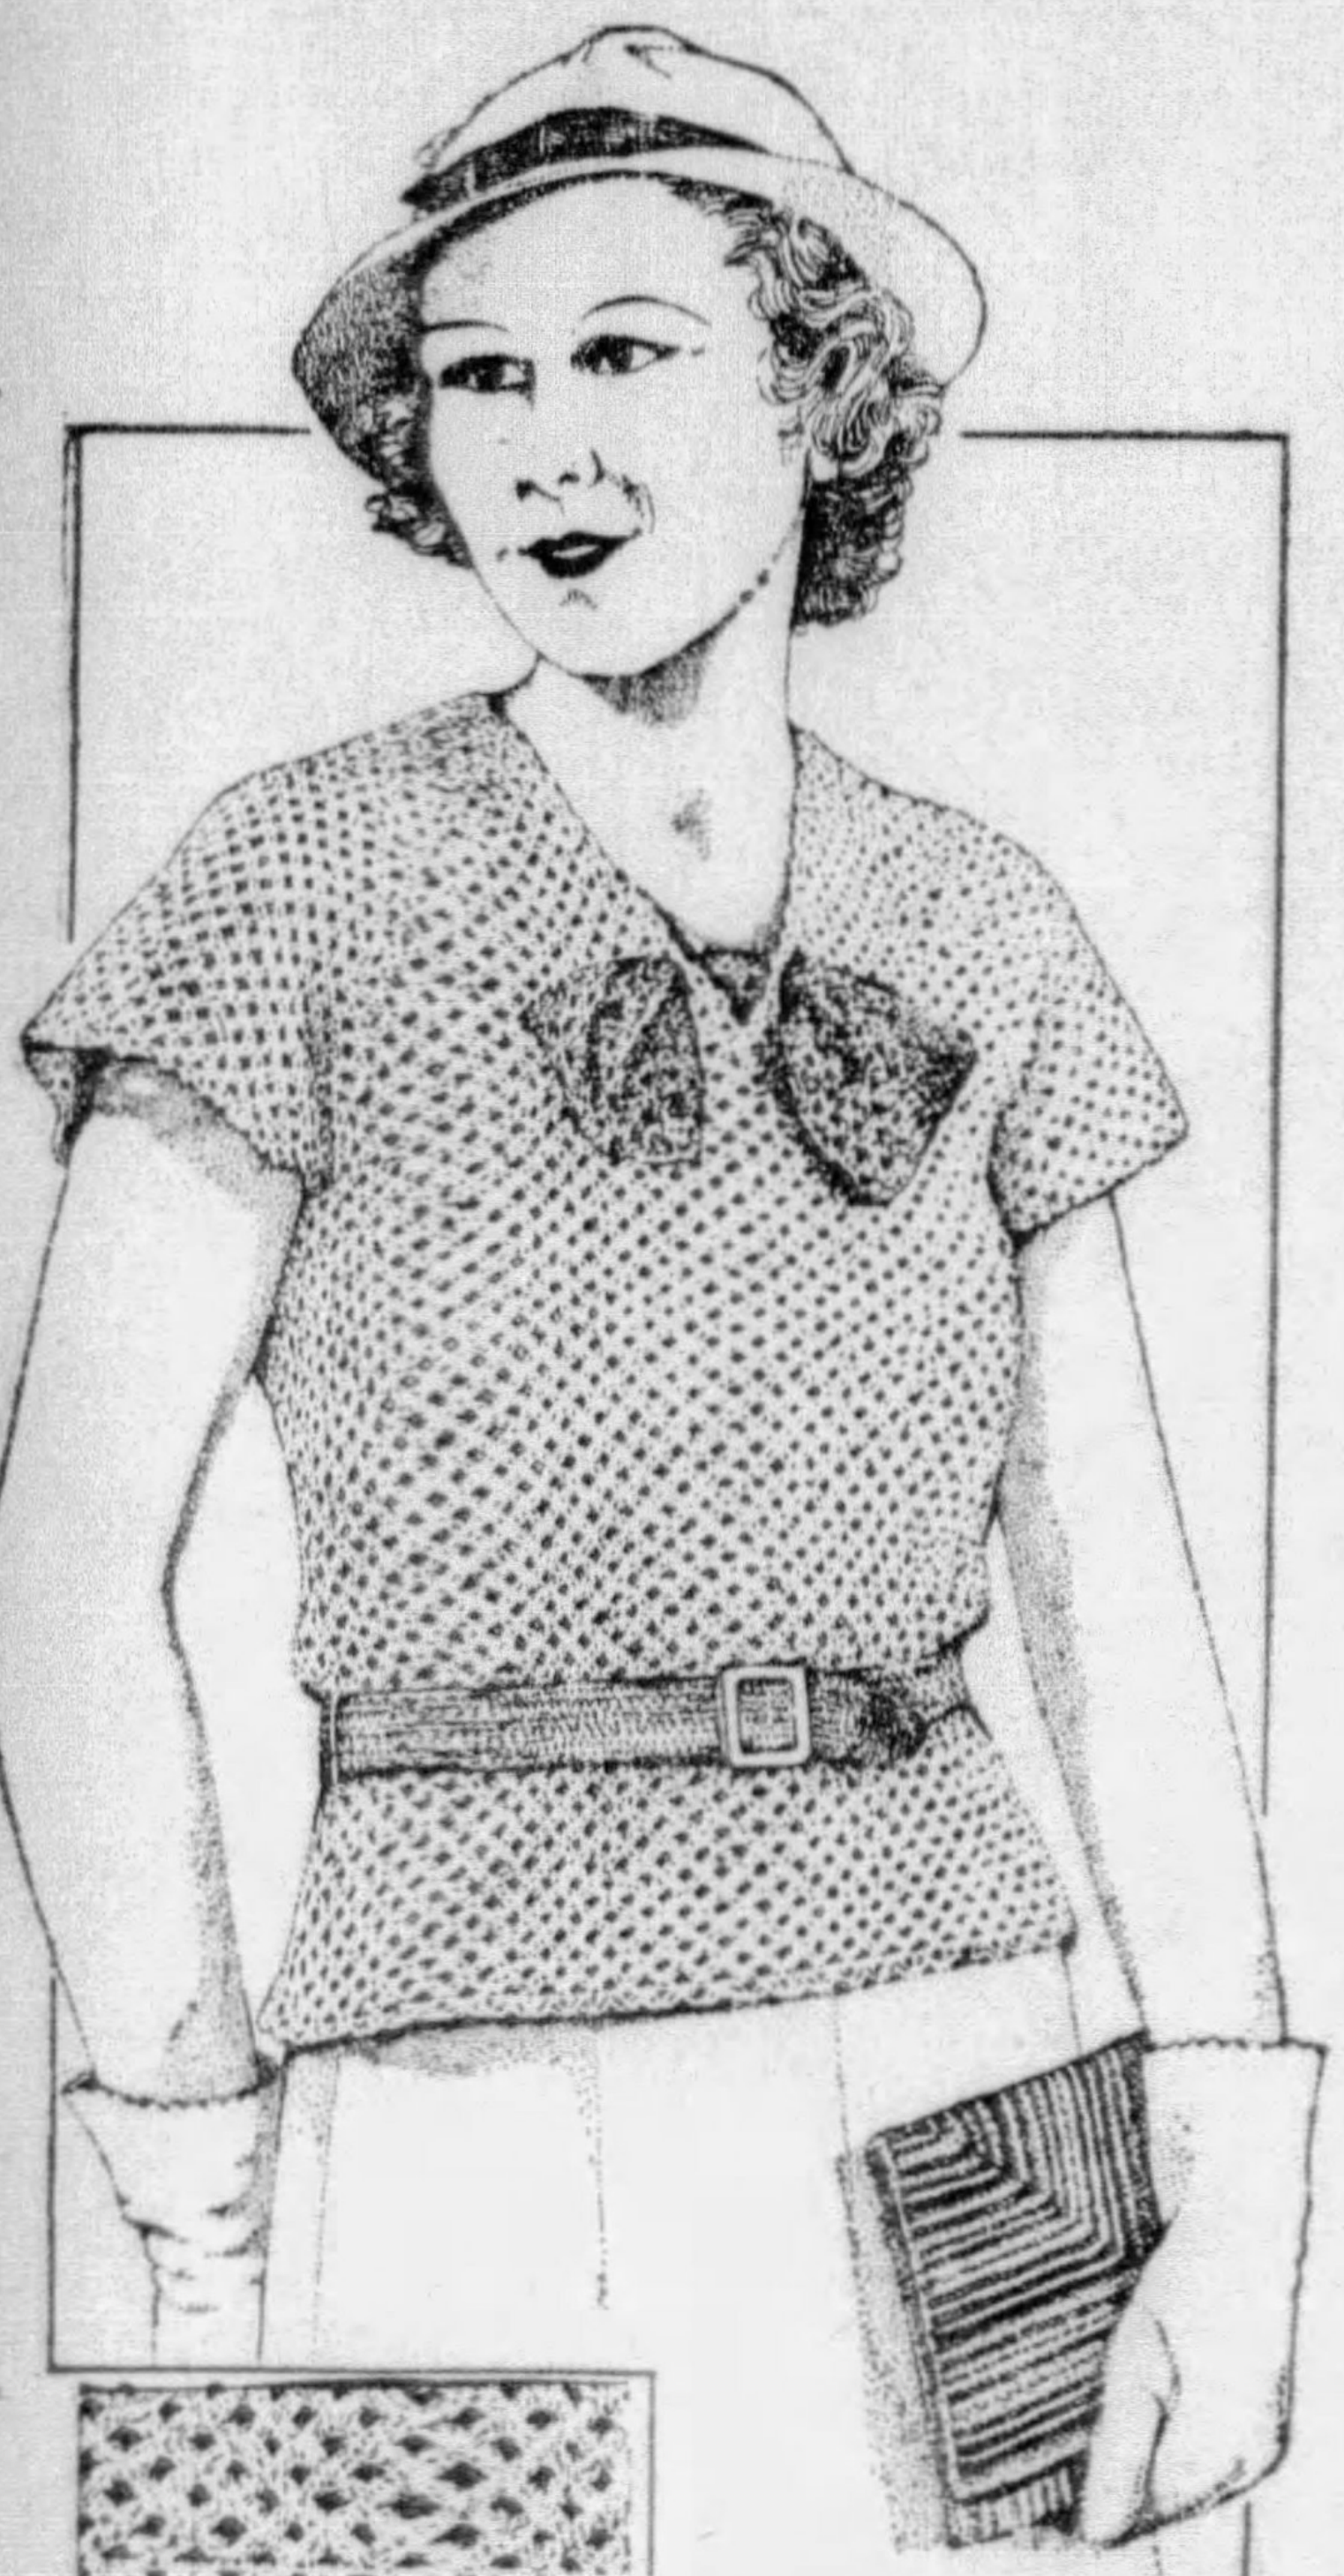
Mrs. Lillian Clyde Armstrong, of 6517 Aylesboro avenue, Squirrel Hill, today was named the sole beneficiary of the estate of her mother, Mrs. Mary S. Davis, who left $66,000, according to the terms of her will, filed today for probate.

Mrs. Armstrong, who also was named executrix, is the wife of James B. Armstrong, Jr., resident manager of Eastman, Dillon & Co., investment bankers.

Hope for 30-Hour Week Vote Fades

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(INS.)—The deadline for completion of a petition of 145 members to force a vote on the mandatory 30-hour week bill for industry on June 11 had expired today and action on the bill appeared unlikely unless Congress continues in session far into the summer.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



STRING CROCHETED BLOUSE AND PURSE
PATTERN 749

String, that most popular of crochet material, is nothing but the ordinary crochet cotton—twine. And it's not only a material that is easy to work with, but one that is the last word in style. This cool sweater blouse is done in a simple lace stitch (shown in detail) that is the same from start to finish. It's equally lovely in the unbleached cotton with a touch of color in bow and belt or in one of the popular pastel shades with a touch of white. The bag has one feature that will endear it to every feminine heart—it goes with every dress. It's made in the unbleached cotton with stripes of every possible color alternating with the white. On the flap of the bag the stripes form an interesting design, meeting each other at right angles.

PITTSBURGH'S ORIGINAL BARGAIN BASEMENT

U. S. DIPLOMAT FIGHTS LEAGUE COURT ENTRY

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Charging that the league court protocol offers no protective guarantees to the United States, J. Reuben Clark, former under-Secretary of State, today vigorously opposed American entry into the court under reservations now before the Senate.

In a lengthy brief filed with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he said the proposed Senate "reservations, condition and understandings" are in conflict with provisions of the "protocol of accession," under which the United States is permitted to become a member. He said:

"From the beginning of the negotiations, America endeavored to isolate the court from the League of Nations and to representation that the two had nothing whatever to do with each other, a representation that is openly contrary to reality."

It is admitted in the record, he added, that membership in the court involves a "legal relation" to the Leagueof Nations and imposes obligations under the Treaty of Versalles. This, he asserted, is contrary to the mandate of the American voters in 1920.

The Senate's third reservation to the protocol, Clark continued, relates to the expenses of the court and sipulates that the United States "will pay its full share of these expenses, as determined and appropriated by Congress." There is no such provision in the "protocol of accession" now submitted to the Senate for approval, he pointed out. In case of disputes, the court will fix the amount to be paid toward court expenses, Clark asserted. He continued:

"With reference to the Senate's fourth reservation, it may be noted that the protocol of accession provides that the United States may be expelled by a two-thirds vote of the contracting states. As it would appear that no provision is made from the expulsion of any other signatory there is a discrimination against the United States."

DAVIS DELEGATE TO NAVAL MEET

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Appointment of a delegation to represent the United States at the forthcoming preliminary naval discussions in London was announced today by Under-Secretary of State Phillips.

Ambassador Norman H. Davis, America's disarmament authority, heads the delegation. He will be assisted by Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh and Commander Theodore Wilkinson. Both naval officers are members of the American delegation to the Geneva conference, but are now in this country.

Davis will proceed to London soon as his work at Geneva is concluded. Admiral Leigh and Commander Wilkinson will sail for England June 9.

BARTHOU SNUBS NAZIS ON ARMS

GENEVA, June 4.—(AP.)—A proposal by the president, Arthur Henderson, to adjourn the disarmament conference for the purpose of trying to get Germany back into the discussions was opposed vigorously by Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, the French delegate, today.

Henderson made his suggestion at a meeting of the steering committee, but Barthou said that if it meant that the committee "should trot over to Berlin for a session, I for one will not go."

Earlier, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian commissar for foreign affairs, had introduced a resolution calling for the conference to sit permanently as "a conference of peace."

Restaurant Worker Held in Beer Sale

Charged with the illegal sale of legal beer in a Smithfield street restaurant early today, John Gandis, 31, of 1424 Sandusky street, night manager, faced a charge of keeping a disorderly house in Central Police Court, according to police. Alfred Walters, 24, of 322 Penn avenue, to whom the sale was made, police said, faced a charge of visiting a disorderly house.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

FESTIVAL OF CELEBRITIES :: New Features Scheduled :: ON AIR TONIGHT

Prominent Artists Billed

Swarthout, Damrosch, Ponselle, Menken . . .

Reading like a page from Who's Who, tonight's radio layout promises these four headlining personalities in one continuous, and impressive, series of waftings.

Gladys Swarthout's celebrated contralto voice will be the focal point in a summer concert series to be offered weekly over NBC-WCAE, beginning tonight, by the sponsor of the snow-time Tibbett-Crooks presentations.

Damrosch, in his weekly KDKA broadcast, abandons the baton briefly in favor of piano performance and, incidentally, a tribute to George Gershwin. His selection—the Concerto in F, written by Gershwin 10 years ago for the New York Symphony Orchestra on commission of the noted conductor.

And Helen Menken, still wearing the "Mary of Scotland" makeup and costume of Queen Elizabeth—a necessity resultant from pressure of time between stage and radio deadlines—will play the Countess du Barry in the dramatic portion of the WJAS bill, "The Big Show."

Each enjoyable in itself to devotees of the better things, the four are so timed as to afford an unbroken two hours of perfect delight with Swarthout going on the air at 8:30, Ponselle at 9, Menken at 9:30 and Damrosch at 10. Each program is of half-hour duration.

Miss Menken's appearance tonight, by the way, will be her first under a contract awarded following the record of recalls established by the actress recently.

* * *

Included in new series to start today are a weekly choral presentation, "Gothic Echoes," on WCAE at 10:30 p. m., and a three-a-week series featuring Dale Shinn as "Squire Hawkins," on KDKA at 5 p. m.

* * *

Speaking in connection with the United Jewish Appeal for German Relief, an effort to raise $3,000,000 for relief of Jews in Germany, Leo Lehman, local campaign chairman, will be heard over KDKA at 7:30.

* * *

"California Melodies" goes on the air at a new time beginning tonight. It will be heard each Monday at 8:30 p. m. Ida Lupino is the initial guest star under the new schedule.

Girl on Trapeze Injured by Plunge

BALTIMORE, June 4.—(AP.)—Miss Bee Jung, of New York, suffered a sprained leg and elbow when the trapeze on which she was performing fell. Her partner, Miss Dorothy Rowland, also of New York, escaped unhurt.

The two were performing at the Baltimore Stadium for the entertainment of 5,000 Shriners and their guests.

New Plane Service To South Started

A new airplance service connecting Pittsburgh with Birmingham and New Orleans is now available, according to D. A. Duff, district traffic manager of Pennsylvania Airlines.

Globe Trotter

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It has been our experience that unusual occurrences in far parts of the world usually bring stories of similar happenings from our own Globe Trotters.

Thinking of this, you must know how I felt when I read the story about the quintuplets being born in Canada. Then and there I shook my head and mumbled to myself: "The Globe Trotters won't have anything to match that."

But to my amazement a similar story did come in. It is enough to uphold the honor of the Globe Trotters, even though we have to take in extra territory.

Mrs. Lilly Rain, of Irwin, enclosed a story about her sister in England, Mrs. Beatrice Hitchins, who is the mother of quadruplets.

Thanks, Mrs. Rain, you saved the day through your sister. You are awarded the Globe Trotter medal, order of the first class.

Anybody else know about quadruplets or quintuplets?

* * *

Oh yes, I need, for one of our needy Globe Trotters, a go-cart suitable for a six-month-old child.

* * *

As a relief from the locusts that have been sent in, John Wise, 924 Beech avenue, and Danny Aymar, 824 Reedsdale street, brought along with them a gorgeous moth of extraordinary size and brilliance.

Searching through the book they had been inspecting, it was discovered that the amateur entomologists had captured a Cecropia.

65TH-ANNIVERSARY BOGGS & BUHL

2 HITCH-HIKERS DIE AS TRAIN HITS TRUCK

Two youths were dead today, a third was reported near death and another was recovering from injuries received when their truck was struck by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train at a crossing near Meadowlands, Washington County, last night.

The dead are John L. Letski, 16, and John Smiddle, 17, both of Houston. In the Washington Hospital little hope was held today for the recovery of Walter Louttig, 27, an automobile mechanic, of Monongahela City, driver of the truck, according to the report. He was reported suffering from a skull fracture.

Joseph Drumsia, 17, of Houston, is in the Canonsburg Hospital, suffering from shock and a shoulder injury.

It was reported Letski, Smiddle and Drumsia had hitch-hiked a ride to Monongahela City.

The locomotive, Pittsburgh bound from Washington, Pa., crashed into the side of the truck, demolishing it. According to railroad information, the engineer saw the truck approach the crossing, but the distance was too short for him to do little more than slow down his train.

The locomotive was slightly damaged. Letski and Smiddle died at the scene, and the injured were taken to hospitals by passing motorists. After a delay of almost an hour the train continued to Pittsburgh.

KILLED BY AUTO NEAR AIRPORT

Joseph Batterton, 50, of 5136 Lytle street, Hazelwood, died in Homestead Hospital early today from a fractured skull received when he was struck by an alleged hit-and-run driver in Hays road near the County Airport last night, county police reported.

Failing to regain consciousness, Batterton could not be questioned by police. County detectives checked the license number of the auto given them by witnesses. They said the license had been issued to Frank Kaptain, 1835 Tustin street.

Oakland police later arrested Kaptain in his auto at Brady and Forbes street and detained him for county detectives. He denied knowing anything about the accident.

EDITOR AT PITT WINS AWARD

The David Oliver Holbrook Award was presented to John J. Grove, of Pittsburgh, at the annual dinner of Delta Tau Delta Fraternity, University of Pittsburgh, in the chapter house last night. The prize was created in 1921 by the Pittsburgh alumni chapter of the fraternity as a memorial to David Oliver Holbrook, former Pittsburgh industrialist and once president of the alumni association.

Mr. Erickson

Grove was editor of the Owl, 1934 university yearbook; president of the College Association, chosen by the university as a member of the 1934 Hall of Fame and a leader in university activities.

Announcement also was made at the dinner that the Parmalee Award for outstanding service to the chapter had been given Leroy Erickson, of Bradford, Pa. It was created in 1929 by Lieut. Archibald L. Parmalee, formerly attached to the military department of the university.

ROB SAFES IN DOWNTOWN

The safes of two concerns in the First National Bank Building were "cracked" by yeggs, according to police reports yesterday. In the Brainard Adjustment Company a ring valued at $200 and $50 in stamps were taken. The amount taken from a safe in the offices of the National Loan Company has not been determined.

Two men and a woman who stopped his automobile on Brown's Bridge robbed him of the machine and his owner's card, Alton Cook, of 6223 Joseph street, reported to police early yesterday.

Two Injured When Autos Hit Poles

Stanley Rodgers, 29, of 1909 Mary street, was injured yesterday when his automobile struck a pole in Carson street, near the Castle Shannon incline, according to police.

When the car in which she was riding swerved and struck a pole in Saw Mill Run boulevard yesterday, Mrs. Margaret Koruzo, 42, of 23 Merritt street, was injured, seriously.

Champagne Bath

ESTELLE TAYLOR

Miss Taylor, actress and ex-Mrs. Dempsey, drenched with champagne when the wind puffed at Floyd Bennet Field, New York, just as she christened the plane, "Miss Utica," that Jack Wright is to fly in the London-to-Melbourne race.

3 BOYS SEIZED IN AUTO THEFT

Three boys were arrested at Magee and Locust streets early today in an automobile which police said had been stolen from 1127 Bluff street during a fire. The car, owned by Martin Torreano, of 1311 Bluff street, had been taken from the Duquesne Auto Garage, when fire threatened the structure.

The arrests were made by radio police returning to their station after investigating the fire. Those arrested were Anthony Cino, 18, of 1208 Pasture street; Fred Malerbo, 18, of 812 Lamont street, and Victor Gallo, 17, of 41 Huber way. Police said they found a driver's license said to have been issued to Walter Geyer, of Benton avenue, Bellevue. The boys said they had found the card. Geyer said it had been missing a week.

The fire, originating in a truck from an undetermined cause, did slight damage.

1,000 CHILDREN GOING TO CAMP

Vacations for more than 1,000 underprivileged children of the Pittsburgh district are planned by the Epworth League, now readying its camp in Epworth Woods on the Perry Highway, north of here, for the summer season.

R. M. Heininger, camp director, is supervising preparations. Swings, wading pools and nature trails through the woods have been created for the use of the youngsters, who will spend two weeks at the camp in relays of about 85 at a time.

The camp, sponsored by the Methodist Episcopal Church Union, consists of 375 acres of wooded land, and is located near Warrendale, Pa. It is opened each year to the city's poorer children.

WHEELER CONTINUES DETECTIVE BUREAU REORGANIZATION

CHAPTER I.

Friday, the nineteenth day of December in the year 1930, had begun much like any other day in Susan Broderick's life.

At half past eight she had sat down to breakfast with the family just as usual. And it had been the regular Friday morning breakfast of stewed prunes, creamed codfish on toast and coffee.

When it was over she had gone upstairs to help with the Friday morning cleaning—the changing of sheets on the old black walnut beds, the scrubbing of the two big chilly bathrooms, the sweeping of the worn chenille carpets.

Lunch had been at one o'clock, just as it usually was. At three o'clock Susan and Lutie Broderick, the younger of her two aunts, had bundled up in their fur coats and come walking downtown through the first heavy snowfall of the season to buy a Christmas gift or two and change their books at the Public Library. They always returned their books on Friday or Saturday and took out new ones to tide them over the dullness of the week-end.

It was five o'clock now. The sky above the electric lights of South Main Street was the peculiar dark luminous blue of winter twilight and, as the two women came out of the library, the five o'clock whistles began to blow, their sound muted and made silvery by the snow that had been falling over the city all day long.

'The Blue Hour'

"This is what they call 'the blue hour' in Paris, Susan," the older woman said, clinging to Susan's arm as they descended the slippery steps that led to the pavement. "The tea hour. When we were abroad years ago we always used to drop in at the Ritz or Rumpelmayer's for tea or choclate at this time of day.

"I'd like some now," she added wistfully. "I'll tell you what we can do—when we go up to Hart's to look at those little lace face pillows that I want to get for your Aunt Edna we can take the elevator up to the tearoom and charge a little something to eat. Cheese dreams or something light like that."

"Just enough to spoil your girlish figure, Lutie," Susan said looking down at the heavy face that was on a level with her own shoulder. It was Lutie Broderick's cross that she could not eat all that she wanted and at the same time remain slender and willowy like Susan who ate what she wanted and kept the wand-like figure of the twenties in spite of it.

At 47 Lutie had not yet given up hope of marrying and living happily ever after. She wore her dark hair in a shingle bob, painted her pale lips with a flaming shade of lipstick and was always very bright and lively as though she had made up her mind never to surrender herself to the dullness and dreariness of her spinster life. Every morning she went through a series of exercises that she called her "upsetting exercises" and at night she bound up her double chin with a rubber strap that fastened at the top of her head.

Does Feel Hungry

"I suppose you're right about eating between meals," she admitted now as she trudged along past the store fronts that lined the crowded streets. "Only I do get such an empty feeling this time of day—"

Hart's was the largest department store in the state. It was housed in a white marble building that rose 10 stories in the air, and it covered an entire city block. An entire city block filled with the things that women covet—furs and dresses, grape scissors and gardening gloves, draperies and diamonds, lingerie and laundry baskets, French perfume and bath champagne, ironing boards and ice cream freezers. The Brodericks had had a charge account there for 30 years, and Lutie knew the place as she knew her own home.

"Thanks, we can find our way about," she said in her most girlish manner to the floor walker who came up to her and Susan in the main aisle of the store. "We're going back to the linens."

Susan followed her through the crowded aisles to a counter near the elevators where a tired-looking sales woman drooped above crisp lace and embroidery, yawning behind three fingers of her hand.

"I'd like to see the little lace pillows that you have on sale today," Lutie said to her.

"We have some for $1.98—"

"Oh, nothing like that! I want to see something good." Lutie flicked some machine-made lace on the counter with a gloved forefinger. "Something handmade."

Charge Held Up

It took her a long time to pick out the pillow that she wanted for Aunt Edna, a pale blue one covered with strips of embroidered net and edged with Irish crochet.

"It's to be charged to my account, and I'd like to take it with me, please," she said to the sales woman, and gave her name and address.

Call in 'Math' Experts, Send Out Rainmakers

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Now the farmers need a rainmaker. Even though that job doesn't come under the civil service they should appoint one.

Secretary Wallace can consolidate his position by calling in the mathematical experts and sending out a cloud juggler.

The way we get rain in the East is to announce a picnic for a certain date. On that day we fill our water tanks. It never fails.

Lawn parties and outdoor fights are also great rainmakers. They say the Indians have a dance that will cause thunder and lightning. They use feathers same as Sally Rand.

We hope the farmers get their rain. The West has two barn seasons. You are either hiding in it from the sun or straddling it in a flood.

N. KENSINGTON FOUNDER DIES

C. D. Sibley, 73, one of the founders of New Kensington, died there yesterday at his home, 264 Ridge avenue. He was born in Napoli, N. Y., April 9, 1861, and came to New Kensington when that place was a hamlet.

For many years prior to his retirement about 15 years ago, Mr. Sibley was a member of the clothing firm of Sibley & McAllister. He was a life member of the Knights of Columbus, and a member of the B. P. O. Elks and St. Joseph's Church.

He leaves a son, George W. Sibley, of New Kensington, and a sister, Mrs. J. H. Harrison, of Little Valley, N. Y. His wife was killed by a passenger train in New Kensington five years ago.

JEWISH RELIEF DRIVE NEAR SUCCESS

League Commissioner Speaks; 1,000 Begin Canvass of City

With $67,000 pledged toward the goal in the $100,000 drive of the United Jewish Appeal for German Relief, 1,000 men and women today began a canvass of the city for additional funds. Reports of their success will be made at a meeting in the Y. M. & W. H. A. Wednesday night.

Announcement of the pledges was made at a meeting in the Concordia Club last night, following an address by James G. McDonald, League of Nations High Commissioner for German Refugees, who described conditions in Germany. Other speakers were the Rev. Dr. Solomon B. Freehof, rabbi-elect of Rodef Shalom Congregation; Leo Lehman, general chairman and Louis Caplan, toastmaster.

Earlier in the day 350 workers attended a luncheon in the Y. M. & W. H. A. and were addressed by Mr. McDonald.

LOOK TO U. S.

At last night's meeting Mr. McDonald said:

"The problem of the refugees in the countries neighboring Germany will remain difficult even if there are no large increases of immigration from Germany. The national committees with some outside aid can for a time carry on their day to day work of relief. But for the larger tasks of retraining, immigration and settlement—in Palestine and elsewhere overseas—the funds must come largely from Great Britain and the United States. Already the British group is approaching its goal. The result of the effort in America will be watched everywhere in Europe with anxious interest."

He said that the amount which a refugee can take out of Germany has just been sharply reduced from 200 marks to 50 marks, which is equivalent to about $20. Of the 60,000 refugees outside of Germany, about 85 per cent are Jewish while there are 600,000 Jews in Germany.

RABBI LASHES HITLER

Rabbi Freehof said:

"All the great culture of Germany has been murdered because the Nazis teach that all intellectuality is a Jewish trick, and so young men and women are taught at the universities that they are not intellectual and they are instructed to burn books, not read them. The Germans are being taught a stupid, unscientific racialism. Germany needs trade and that is why Hitler is trying to stir up anti-Semitism in this country. The Nazis believe that the more a country is anti-Semitic the less it is anti-Nazi and that Germany will therefore get more trade."

Out-of-town speakers were Rabbi M. N. Thurman, of Wheeling, and Isadore Sobel, of Erie. Dr. Ludwig B. Berstein, executive director of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, also addressed the luncheon meeting.

FOSTER 'JOKE' PUT ON CITY, NOT FORD

Woman Says Musician Never Resided in 'Memorial'

Henry Ford has bought the Stephen Collins Foster birthplace and the city has been hoodwinked in regard to its Foster Memorial, that is the latest angle to the controversy that still rages about the famous composer.

The city's memorial to the composer of "Old Black Joe" and other folk songs though standing on ground originally purchased by William B. Foster, the musician's father, "has never been known as Foster property," according to Mrs. R. M. Hamilton, of 353 South Highland avenue, who was born within 100 feet of the house that has been dismantled and moved to Detroit by the automobile magnate.

Mrs. Hamilton pointed to a statement given to newspapers by Mrs. Evelyn Foster Morneweck, of Detroit, a niece of Stephen Foster, who stated that Ford had purchased "just a very nice old specimen of early Pittsburgh architecture."

RESENTS STRANGER

Replying to Mrs. Morneweck's assertion that her famous uncle first saw the light of day in the house at 3600 Penn avenue, Mrs. Hamilton said:

"That place was never known as the Foster property. My nephew, John McTighe, was born there in 1901. There's nothing to show the Fosters ever lived there. I object to a stranger coming here and trying to tell me about the property—I was born and raised there."

Mrs. Hamilton told of a conversation she overheard between her father, John H. Fay, and James Park, the steel manufacturer who bought the property now in the possession of the city as a Foster Memorial, saying that Park and her father were standing in a bank on Butler street when the latter asked:

"Don't you know you are not buying the Foster home?"

According to Mrs. Hamilton, Park replied:

"Yes, but the cottage is too badly in need of repair to pay me to buy it. The other is a nice spot for a museum without spending too much money on it."

The "cottage" was the house her father had told her was Stephen Foster's birthplace, Mrs. Hamilton said.

ABSTRACTS CITED

To prove this was the cottage Henry Ford purchased, Mrs. Hamilton displayed an abstract of title copied from Allegheny County records in 1881 for her father, when the latter bought lots No. 10 and 11 of what had been Foster land. These plots are located at what is now known as the 3400 block on Penn avenue, and it was here that Mrs. Hamilton was born 53 years ago.

The abstract, which bears the name "M. C. Cozad & Co., Examiners of Titles, 100 Diamond street, Pittsburgh," describes a "two-story house" known as the Foster home, and locates it in a position diagonally opposite the

Mickey, Aged 2, Smokes Strong Corncob Pipe

Grandpa's Tobacco Is Favorite of Husky Infant

Mickey (Himself) Baehr has reached the mature age of two years and smokes a corncob pipe with grandfather's favorite tobacco in it—which is plenty strong.

But Mickey comes from a long line of smokers—his great-great grandmother, now living and 103, being a pipe smoker even today.

And being interviewed yesterday at his home in Laurel street, North Side, Mickey sitting on the front steps and puffing away, disturbed Mickey not at all. He puffed away and in reply to this question:

"What kind of tobacco do you prefer—strong?"

He answered:

"Ugh."

He doesn't talk much.

When he was asked how it happened that he started smoking, he answered:

"Ugh."

Yes, Mickey is a silent smoker.

The way it started, his father, W. J. Baehr, explained:

Often, as grandfathers do, he would nod and snatch a snooze, and Mickey, teething, soothes his gums on the stem of the corncob.

He did it so frequently that it had become a habit by the time he was caught. And now, beware, the man or woman who takes the pipe from his mouth.

Bethel Church Fetes 150th Anniversary

Memorial services this week will be held in connection with the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Bethel United Presbyterian Church. The celebration, which began last Wednesday, will close June 17. The Rev. F. G. Wright, pastor, spoke at the morning services yesterday.

2 DEATHS LAID TO LIQUOR

Acute alcoholism and pneumonia were blamed for two deaths yesterday, according to Coroner's reports. Frederick Blitz, 59, of 2209 Salisbury street, died in the South Side Hospital from acute alcoholism a half hour after he had been taken there from his cell in South Side Police Station. Sergt. William Siebert had returned him to the hospital, where he had been taken shortly after his arrest.

Patrick Kennedy, 71, of 3826 Hawley street, died in West Penn Hospital from pneumonia and acute alcoholism yesterday, according to the Coroner's report. He had been taken to the hospital Friday after he had fallen in Thirty-fifth street.

A fall while intoxicated was blamed by deputies for the death of Daniel Eckels, 47, of 1818 Forbes street, in the Allegheny General Hospital yesterday. He was found unconscious in Tunnel street Friday.

Freed, Nabbed Again In Hill Liquor Raid

Discharged because of lack of evidence in Central Police Court yesterday where he was arraigned on a charge of violating the liquor laws, Anthony Molinoro, 39, of 72 Chatham street, was rearrested on the same charge after Lieut. Albert Florig, armed with a warrant, made another raid early today, according to a police report.

With Molinoro, police reported they arrested Molinoro's wife, Jennie, 34, and eight visitors. They also said they seized a small quantity of moonshine liquor.

Gas Poisoning Kills Man in Coke Plant

Fred Spory, 49, Robinson boulevard, Findlay Township, died of carbon monoxide poisoning while at work in the Davison Coke and Iron Company plant, Neville Island, late yesterday, according to a morgue report.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., June 4.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

That Mussolini, who is the "sire" of the present dictator epidemic, knows just what to do to drive those other nations "nutty." He knows his sycology (that's not spelled right, but it sounds right). He asked his soldiers Saturday, "Are you ready to fight?" And he did it so loud that the adjoining nations could hear. Now that is how he has kept out of a war all this time (when everybody predicted he would have one every week), but here is something that he did tell his people that will bear repeating all over the world: "We must accept hard times, we must get used to hard times." Yours, WILL.

NEW DIRECTOR TO 'FIRE' ALL LAX IN DUTY

Campaign to 'Last As Long as I'm On Job'

Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell today ordered police "to put the lid on the city and keep it down tight."

Rackets and dives must be wiped out or the police responsible for their continuance will be fired, Bell declared.

The new public safety director said he will hold every patrolman responsible for conditions on his beat and every inspector for conditions in his district.

ORDERS CHECK ON POLICE

In addition, Bell ordered the City Detective Bureau to check on police to see that his orders are carried out.

The most drastic instructions in the histotry of the police department were handed out by Bell at a conference with Assistant Supt. of Police Jacob Dorsey and the new inspectotr of detectives, Sam Wheeler.

Bell emphatically declared it is not merely a temporary campaign. He said:

"It will last as long as I'm on the job.

"Rackets cannot exist if the police force does its duty."

Asked if he had any personal evidence of violations, Bell said:

"No, not from personal knowledge, but I understand there are plenty of violations."

LOTTERY ARREST

Following the conference, Detective Inspector Wheeler announced he had been pledged the full support and co-operation of Bell and Dorsey.

Meanwhile, Wheeler went ahead with reorganization of the Detective Bureau. He has informed the sleuths that only those who can "show him something" will be retained. He added:

"The bureau has been turned over to me. I have accepted the responsibilities that accompany such a position, and the Director made it plain to me that politics would not hamper my administration."

City Detective William Sullivan arrested a man alleged to have been peddling punchboards among downtown confectionery stores early this afternoon. The man, Lawrence Shapiro, 30, of Indianapolis, was charged with operating a lottery.

MARSHALL ASKS PROBE HEARING

Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall today asked the police research commission for an opportunity to appear before it and deny a statement of Former Public Safety Director Ralph E. Smith charging Marshall with having "lied."

Marshall sent a letter to Dr. Elmer Grapher, chairman of the commission, saying:

"I am very sorry that health conditions, over which I have no control, prevented my attending your meeting of June 2 in Council chamber, City-County Building.

"I see by the papers that certain persons made accusations against me which I am asking your honorable body for an opportunity to answer just as soon as my health will permit me to appear before you."

Smith had testified Saturday that he had "fired" Marshall because the latter "lied." Marshall was out only a few minutes, then was re-instated by Mayor McNair.

The commission was to hold a secret session today to study the testimony given at the first session.

Lunchroom Operator Granted Injunction

Judge George V. Moore today granted a preliminary injunction prohibiting the County Commissioners from ousting Joseph M. Slater as concessionaire at the county airport. In his petition Slater contended he had not been given the 30 days notice provided in the contract. The Commissioners wish to give the concession to Ruth Greim, it is said. A hearing was set for Friday.

Relief Workers Demand Raise, Threaten Strike

A strike of 400 relief workers of Allegheny County loomed today, as the workers presented demands for wage increases to county, state and federal relief heads.

The demands were made in telegraphic form by Kurt Anderson, chairman of the newly organized Associated Relief Workers of Allegheny County, on Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, and Eric H. Biddle, state head.

Increases from the present $75-a-month minimum to $90 a month, with proportionately higher amounts for workers with longer terms of service, were demanded. The telegrams stated:

"If these demands are not complied with we shall be forced to take more drastic action. Stoppage tactics were sanctioned by a general assembly of county relief workers on May 31."

George P. Mills, executive director of the local county board, said he had not yet received a copy of the telegram.

Mills, who was sought to get increases for the relief workers, said that the local board did not receive sufficient funds from the state to pay the increased wages.

8 VIRTUES OF 'VOTE-BY-MAIL' PLAN CITED

Creator Declares Method Would Halt 'Padding'

[Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles on a plan to vote by mail.]

Eight virtues are ascribed to the vote-by-mail plan proposed to President Roosevelt by Alonzo P. Ingram, its Pittsburgh creator. The ballot is secret, it will encourage a more representative vote, the citizen has ample time in his home to consider candidates and issues, delivery and return of the ballot are safeguarded by the United States mails, duplication of voting is prevented by close comparison of signature cards, "padding" of totals will be impossible, tabulation of the vote can be speedily done, and the expense will be far below the present elections cost, Ingram says.

The voter's interest in the idea begins, of course, with delivery of the ballot at the home. The letter carrier brings it, with the rest of the mail. It's a large envelope addressed to the voter by name and street number exactly as his or her signature card at election headquarters reads. A voter's wife can receive his ballot, but nobody else can; the postman must take it back and report if it is undeliverable to the right person. So it can't fall into improper hands.

Inside the large envelope, which comes postpaid, is a smaller envelope addressed to the central elections bureau. That's to return the ballot when it is marked. A specially designed ballot envelope is inside of this, and on its back is a space for ward and district numbers, on its front a perforated card for information by the voter and his signature. The card is to be detached by the elections clerk after he compares the signatures.

THE POSTMAN BRINGING A BALLOT FOR MRS. S. F. NOVAK

Mrs. Novak, 2355 Valera street, Carrick, showing how simple it would be to vote under the vote-by-mail plan—no standing in line at polling places in garages. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

The voter has ample time to look the ballot over, to consider the candidates, to talk over with husband or wife. There can even be time for a "family conference" with sons or daughters, uncles or aunts.

Outside influence or pressure? Not more so than today, the system's inventor says, and greater chances for independent voting.

'GIRL IN THE FAMILY' » Torn Between Loyalty and Love, Which Does Susan Choose? » By Beatrice Burton

Susan Makes Up Mind to Get Job

paper and Lutie held out her hand for it.

"I'm sorry, madam, but I can't give you your parcel until the charge is okeh'd. That's the rule here. You'll have to wait a moment." The sales woman shook her head and turned to another customer who had just come up.

Five minutes went by . . . Ten. . . . A girl in the uniform of a visiting nurse stopped to ask where the flannels were. A woman in a moleskin coat bought five yards of pink footing and walked away carrying it in an envelope.

"It seems to me that my charge ought to be coming through. I've been waiting for it a long time." Lutie tapped an impatient foot, in a shabby black suede shoe, on the floor.

The clerk picked up a telephone that stood on the shelf behind her. "I'll call up the office and see if they've okeh'd it, madam," she said. After a moment's conversation with someone at the other end of the wire she set it down and turned again to Lutie.

"They'd like you to step up to the business office, madam. It's on the tenth floor. Just ask for Mr. Dillon."

"Mr. Dillon?" There was puzzlement in Lutie's voice and in her black, rather prominent eyes.

Bill Overdue

Susan and Lutie told each other many times afterward that they never would have gone up to Mr. Dillon's office on the top floor of Hart's if they had known what was in store for them there that afternoon.

But they did not have so much as an inkling. "I suppose they want me to identify myself," Lutie murmured in Susan's ear on their way up in the elevator. "With your Aunt Edna and me using the same account there's probably some confusion. Perhaps I ought to have had the pillow sent out on the delivery wagon, but deliveries are so uncertain this time of year."

Mr. Dillon's office was a glass and mahogany cage with a grass green carpet on the floor. In the middle of it stood a flat-topped desk and he was seated behind it, a small good-looking man with gray hair and eyes and mustache. He had two or three papers, fastened together with a clip, in his hand and he looked up from them when Lutie and Susan stepped into the office.

"Oh, yes, Miss Broderick," he said, when Lutie had introduced herself. "Oh, yes—I have just been glancing over your account. I find that nothing has been paid on it since the first of August. That is five months, Miss Broderick."

"Almost five months." Lutie, smiling, was her very brightest self. Not even then did she realize what was happening to her. "Of course, I don't really know very much about the account, Mr. Dillon. I never pay the bills. My family has had a charge account here for 30 years, and my brother has always taken care of it. Mr. Worthy Broderick, you know—the account is in his name."

Lutie Argues

She stood before him with her chin lifted a little above the collar of her worn mink coat, her hands clutching the silver top of an old petit point handbag that had been a very handsome article when it was new. Susan suddenly remembered that Aunt Edna had bought it in this very story six or seven years before Lutie's birthday and had paid seventy-five dollars for it.

"We've always done all our shopping here," Lutie went on. "I don't quite understand what you're tryin' to say to me about our bill, Mr. Dillon, but if you're worrying about it I can tell you that it will be paid, just as it always has been paid. I'll speak to my brother about it." Under the rouge that she wore high on her cheeks a slow dark flush began to show itself.

Mr. Dillon tapped the sheets of paper that he held with his pencil. "We've written two letters to Mr. Worthy Broderick about it," he said, shaking his head. "I'm afraid we won't be able to extend you any more credit, Miss Broderick, until it's been taken care of. I'm sorry—but we've let the account run on this long only because you're among our oldest customers and have always paid in the past."

"But about my package at the lace counter—" Lutie was beginning again when Susan stopped her.

"Please don't, Luties!" One of her hands shot out and caught Lutie's wrist in a hard grip. "Let's not bother about that. Let's just go!"

CHAPTER II.

Susan's face was as scarlet as Lutie's and she never knew just how the two of them got out of the office. As its door closed after them she heard Mr. Dillon say again that he was very sorry in a voice that sounded far away like a voice in a nightmare. Then they were in the elevator once more, packed in with other women whose clothes looked glossy and new even if they were not made of mink, as Lutie's coat was. She glanced down at her own coat of black Russian caracul that looked rusty and "ratty" after four winters.

"We're shabby-genteel, Lutie and I," she told herself as they got out of the elevator at the first floor. A full-length mirror, fastened to a pillar opposite the elevators, caught their reflection—the reflection of two women who were plainly "ladies" but who were also plainly down on their luck in out-of-date hats that turned up in front instead of down in a season when all the new hats hid the right eye, in last-season skirts that were too short, in black suede shoes that were shiny at heel and toe from too much wearing.

"Let's go out at the side door. I simply cannot pass that saleswoman at the lace counter," Lutie said in a whisper, as if she were afraid that someone in the throng of shoppers might hear of their humiliation. Her eyebrows were twisted high on her forehead in a look of dismay and bewilderment still. "That upstart of a man, Susan! I can't understand why I stood there and let him talk to us the way he did. Just think of his daring to!—Why, old Crowell Hart, who founded this store, was one of your Grandfather Broderick's lifelong friends!—I wish I'd put that fellow into his place!—"

Just His Job

Susan shook her blonde head. "Nothing that you could have said would have made any difference, Lutie," she said. "All that mattered to him was that our bill wasn't paid. His job is to tell people just what he told us—that if they don't pay they can't buy anything in the store."

They were walking away from the building now, moving very quickly as if both of them felt that they were in full flight from something shameful.

"I don't believe I feel equal to walking home, Susan," Lutie said as they reached the corner of South Main and Sixth street. "I think I'll get on a street car here. I feel—shaky. As if someone had knocked me down and walked all over me." Her voice was shaking, and suddenly to Susan's horror she began to cry. She pushed up her spotted veil and began to brush away the tears that gathered along her lids and rolled down her face.

"Nothing like that ever happened to me before," she went on after a minute or two. "But then we always had plenty of money until the last two or three years, and money protects you from lots of unpleasant things. I used to be miserable because everybody I knew was married and I wasn't. I used to think I'd marry even a poor man if I had the chance—but I wouldn't think of doing it now that I'm older and wiser. I know now that nothing in this world really matters except money . . . Susan, I'll never be the same again after what just happened to us. I declare, I feel just like a criminal. Don't you?"

"Certainly not, and you mustn't," Susan answered sturdily as Lutie's street car came along. "Let's forget it. I think I'll walk, Lutie. Goodby."

Frown Leaves Face

She helped her aunt into the car and stood on the edge of the pavement, frowning as she watched it disappear into the snow-filled darkness. Then as she turned and started along South Main street, past the lighted store windows, her face began to clear. She swung along smoothly and quickly as if she enjoyed walking, and her lips parted a little as if she drank in the cold fresh air with eagerness.

Under the brim of the unfashionable hat her whole face wore an eager expectant look, as if she were on her way to meet someone whom she was very impatient to see. As a matter of fact she didn't know more than a hundred people in the whole city, but whenever she was out on the streets alone she found herself filled with an oddly excited expectant feeling . . . a feeling that just around the next corner, in the next block, someone or something wonderful and thrilling might be waiting for her.

So far, in her 21 years, very little that was out of the ordinary had happened to her. One day of her life was so much like the next one that she could hardly tell them apart, and all of them so uneventful that a walk downtown and back was something of an adventure to her.

The crowded streets were as fascinating to her as the scenes of a play, and this was the time of day when she liked them best. The office buildings lighting up, the electric signs flashing out, the arc lights glowing above the sidewalks like cold white moons, the sound of traffic that was like the roll of drums.

But what always drew her attention more than anything else was the army of girls who came pouring into the streets from the stores and offices where they had been at work all day. They struck her as being so much more free and alive and self-reliant than the older people in the crowd, and ever since she had left high school she had longed to be one of them . . . They were doing interesting work, earning money, going places, meeting people, every day in the week. If they wanted to stay downtown for dinner and a show or concert they could do it without asking anyone for the money. If they wanted the latest book or the newest hat, they could earn the money for it with their own heads and hands. Compared with her own existence their lives seemed filled with color and interest.

Determines to Work

"There's nothing like having your own work and your own money," she told herself now, and as she watched three of them flash past her, arms linked, a feeling of strong determination to get out into life, do something, earn money, be alive and meet other people who were alive and young, swept over her.

She had known that feeling a great many times before, but so far it had never got her anywhere. When she left high school at 18 she had made a fight for a college education—the only kind of fight that she knew how to make. John, her brother, was going to law school, and she had told her father that she wanted to be trained to earn her living, too.

"No, I don't believe in higher education for women," her father had told her. "You'll never have to earn your own living. You'll get married and let some man look after you. What you want to do is to stay at home and learn how to run a house."

A little later Susan begged him to let her take a course at business school that would fit her for an office position, a career of her own. A life of her own, not simply a flat existence at home, broken here and there by trips to the store or the library, by afternoon calls and evenings at the movies, by the visits of Wallace Steffen, who came to see her three nights a week—usually on Tuesdays and Fridays and Sundays. She had tried to make him understand that life in the Brodericks' old brick house was not enough for her. She wanted something real to do, wanted to try her own wings.

But whenever she talked "job" to him he came back at her with a great deal of talk about Wallace Steffen. She would marry Wallace in all probability. And, he asked her, what use would Wallace's wife have for a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting.

Meets Wallace

She was thinking about Wallace when she suddenly saw him coming toward her through the mist of snow. He had just closed the side door of the First National Bank, where he worked, and was coming down the steps. He saw her just as she caught sight of him and hurried across the sidewalk to her.

"Hella, Susan!" He grinned down at her through the thickening darkness and drew one of her arms through his. "This is certainly luck—for me! You'll let me drive you home, won't you?"

His grin made his face look almost boyish for a moment. At thirty Wallace already looked something of a personage, something of the dignified and solid captain of finance that he undoubtedly would be in 10 or 15 years. He was not tall and he was rather stout, but he carried himself so well that he looked tall. His features were regular and he had fine dark eyes.

His father and two of his uncles were directors of the bank, and Susan had decided early in her friendship with him that he and all the rest of the Steffen men were rather like the bank itself—square and solid and without romance.

"How's the boy banker?" she asked him as they started across the street with Wallace shortening his stride to get into step with her. He did not answer, and glancing up at him, she saw that he was peering down at her bare hand as it lay in the crook of his arm.

Not Surprised

But Susan knew that he was not surprised in the least really. She never wore gloves if she could avoid it, and she had explained to him dozens of times that she disliked them because they gave her hands a dry tight feeling as if an extra skin had been added to them. She never wore overshoes, either, and she laughed at his galoshes, his muffler, his fur-lined driving gloves and the foot-warmer on the floor of his automobile.

"Just because you coddle yourself, Wallace, you think I ought to." She fished in her pocket for her gloves as she spoke. "However, I'll put these on if it will make you feel any better."

"It will. You look just like the poor little match girl with your hands bare." He took a tighter hold of her arm as they stepped down into the homeward marching throng of people on the Fifth street crossing. Holding her close to his side he drew her around the corner to the garage where he kept his car during the day. It stood just inside the door, a shining black coupe with a Scotch plaid robe folded neatly on the seat and the foot warmer on the floor.

"I suppose you loathe this robe, too," Wallace said good-naturedly, throwing it across her knees and tucking it in well at the sides. "But you've got to have it. I'm going to take care of you whether you want me to or not, young lady."

He had been saying a great many little things like that lately, Susan reflected as he got in beside her. Throwing out little hints that he had a feeling of tenderness and protectiveness for her.

FOSTER 'JOKE' PUT ON CITY

Fay lots, thus placing it on the spot lately occupied by the house Ford has moved to his museum, near Detroit.

The abstract traces the disposition of the 121 acres bought by William B. Foster from George Croghan for $35,000 on April 5, 1814, and indicates the ups and downs of the Foster fortunes until 1832 when a mortgage was foreclosed and the Foster home, with what ground there was left, was sold to James Croft by Sheriff Morgan Neville.

BYRD'S PARTY HEARS WCAE BROADCAST

Flashed from the radio headquarters of Admiral Richard Byrd in far-off Little America, today came word that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's special broadcast over Station WCAE to the Byrd party last night had been picked up successfully by the expedition.

The messages were among hundreds reporting world-wide reception of the program.

The first onesaid:

"Winter party or the second Byrd Antarctic expedition wishes to thank you and the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph for a most excellent broadcast.

"It was very well received at Little America."

SENDS GREETINGS

The other message from the Byrd camp was from Finn Ronne, a member of the expidition, and was addressed to Louis L. Kaufman. It said:

"Thanks for your message an dthe great thrill it gave me to be on the receiving end of your broadcast this afternoon. The program was enjoyed by all. All well down here. Greetings to friends in and around Pittsburgh."

Forty-six stations on the coast-to-coast Red network of the National Broadcasting Company relayed the entertainment, which originated in the WCAE studios. The program was sent to Byrd's crew by W2XAF, General Electric's shortwave station at Schenectady.

TRIBUTE TO BYRD

Fred Weston, manager of WCAE, read a brief message from Wilmer M. Jacoby, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, paying tribute to Admiral Byrd for his achievement.

Dr. John G. Bowman, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, and Mr. Kaufman spoke. Mrs. Vernon D. Boyd, wife of the Pitcairn mechanic with the Byrd expedition, greeted her husband. Their son Frank, aged 2½, was to say, "Hello, daddy," but he suffered microphone fright.

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

The center of interest this weekend is, of course, the annual Sewickley horse show on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, that never fails to draw the socialities of Pittsburgh and Sewickley as well as out-of-town visitors. And there is always a certain amount of entertaining for house guests during the event.

Mrs. Lewis A. Park is planning a tea for the exhibitors to be held in her lovely Sewickley Heights home on Friday afternoon after the show.

And speaking of horse shows, Richard K. Mellon entered "Comea" in the annual running Saturday afternoon in the fashionable Nutmeg State steeplechase in Connecticut. That steeplechase is sponsored by the 122nd Cavalry Racing Association annually.

Flower Show Will Be Held on Friday By Rockledge Garden Club

The Rockledge Garden Club, with a membership of 80—all active gardeners—is planning its most ambitious flower show in the Edgewood Country Club from 2:30 until 9 o'clock on Friday. Mrs. Sidney A. Chalfant, chairman of the affair, has as assistant chairman, Mrs. F. F. Rohrer.

In the ball room of the club will be dining tables, set with glassware, china and suitable flower arrangements. In contrast to these will be breakfast tables with simpler accessories. In the lounge will be a large number of decorated occasional tables and on the terrace garden tea tables will be placed and here tea will be served, young girls serving as aides.

Besides the table arrangements, there will be exhibits of specimen blooms. Competing for excellence of arrangement will be miniature exhibits of low growing flowers, shadow boxes, bubble bouquets, wall pocket arrangements and some of the more difficult types of flower arrangement which require special training to conform with the requirements of flower show judges.

Mrs. B. M. Herr is in charge of decorations. Assisting Mrs. Herr are Mrs. P. G. Lambert, Mrs. W. B. Chalfant and Mrs. W. C. Dierks Staging the exhibits is to be the work of Mrs. William Wray, whose committee includes Mrs. J. G. McAbee, Mrs. F. I. Snyder and Mrs. J. Lee Barnes. Mrs. J. E. Roth will act as secretary to the judges and chairman of ribbons and markers, and will be assisted by Mrs. R. T. Rossell, Mrs. O. C. Yingling and Mrs. H. W. Keller.

Women Said To Belong At Home

CHICAGO, June 4.—(AP.)—Mrs. Lenora Z. Meder, one of the Middle West's best known clubwomen, on the eve of her induction as president of the Chicago Business and Professional Women's Club, told the world that women belong in kitchens and homes and not in clubs.

Every clubwoman and professional woman, young or old, she said in an interview, would gladly chuck her career to marry a good man. There are two kinds of women—those that men love and marry, and those who belong to clubs.

Mrs. Meder added:

"I am active in club and professional work myself, but I see the error of my ways. If I were as good a cook as I am a lawyer, I'd own Chicago. Well, it's back to the spinning wheel for women now. And back to the kitchen. That's where women belong. Getting the vote didn't do women any good—they still vote as their husbands tell them."

Beulah Walken Engaged to Marry

The exercises, which will begin at 2:30 o'clock, will be opened with the invocation by the Rev. Dr. H. Boyd Edwards, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension. There will, of course, be the salute to the flag and assembly singing of the national anthem. Mrs. Alexander Black, to accompaniment of an orchestra, will lead the assembly in singing "Battle Hymn of the Republic" to close the afternoon.

The speaker is Mrs. William A. Becker, national chairman of national defense through patriotic education. Her subject is to be "National Defense."

Pearl Gropper, Chicago Man Married

Mrs. Clara Gropper, of Pittsburgh, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Pearl Gropper, to Harry Sender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Sender, of Chicago, Ill., which took place Sunday, May 27, at 5 o'clock in the B'Nai Israel Synagogue. Rabbi B. A. Lichter officiated.

The wedding dinner was held in the Y. M. and W. H. A. Mr. and Mrs. Sender are honeymooning in Cleveland and Chicago and will be at home in Wilkinsburg when they return.

Helen Erma Wassell Weds James W. Schofield

At a pretty ceremony at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning in the First Baptist Church, Miss Helen Erma Wassell, of Morningside avenue, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Wassell, became the bride of James William Schofield, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Schofield, of San Francisco, formerly of Pittsburgh.

The Rev. Dr. Bernard Clausen was the officiant. The bride wore a spring-like gown of tea rose organza with a matching hat and carried Talisman roses, lilies of the valley and rust snapdragons. There was breakfast in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Wassell, of Amberson avenue, brother and sister-in-law of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Schofield left on a western motor trip and will make their home in San Fransciso.

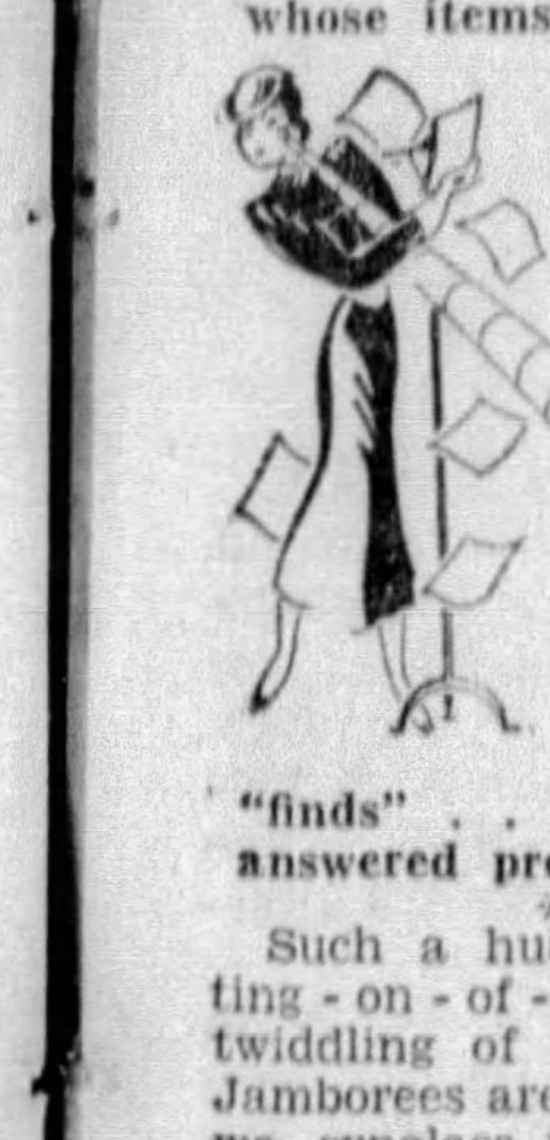
THROUGH THE SPYGLASS

-:- Viewing the New -:-



You little snoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

* * *

Such a hubbub! What a putting-on-of-thinking-caps and twiddling of thumbs! The June Jamborees are under way . . . and we, sypglass in fist, were all but knocked down when we ventured into the strongholds of merchants the first day.

And here is one of the first things that the thumb-twiddlers found—to their credit! An airy business with which to cinch in your waistline and still maintain a reasonable amount of coolness! For these are lastex foundations in summer weight . . . as full of "holes" as if they had been shot with blue beans (why "blue" ones, we couldn't guess . . . but that's how it goes). With satin and lace brassieres . . . low backs . . . elastic shoulder straps . . . and a wickedness to their slithery mouldings! For the lightweight figure . . . priced $1.95.

* * *

No sooner do we meander into a milling mob to find the cause of the excitement than The Cause of It All comes to light as 10-piece toilet sets for $5.00—which would be enough to cause an uproar almost anywhere, even if it weren't the big June Junket!

For is not graduation staring us in the face? Are there not engagement gifts looming ahead? Is not $5.00 a lucky "out" for you while still insuring a smart gift? These should be about $15 in reality . . . in all colors with amber or pearlized effects.

* * *

And now we become very nosey and snoop around through your house peering into things like your bathroom cupboard—WHAT! not enough razor blades, and all the menfolk clamoring for them? Nowadays you get them 25 for 39c!

Witch hazel . . . that almost-necessity in hot weather, is special at 17c for 16 ounces (originally 50c, then 25c, so you see this is rock bottom!) Well known brand.

Shoes . . . shoes . . . shoes . . . all over the floor of the closet! When you can buy Du Pont fabric shoe bags with 12 pockets, in all colors, all bound well so they'll last longer! Hang them on the door and have done with this salamagundi of shoes on the floor. These used to be $1.00 . . . now 44c.

* * *

With your eagle eye on the scales and the other on this new diet . . . watch yourself reduce safely, efficiently, comfortably! And in only a month!

The secret being that you need proper minerals . . . vitamins. And this magical powder gives them to you. Just stir a teaspoonful into coffee, tea, fruit juice, or something of the kind and drink this in place of breakfast, or lunch, or both. You'll find your appetite is satisfied, and no energy is lost—BECAUSE your system has received proper nutrition in healthful minerals. Then . . . eat your regular dinner at night.

We pored over the booklets on it . . . tasted the food powder . . . discussed it with the one in charge . . . and came to the conclusion that you (lots of you) would like to know about it.

Incidentally, it is usually $2 for the month's supply . . . now at $1 as a special introductory offer. Here's to your sylphlike self-to-be!

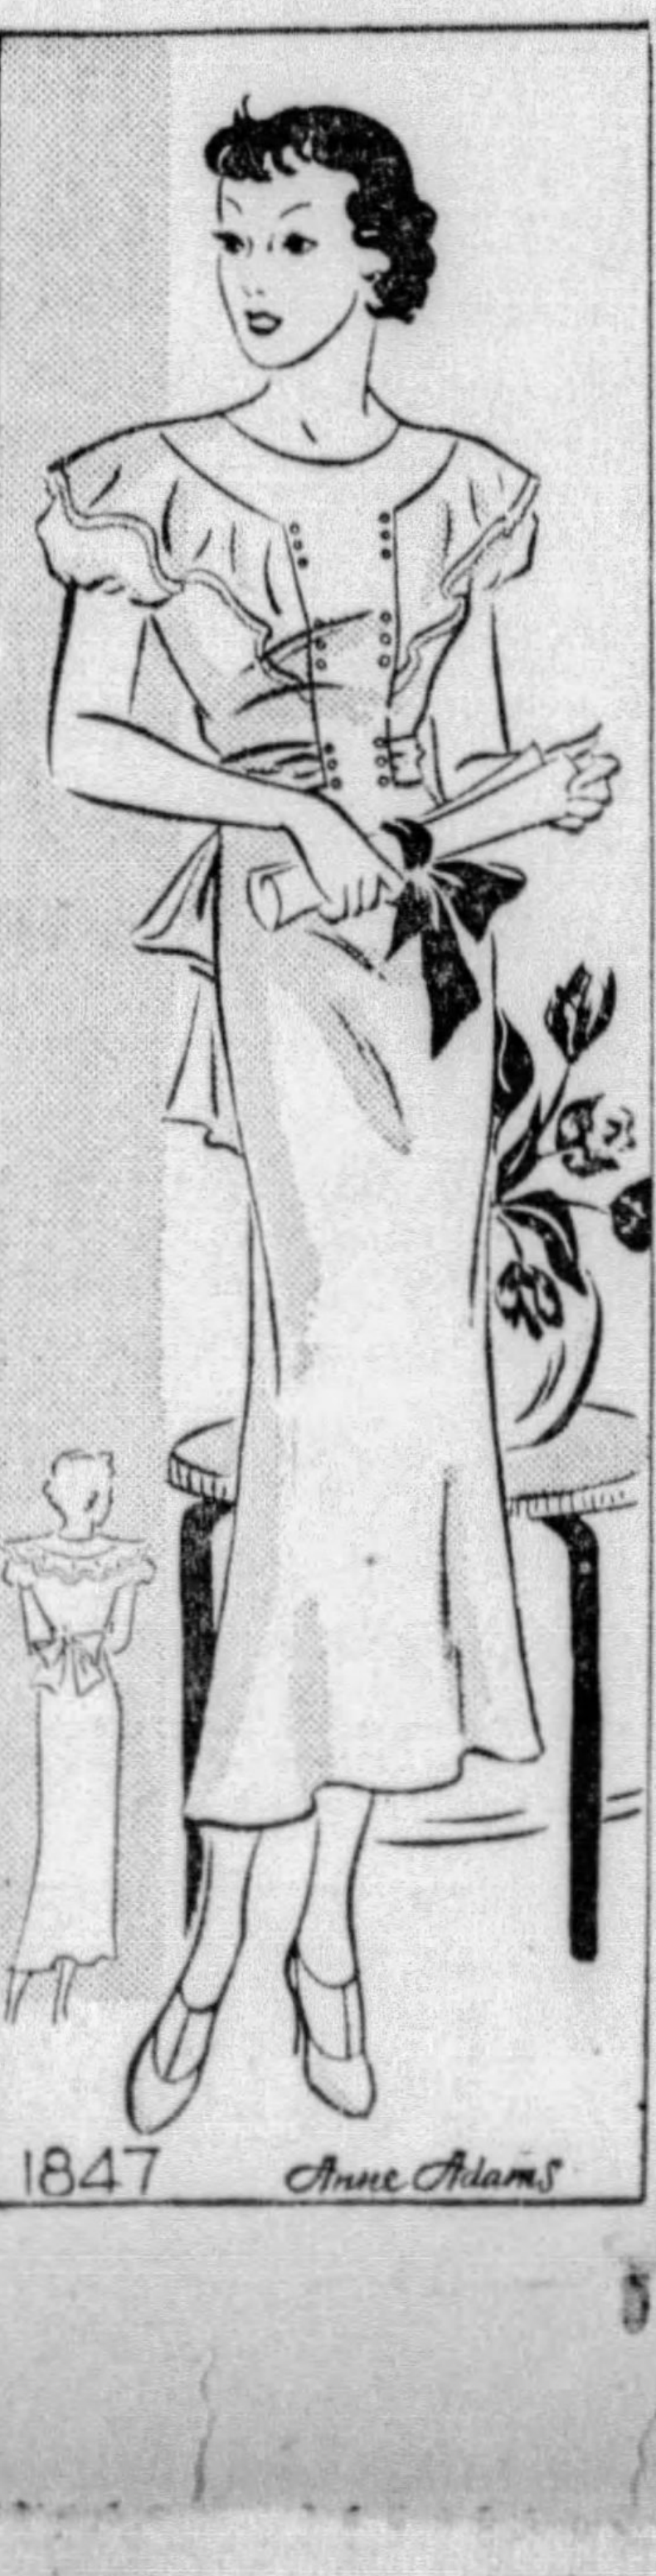
Pattern 1847

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern



By the time a girl is ready to receive a diploma she has earned the prettiest frock a clever mind can create—and here it is! The bodice is just sufficiently molded to emphasize a rounded young figure and the vest effect and huffles give it importance proper to the occasion. It would be a charming thing in taffeta—if the graduation is to be "dressy"—or in a pretty cotton stuff just a wee bit crisp in texture. And don't you like the way the sash emerges from under the front section, leaving the waistline unbroken at the very front?

Pattern 1847 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 takes 3½ yards 39-inch fabric and 2½ yards lace edging. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

It will be one of the finest air shows ever staged in this part of the country so you don't want to miss it. Be sure to attend. If you want to bring your parents and your friends, I'm sure they will have a pleasant afternoon of clean, exciting fun.

Right now, however, I have more news for you about the Model Plane Derby to be conducted at Schenley Oval on July 7, under the sponsorship of the Sun-Telegraph birdmen wing.

July 7 Model Derby

With time drawing near for the Schenley Oval plane meet, many members have told me that they are anxious to get started on their models. Many have already sent for the free book of rules which gives the complete regulations and specifications regarding procedure, contests, events and models.

Here are the general rules governing contestants, procedure of events and models:

1—THOSE ELIGIBLE—Any boy or girl who is a member of the Junior Birdmen who has not yet reached his or her 22nd birthday.

2—EVENTS—All Balsa glider event, outdoor single propelled stick event and outdoor double propelled stick event.

3—TIME SCHEDULE OF EVENTS—Morning: 9 to 10 trial flights, 10 to 12 official glider flights. Noon to 1 P. M., lunch period. Afternoon, 1 to 1:30, trial flights, 1:30 to 3:30 official single propelled model flights, 3:30 to 4 trial flights, 4 to 6 official double propelled model flights.

4—EVENT WINNERS—Events are for endurance. Only the best flight in any one event can be credited to any one contestant.

5—POINT SYSTEM—First place 100 points, second place 75 points, third place 50 points, fourth place 25 points and fifth place 10 points. These points will be awarded in each event to both the first five place winners among Group A members and Group B members.

6—CONTEST CHAMPION—The scorer of greatest number of points will be recognized as the junior birdmen wing model plane champion of the city.

7—TIES—In case of tie for first to fifth place in any event, all tieing contestants will receive full number of points and a duplicate prize. In case of tie for wing championship, the time of winning flight in each event of each tieing contestant shall be added and member having greatest time to his or her credit will be recognized as the champion.

8—NUMBR OF FLIGHTS—Contestant may have as many official flights as they wish to take within the alloted time for events.

10—NUMBER OF MODELS—Contestants may enter as many models in each event as they wish.

11—INSPECTION—No model will be permitted to be flown unless it has been inspected, weighed, measured, approved and stamped at the inspectors' table at the field.

12—CONSTRUCTION—All models must be built by contestants flying them. No manufactured parts may be used except metal fittings, bearings and wheels. Propellers must be home made. Models constructed from kits are not eligible.

13—DROPPING PARTS—If a model drops any part or parts while in flight, model is disqualified until such part or parts are again permanently affixed.

14—HITTING AN OBSTRUCTION—When a model hits an obstruction 10 seconds are counted. If model continues flight within that time, the number of seconds it was grounded will be deducted from final flight time. If it does not free itself within 10 seconds, flight is declared ended and the 10 seconds deducted from the stop watch time.

15—DISQUALIFICATIONS—A contestant who breaks any rule or whose conduct is a discredit may be disqualified from further flights and ruled off the field.

EMERGENCY RULES—Emergency rules may be established at the derby if the officials in charge deem it necessary.

17—ENTRY BLANKS—All entry blanks must be in the mails by Tuesday, July 3, 1934, at midnight.

These general rules are ellaborated upon more thoroughly in the official book of rules which is yours for the asking. Send in for one with the very next mail. And fill out your entry blank and be one of the first to be an official contestant in this great model derby to be held at Schenley Oval on July 7.

Tomorrow I will publish the rules of the individual events for you. Be sure you watch for them for they contain the measurements and weight specifications necessary in the construction of your models.

Eagle Rank Open Later

Hundreds of members have asked me how they can become an Eagle member of the Junior Birdmen. National headquarters in New York have sent me the following important notice concerning Eagle ranking:

Eagle membership rank is open to all members of the Junior Birdmen affiliated with the organization for three months or more.

First tests for Eagle membership rank will be mailed to members requesting rank place on August 1st. Do not send in for questions until that time."

HAPPY LANDINGS!

ELECTRIC
BILL

You see, the more Electricity you use, the cheaper it becomes

PERHAPS you understand the diminishing rate that makes the cost of electricity cheaper as your use of it increases? Many people don't, that's why we call attention to it. Note the bracket marked "Rate per Kilowatt Hour." If you use only 15 KWH per month, you pay 7c net (1c prompt payment discount) per KWH; electrical units consumed beyond 15 KWH and less than 31 KWH, cost 5c net per KWH; KWH consumed up to 51 cost 4c per KWH; the remainder cost at the rate of 3c per KWH. In the bracket labeled "KW Hours Consumed" is inserted the number of electrical units you have used during the current month the difference between the reading on May 11—980, and the April 11 reading—950. Suppose in your case it happens to be 30 KWH. Suppose also that you add a new electric appliance to your electric servants—say a washer, a vacuum sweeper or an electric clock . . . the electricity required to operate this new appliance will cost you at the rate of only 4c per KWH. In the same manner if you now use 50 KWH. per month, any additional electricity consumed will cost you only 3c per KWH Electric appliances, or additional lighting uses bring more and more comfort and convenience into your home . . . while their operating cost decreases according to your use of electric current.

This electric bill is based on domestic rate C, for homes of 7 rooms or less . . . other domestic rates apply in various cases, but the principle of the diminishing rate remains the same.*

Memos of a Columnist's Girl Friday.

Dear W.: I was just thinking that a good column once a week or every now and then—would be "Oddities in the News" . . . Bernie's birthday is the 30th—don't forget to remember to forget it . . . Grand plan in Fresno, California, to honor the unknown hero, who first thought of the white line in the highway . . . His idea has saved more lives than anything or anybody . . . They are trying to find out the name of the man who created the white line in the middle of the road—let's help . . . Richard Halliburton is fed up, he says, with the legend about the dozen roses to lecture-hiring women . . . He admits it's an old story pinned on several lecturers—and that you helped tag it on him, etc.—and would you squelch it, and I said you'd try . . . Arthur Boran wants to know if it is true that you once saved Bernie from drowning? And if so, are you going to plead insanity?

Mrs. Ray Bolger has a new tune, with a different torch title, to wit: "Darling, I Don't Love You, Any More" . . . Lupe was in . . . Said that she gave you the first tip of her merger to Weissmuller, so would you do all you can to get the boys on the papers to leave her and her John-neee, alone? . . . That they still adore each other, but if they ever decide to split—she'll let them know herself, etc. . . . Give a mention to one of your former contributors, Evelyne Love Cooper . . . She has a new book due soon called "Slightly Sour Grapes."

Regina Crewe is Hollywood bound—her groom sailed for Yurrop Wednesday . . . Is it true that you've got to wear specs? . . . Fevvensakes! . . . You can spare the I's but hardly your orbs . . . Syd Stogel phoned. Said on Broadway—aches marks the spot . . . Not bad . . . Al Smith's youngest dotter Mrs. Quillinan is blessed-eventing . . . Mrs. Smith Ballew was banged up in a crash with her groom, who hit an "L" pillar which wouldn't "give" . . . Constance Carpenter and Fontana open at the Riviera June 7th—I like their dancing—very tony . . . Len Golos and Sid Schwartz have written their first play "Don't Worry" and it is to be produced next month! . . . The newcomers have all the luck . . . The David R[illegible]ton Agency want to see Mary Nolan—money in it for her . . . I hear the World's Fair is better than last year—may go there on my vacation . . . When Irvin S. Aina Constant of the Paree choir sent you a grand story with a moral to it—it's in the air mails . . . There's a gag used by a Dorchester firm this way . . . You get a post card saying: "Please call HAn-5821 between 9-4, important, Miss Kelly" . . . You phone and discover it's a sale for something—and you burn up—knowing they spent a penny to get you to enrich the phone company by a nickel . . . At Longue Vue the other night some star, whose name I didn't get yet, was cold sober and heckled the entertainers . . . He disturbed everyone so, particularly the patrons, that when he was finally called on—he was booed and hissed—but good . . . I'm not certain but I think his initials are "B. M." . . . The first initial obviously stands for Bore.

I phoned all of those I could find at their homes and told them not to forget you—just because you're bound for Mrs. Winchell and Walda . . . And to keep in touch with me at least once weekly by phone, anyway . . . Incidentally, the girl who was fired is getting interviews with housewives by saying that she worked at your house and she at least gets ear attention by adding that Mrs. Winchell had gone to California to establish residence to divorce you and other blah . . . Mrs. Bolger told me about it . . . That's what you get for not firing her the first day—when you first realized she was incompetent . . . Oscar Levant phoned and started screaming because of your gag . . . He says he never considered Cannon a friend of his, anyway—and why do you make him the butt of the quips, when he gives you such good ones? . . . I told him to stop squawking—considering how many feelings he has bruised in his time . . . Then he had the cheek to ask me out! . . . Who writes his material anyhow? . . . AJ says you may vacation the last two weeks in August—nothing else hot, except the weather.

Forest Fire Loss For State Increases

HARRISBURG, June 4.—(AP.)—H. B. Rowland, assistant director of the Bureau of Forest Protection, says forest fires this spring burned over about four times more acreage than was lost all last year.

Last year, about 28,000 acres were blackened, with loss of approximately $75,000. To date this year, more than 100,000 acres have been burned, with a loss several times that of last year.

London Call Comes to Raquel

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 4.—Hello! Sometimes a columnist's life isn't all it's snooped up to be. Take last night, for instance . . . the full moon, the lazy clouds (nature's moving picture) and the warmish breezes from the Hollywood hills . . . One doesn't feel like battling traffic to the office to beat upon a typewriter . . . It would be nicer to sit atop one of those Hollywood hills and watch the busy movie village below—boulevards that shine like black satin in the moonlight, and edged with gay, gargoyle-like signs flickering on and off, on and off.

Yes, it would be nice—to just sorta lean back and stare off into inky space, but no! There's a deadline to make. Where are those notes? What was that gag Ben Bernie wheezed? And there's that Chaplin rumor to check. A hot tip came that he was secretly married at sea to Paulette Goddard—and so my intermission is over—and back to work.

* * *

The Newsy Notes of the Day—The Raquel Torres-Steve Ames honeymoon to Honolulu and back to Hollywood may be resumed with another ocean voyage—this time to London, where British International Pictures wants Raquel to star in "She Stamped Her Foot," a gay comedy of the modern age.

Following the success of "The Red Wagon," in which Raquel co-starred with Charley Bickford, the British outfit sent the script of the new yarn and a nice offer to the fiery Mexican star for her consideration.

* * *

Samuel Goldwyn's in trouble again! He can't find enough beauties to form the chorus for his new Eddie Cantor musical—even after interviewing and testing hundreds of girls.

Mary Lou Dix, lovely New York show cutie, landed the first contract, but Goldwyn needs at least four dozen more! "Beautiful girls that demand a second glance!" he insists.

* * *

"Yowzuh! We came WITHIN $21,000 of breaking a record!"

* * *

Wanderings around Hollywood . . . The Kurt Neumans are expecting a blessed event ANY MINUTE now . . . Sylvia Sidney SNEAKED away for a short New York vacation . . . Barbara Pepper is gonna LOSE the chappie who slipped that gorgeous diamond bracelet on her arm . . . Isabel Jewell spent a flock of nickels trying to locate Lee Tracy—and finally captured him at the Clover Club . . . Some bragger-about-his-money was stating that his telephone was gold-plated, bejeweled and cost $400. "But it doesn't keep him from getting wrong numbers-" flipped Roy Del Ruth . . . The Al Jolsons (Ruby Keeler) will be off for a 17-day trip through the Panama Canal to New York . . . Dan Templin, the writer, met Gene Pallette on the Warner lot. They last saw each other 18 years ago—when Gene took a month's pay from Dan in a dice game while going to aviation school in Berkeley . . . Director Frank Borzage, Dick Powell and Pat O'Brien will head for West Point—to shoot scenes for "Flirtation Walk" . . . Guy Kibbee and Hugh Herbert are back from fishing. Guy caught 18 pounds—in added weight.

* * *

Madam Francis, New York's famous needle-and-thread lady (which is another way of saying modiste) has been giving the cinema town the once over—and finally said: "The Hollywood women dress like they were going to or coming from a circus!"

Well, which is it—going or coming?

Gathering up the newsy loose ends . . . Jay C. Flippen did his old act at the local Paramount and drove most of the film gagmen dizzy—they COULDN'T steal anything . . . Franchot Tone and Jean Muir made their first movie test together. Franchot landed with MGM and Jean with Warners. There's talk now of putting Franchot in Jean's new film, "The Lady Surrenders," and that doesn't make Joan Crawford any too happy! . . . Ann Sothern's Beverly Hill neighbors are SQUAWKING. She practices singing at 6 a. m. . . . Dick Barthelmess' salary was TOO HIGH, so his Columbia deal is in the ashcan . . . Henry Duffy, local stock company impresario, is bringing Violet Heming from New York for "Always Juliet," which will open first in San Francisco.

* * *

* * *

Another of cupid's items—Jackie Cooper, who might be accused of being slightly fickle, has suddenly become tremendously interested in Ottillie Ann Kruger, Otto's tiny daughter. In fact, it's so serious with Jackie's, he planning a big ice-cream-and-cake party for her.

GREEN ROOM GLEANINGS

That magnificent picture, "The House of Rothschild," is about to begin its tour of the Warner neighborhood houses . . . Bob Murphy, the comedian, who comes to the Penn Friday with Phil Spitalny, has just closed an 11-week engagement in London . . . Howard Deitz, M-G-M's hard-working publicity director, who rules his department with an iron hand, found time to write a song or two for "Hollywood Party," due today in the Fulton . . . The fine touch of Col. Dexter Fellows was apparent in those news reel shots of the circus in Washington . . . It was the colonel who put the midget on J. P. Morgan's knee . . . Ben Kalmenson, Warner's chief booker here, was formerly an automobile salesman . . . He got into the motion picture business when he sold a film executive a car that worthy didn't want.

* * *

The best movie title in months is "Baby Take a Bow," in which Shirley Temple will appear with Jimmy Dunn . . . The Penn gets the Damon Runyon plum, "Little Miss Marker," . . . Thank Joe Feldman, Warner publicity boss, for the neatest press agent squib of the week . . . It goes like this: Jack Oakie has figured out that if all the clothes worn by the 68 show girls in "Murder at the Vanities" were sewn together into a single garment it would make a nice pair of pants for Baby LeRoy! . . . The occasion for Joe's splendid co-operation is the coming of the Earl Carroll picture to the Stanley on Friday . . . The Paramount boys will be the "Kings" at today's Variety Club luncheon . . . The enterprising Walt Disney has added two new players to his exquisite Silly Symphony series . . . They are Peter Pig and Donald Duck and are already cast in "The Wise Little Hen."

* * *

Ozzie Nelson, late of the Park Central Casino, plays at Eddie Peyton's tomorrow night . . . Connie's "Hot Chocolates" arrives at the same spot for a three-day stay starting June 13 . . . Gertrude Gordon, the former sob sister, has returned to New York . . . The Warner should offer its finest double bill to date starting Thursday . . . The dual program will include John Barrymore's "Twentieth Century," already nominated by many critics for the 10 best list, and a zippy kidnap theme melodrama, "Fog Over Frisco" . . . The much-discussed screen version of "Little Man, What Now" will follow "Murder at the Vanities" in the Stanley . . . The impending visit of Professor Spitalny to the Penn recalls a crack by a wag in Lindy's one evening . . . He suggested "Hair Gets in Your Eyes" as a theme song for the professor's orchestra.

* * *

Joe Penner will make the trip from New York to Los Angeles by boat, and he will play the lead in Paramount's "College Rhythm" instead of getting a role in "The Big Broadcast of 1934" . . . They tell me, those who saw the screening the other night, that Dashiell Hammett's "The Thin Man" has been made into a right slick photoplay . . . Thanks, for all those kind words, to Brady McSwigan, Hal Horne, Mrs. Samuel B. Cuthbert, Ed. Finney, Albert Chestnut and Herb Bers . . . Aline MacMahon, the McKeesport actress, made her first stage appearance as a crap shooter in "The Mirage" . . . R-K-O has changed the title of "The Great American Harem" to "Bachelor Bait" . . . The Victor McLaglen-Edmund Lowe screen feud is to be continued in a film called "Dames Is Dynamite" . . . Why? . . . And another from the "Extra" girl: The winner of a strip poker game may be the luckiest, but the loser is the most interesting.

* * *

Mae "Free Wheeling" West is booked shortly for the Stanley in "It Ain't No Sin" . . . Lew Cody joins the long list of screen stars who passed on just after completing roles in pictures . . . His final was in Ben Bernie's "Shoot the Works" . . . Lon Chaney died after finishing his first and only talkie, "The Unholy Three" . . . Milton Sills completed "The Sea Wolf" and died . . . Ernest Torrence was just out of "I Cover the Waterfront" when he died . . . Lilyan Tashman answered the final call after the shooting of "Frankie and Johnnie" was done at the Astoria, L. I., studios . . . The Harry Kalmines are back from their Bermuda vacation . . . Several Pittsburghers will attend the opening of Mott Shea's stock company at the Colonial theater, Akron, tonight . . . The attraction will be Eddie Dowling's "Big Hearted Herbert," with some of the New York company in the cast . . . Shea, operator of the Fulton here, will present "The Pursuit of Happiness" next week, following with Florence Reed as guest star in her old shocker, "The Shanghai Gesture" . . . Which recalls that Will Hays is still banning that piece as a talking picture . . . Otherwise, Eddie Small, production chief of Reliance, would have had it on celluloid long ago.

Two Pittsburghers Smarthmore Grads

Two Pittsburghers were among the 120 students who graduated from Swarthmore College today. They are Miss Rachel Anne Merrill, of 509 Glen Mitchell road, Sewickley, and Benjamin McLain, of 5860 Bartlett street.

All In A Day

The Telephone Call.

The Boy and the Girl had grown up together in a small town in Southern Pennsylvania. Grown up, that is, until the Girl reached 18 and the Boy 22.

They were very much in love, and the idea of marriage was extremely sweet to both. But money—or the lack of it—stood in their way. The Boy was a factory worker, and the Girl had always been supported by her people who were none too wealthy themselves.

Came the day when the Girl had an idea. She had an uncle in New York who was associated with the theatrical business. She would write to him and see if he could place her somewhere.

"And then," she told the Boy, "we can both be working. I'd earn maybe $50 a week where I couldn't get more than $12 or $15 down here. We'd both save every penny. And it wouldn't be more than six months before we'd be able to get married."

A naive notion from a naive child—and the Boy must have had a hunch along those lines. He didn't like it, and he said so.

"I don't see what you'll gain," he pointed out. "You'll be pretty far away from me—and we'll both be mighty lonesome. Then, too, maybe things won't pan out right. Maybe you'll change, or something. I just don't like it."

All of which meant nothing. The Girl wrote to her uncle who knew her to be an extremely pretty child. He replied, stating that he thought he could place her in the chorus of a new musical.

The Girl's uncle made good, which is a rarity among uncles. The Girl was soon rehearsing in the chorus of an attraction that was scheduled to open in Boston within three weeks. When it opened, her salary would be $40 a week.

We leave the girl at this point and return to the Boy. He received details of his honey lamb's progress to the extent of two or three letters a day. And the more he heard from her, the sadder he became. He was lonesome, blue, unhappy.

One morning, on his way to the factory, he had a little argument with himself. If the girl could get $40 a week in a show, why couldn't he do the same thing? Why couldn't her uncle place him in the same show?

You can readily see that the Boy knew very little about anything. He had as much chance of a job in a show as Hoover has of landing in the Brain Trust. But he didn't know that.

When the Boy arrived in New York, the Girl's show had already opened in Boston for a two-week run. He raced over to the uncle's office for his job, and uncle was plenty startled. He told the Boy politely but firmly that he was wasting his time, and that he had better return home.

Now, as we say in French, the Boy was in one sweet fix. Depending on the notion that a surprise would be a great treat, he had not replied to the Girl's recent letters. He had figured that he would be sent to Boston immediately, and that joy would then reign supreme, as the funny saying goes.

But, little man, what next? No job. Very little money. Girl in Boston. Boy in New York. What to do?

The first thing he should have done was to have called the Girl and told her about it. But he didn't. He didn't want to give up without a struggle. So he looked around for work.

I don't have to tell you that he found none. In less than a week, his little store of overtime money had died a very natural death. He found himself walking along Broadway with $1.50 in his pocket, and very little hope in his heart.

It was then—and only then—that he stepped into a telephone booth to call the Girl in Boston. It was going to cost him his last penny, but he could think of nothing else to do. He couldn't tell his story on a telegraph blank; he couldn't explain his ambitious reasons for not writing. Now, when it was very late, he wanted the consolation of her voice.

He called her small hotel in Boston. The line was busy and, as he hung up to wait, the miracle happened. Well, not quite a miracle, because it's happened to most of us on a smaller scale. There was a heavy click and $12 in quarters dropped into the phone slot. Obviously, the previous occupant of the booth had made a long distance call—and the money had not fallen properly into the box!

The Boy didn't make that call to Boston. He raced down to the Pennsylvania station, bought his ticket out of the $12, and was on his way to join the Girl . . .

Well, strange things happen in this world of ours. When the Boy reached Boston, the Girl had been married just one hour—to another man. She wasn't particularly in love with this new bird, but he had promised her security and protection. And not having heard from the Boy, she thought he had given her the air.

So ended the romance of another Boy and another Girl. The Boy thought he was very lucky when that $12 dropped into the phone slot. And perhaps he was.

But if that $12 hadn't come along, he would have completed the call. And, if he had, it's 100-to-1 that the Girl would never have married the other man! . . .

Some hitherto unrevealed facts concerning the death of Eleanora Duse in the Hotel Schenley 10 years ago are given in The Quill for May in an article by Ben H. Atwell, who was the press agent for Mme. Duse on a farewell tour that actually proved to be one. Mr. Atwell, writing in The Quill, organ of the Theatrical Press Representatives of America, states that the great actress, although in delicate health, liked to get away from those who wished to guard her, perhaps to attend a picture show, "in drab habiliments of a peasant."

"Thus attired," writes Mr. Atwell, "she slipped out a side entrance with a maid and drove to the Mosque, two hours before the opening performance. They alighted before a locked door, dismissed the taxi and circled the building, sloshing through rain and snow for half an hour before locating the stage door. Meanwhile the handsome car provided for her stood neglected at the hotel, two blocks away.

"Oddly enough the performance that night was 'The Closed Door,' and Duse played it with unusual brilliance. She refused medical attention, and after the final curtain sought her bed, from which she never was to arise.

"No one, least of all herself, realized how ill the poor soul really was."

A note for those who like to "see the circus unload." The Hagenbeck-Wallace show will do that interesting thing about 6 o'clock Wednesday morning at the railroad tracks near Exposition Park, North Side, where the tents will be spread for two performances only. The parade, first to be seen here in several years, will begin at 10 o'clock. The big star of this show, who, by the way, is loaned to the Ringling circus each year for its New York performance in Madison Square Garden, is Clyde Beatty, who puts on that thrilling act with lions and tigers in a big steel cage. The fact that lions and tigers are natural enemies perhaps saved Beatty's life last summer in Cleveland. A tiger jumped him and then Nero, a huge lion, attacked the other cat, and the resulting combat ended in death for the striped beast. Beatty was badly hurt—in fact his injuries were expected to terminate fatally.

Sam H. Harris, former partner in production with George M. Cohan, has had at least one "smash hit" a year since the two boys parted 15 years ago, that of the season just closed being "As Thousands Cheer," which is still running in New York. Following is the record: The four Music Box Revues, "Captain Applejack," "The Nervous Wreck,' "Six Cylinder Love," "Rain," "Cradle Snatchers," "Nice People," "The Cocoanuts, "Animal Crackers,' "June Moon," "Once in a Lifetime," "Of Thee I Sing," "Dinner at Eight," "As Thousands Cheer.'

Down where they grow tobacco.. in most places Chesterfield is the largest-selling cigarette

—what does that mean?

—it means that down where they grow tobacco folks know that mild ripe tobaccos are bought for Chesterfield.

And because Chesterfields are made of the right kinds of tobacco, it is a milder cigarette, a cigarette that tastes better.

There is no substitute for mild, ripe tobacco.

BUCS DEPART FOR SERIES WITH REDS AND CARDS

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Hoyt's Fine Relief Work. Saving Games For Bucs. Pirate Brace Helps Race.
Hornsby Uplifts Playboy. Real Tennis Task Ahead. Little Aided by Armour.

If any relief pitcher in the major leagues is doing a more consistently good job for his club this season than Waite Hoyt is doing for the Pirates, the fact is not perceptible from this distance. Hoyt's name may not be written high in the column of games won by pitchers, but much of the credit for some of the victories marked up for other Pittsburgh hurlers is due to him. Hoyt rarely fails to give an excellent account of himself when called to the rescue of a stablemate. Usually he stops the opposing hitters cold, combining with a lot of pitching stuff one of the smartest heads in the game. Already he has appeared in 13 games, more than any other Pittsburgh pitcher, and the fine relief work he did against the Cardinals last Friday and yesterday was only in keeping with what he had been doing all season.. Even though not starting any games, Hoyt is one of the most valuable men on the Pirate staff.

Waite Hoyt

That was a tidy job of bracing the Buccaneers did in slowing down the drive of the Cardinals by grabbing three out of four. In three days here, the Redbirds lost exactcly half as many games as they had lost in 33 days previously, and for the first time in 33 straight games they were defeated twice in succession. In putting themselves in the fight, again the Gibsons did much to help the race in general by pulling the Missourians back in to what is virtually a three-cornered tie for first place.

GRIMES NOT DEPENDING ON HIS SPITBALL

In a strange league, where the hitters are new to him, Burleigh Grimes admits that he'll have to get some help for a while from Bill Dickey, Joe McCarthy and his fellow pitchers on the Yankee staff. But he feels sure he'll be all right after the first time around, and points out that the American League batters don't know any more about him than he knows about them.

Oddly enough, Burleigh says it's not his spitball that he's depending on to keep him in the big show. Of course, he plans to use it as much as he can and whenever he needs it, but he insists that he has regained his fast ball of 1931, and will make that his main hope, along with his curve and a screwball which he says he has been using for three years.

UPLIFTING OF HEMSLEY DUE TO HORNSBY

In the transformation of Rolly Hemsley from a playboy catcher who was only a burden to his club into one of the ranking stars of the American League, Rogers Hornsby must be given credit for an excellent bit of managerial work. Hemsley played under Hornsby before with the Cubs, as well as under Donie Bush with the Pirates and Reds, and under Jewel Ens with the Pirates. None of them could make him stick to business.

Rolly Hemsley

However, Hornsby never lost faith in Hemsley from the time he obtained Rolly from Pittsburgh in a trade for Earl Grace on May 29, 1931, and three weeks after Rogers became manager of the Browns last season he put through a waiver exchange to get Hemsley from the Reds for Jack Crouch. This spring, the St. Louis pilot took Rolly in hand, made him see the error of his way, pointed out to him that he was muffing an opportunity to become a high-salaried star, and caused him to realize that he was on the point of kicking away his last chance to remain in the big leagues. Hemsley listened to reason, stopped being a playboy, and under Hornsby's inspiration started in to capitalize on his wealth of natural ability. As a result he has become one of the standouts of the American League, and at his present sensational hitting pace he has a fine chance to be the leading batsman of the circuit at the close of the season.

REAL TEST OF DAVIS CUPPERS TO COME

While victory over Mexico, following the easy triumph over Canada, qualified the United States Davis Cup tennis team to meet the winner of the European zone, the task has only begun, and the hardest work is ahead. Decisive wins over Canada and Mexico are not to be taken as holding out promise of a cup capture, for the teams already defeated are not to be mentioned in the same breath with the stars standing between the Americans and the trophy.

Bill Tilden, frank as always, says that in its quest of the Davis Cup, "the United States team will get no farther than the other side of the Atlantic Ocean." And Tilden probably knows more about tennis than any other man alive. He said last year that the Americans would not get past England, and he was exactly right. But let's hope that Bill is wrong this time, for once in his life. Admittedly, the contract is an appalling one, but the team has met every requirement so far and is entitled to be considered in the running until it is beaten. Tennis has its upsets, like every other sport. There's a chance, at least, if the U. S. L. T. A. big shots will just keep their hands off while the team is in Europe and let Dick Williams and Hans Nusslein run things.

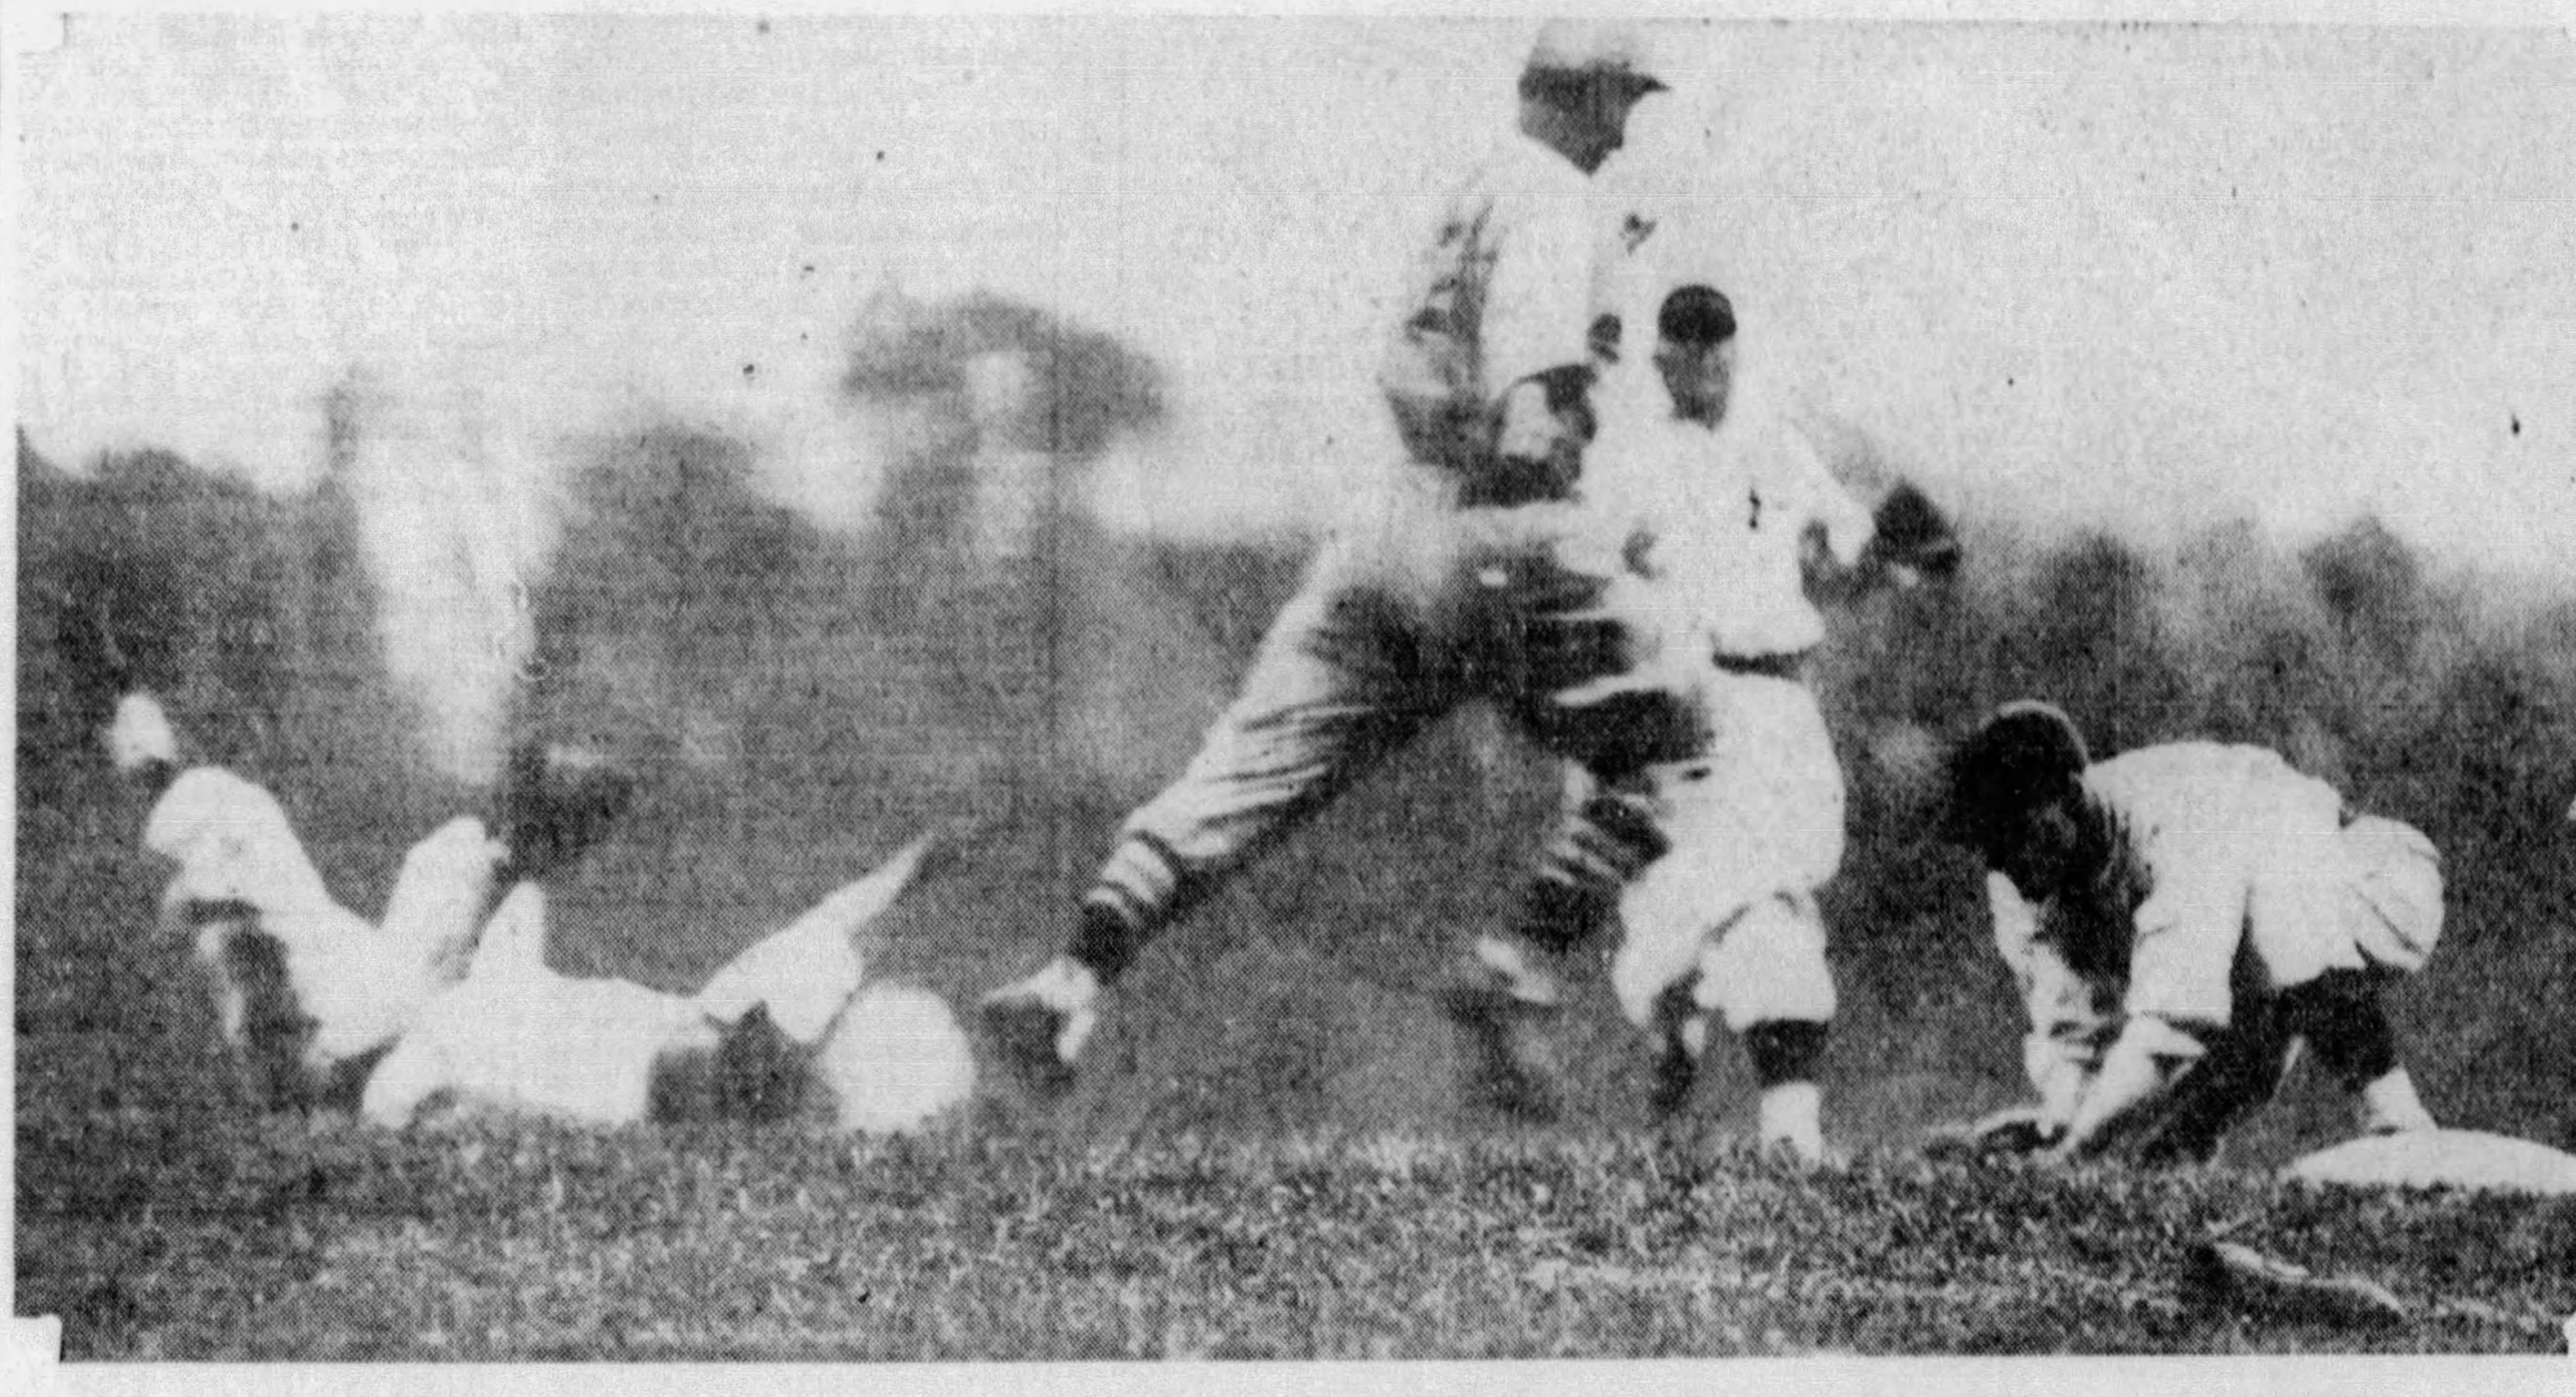
ARMOUR BRINGS LITTLE'S IMPROVEMENT

The improved play that enabled Lawson Little, one of the amateur hopes in the national open this week, to win the British amateur golf championship with record-breaking figures is being credited largely to Tommy Armour, a great teacher of golf as well as a great player. Though Little's long game in the United States amateur championship at Cincinnati last September astonished the galleries, his weakness around and on the greens was so apparent that his father decided to take him to Chicago and engage Armour to coach him in short iron play and putting. It was Lawson's remarkable pickup in those departments that carried him to the British title this year, and golf men insist that it's all due to Armour's tutoring.

Tommy Armour

Armour is one of the few great golfers who also are capable teachers. The majority of them don't care to teach. Explaining this attitude, Armour says that in teaching golf you not alone have to show your pupil the right way to make a shot, but you also must show him what he is doing that is wrong. To impress him with his faults, Tommy goes on, it is necessary to demonstrate, and that is what keeps many good golfers from teaching. They do not care to demonstrate to their pupils what mistakes the latter are making because they fear that repeated demonstrations will cause the tutor to acquire unconsciously some of the very same faults they are seeking to correct.

How's This for Getting Your Man on the Ball Field?



Unusual fielding play which featured the Pirates' victory over the Cardinals at Forbes Field yesterday, 4-2. With Delancey on third and Orsatti on first and two out, Durocher hit a weak roller between Meine and Suhr. Meine dove headfirst, scooped the ball and pushed it to Suhr in time for the putout at first base. The play, which may have saved the game, was a pip. Note Meine rolling over after getting rid of the ball in this on-the-job Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

FRANK BROIDA DOWNS DAVE O'LOUGHLIN

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Frankk Broida, that redoubtable young southpaw from Harvard, yesterday achieved the goal of all aspiring local netmen, a victory over Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace and Pittsburgh's claim to fame in the national court realm.

Frank Broida

Braving the terrific humidity after a heavy shower had laid the dust of the North Aiken rectangles, Broida eliminated the Winged Header, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, in semi-final contest of the third annual Stanton Heights invitation men's singles tennis tourney and thereby earned place in the windup against the survivor of the opposite bracket, who may be either Dr. John O'Loughlin, champion of Western Pennsylvania; Charley Lockhart, former Princeton luminary, or Paul Barber, Penn State and 1932 premier of Northwestern Pennsylvania.

A sizable gallery out-stayed the rain to see Broida turn in his unexpected but well earned win. The match actually was called off and Broida had trekked back home to Squirrel Hill when the clouds parted and it was decided by Chairman George Henderson that the tilting might go on. Broida was called at once and he promptly returned to the scene of battle.

The triumph over Dave constituted a clean sweep of the O'Loughlin trio for Broida, who downed Dr. John in the Western Maryland wind-up last summer and defeated Billy in the Stanton Heights finale a few weeks later.

The Heights competition will be resumed in a day or so with John O'Loughlin engaging Lockhart. Meanwhile the lone racquet event of moment will be the Interscholastic Conference singles championship conclave under the sponsorship of Capt. W. A. Palmer at Shady Side Academy. Each conference school is entitled to enter one contender in the affair. Play will get under way Friday and will be pushed through the quarter-finals that afternoon. Semi-final jousts are set for Saturday morning, with the final Saturday afternoon. The Ellsworth House of the Shady Side Academy has placed up the trophy for the victor. Entrants must file their names not later than tomorrow.

Near Riot Marks Defeat of Irish

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP.)—A near-riot developed at the Yankee Stadium yesterday as an all-New York team defeated Cavan, Ireland's Gaelic football champions, 9-7.

Enraged over an umpire's decision late in the game, a crowd of 5,000 swarmed out on the playing field in protest. Police—62 of them—advanced onto the field to meet the crowd and finally drove the spectators back into their seats after 20 minutes' work. Clubs were swung freely by the police as they broke up private fights which started on the playing field.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: FAITH UNTO DEATH—The Huia birds inhabiting the mountain ranges of New Zealand are hatched in pairs, male and female, which are absolutely dependent upon each other. The male has a strong short beak with which he attacks the bark and sound portions of dead timber, while the female's beak is highly curved and used to probe the wood for grubs. If one of the birds should die the other invariably will starve to death. The natives deem the Huia the perfect symbol of marital harmony. The birds' tail-feathers are highly prized as the native badge of mourning.

U. S. NETTERS MEET DEFEAT

PARIS, June 4.—(AP.)—For the second time in as many years, America has failed to snare a single title in the French hard court tennis championships.

Beaten by Margaret Scriven, of England, for the women's singles championship Saturday, Helen Jacobs, United States champion, fought another losing battle yesterday when she and Sarah Palfrey, of Boston, were beaten in the final round of women's doubles by Elizabeth Ryan and Mme. Rene Mathieu, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Two other championships were decided yesterday, the closing day of the tournament. The French veterans, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, won the men's doubles, defeating Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, of Australia, in a marathon duel, 11-9, 6-3, 2-6, 4-6, 9-7. Borotra and Colette Rosambert annexed the mixed doubles crown, beating Miss Ryan and Adrian Quist, of Australia, 6-2, 6-4.

RUNYAN FINDS MERION TOUGH

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—(AP.)—Many contenders for the nation's most prized golfing trophy—the national open crown—tested their shots on the 1934 battleground today.

Already three sub-par rounds have been carded in practice, with the most outstanding the 67 chalked up by Paul Runyan, favorite from White Plains, N. Y. He was three under theoretical perfection.

But that was three days ago, and Runyan now is having his troubles—or, rather, his trouble, for it all seems to lie on the eighteenth hole. In four practice rounds, the diminutive New Yorker's tee shot has failed to carry a quarry on the home hole, and has kept his pre-tourney scores well above par since his first day's 67.

BIG SPORTS PROGRAM

A three days' sports celebration is being arranged for Elisabeth, July 2, 3 and 4, to include track and field, quoit pitching, pushball, swimming and motor boating.

ST. LOUIS BOWS TO LOCALS IN FINAL HERE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Waner Act with the rest of the Pirate cast is showing at Springfield, O., today. The big-timers from Pittsburgh are breaking a jump to Cincinnati and St. Louis as they take on the Springfield Pirates of the Mid-Atlantic League. The Buccos meet the Reds tomorrow.

The sidetrip of the Buccaneers gave them a chance to rest up from their strenuous series with the league-leading Cardinals, completed yesterday at Forbes Field. Winning the third contest of the four-game set, the Rovers crept within two games of the top. The score was 4 to 2.

BUCS GAIN GROUND

The final contest with the Redbirds was rich in significance. Before it started, the Gibsons were three games in arrears. So the locals were shooting to climb within two of the crest or to drop four games beneath the leaders.

The present tour will be of one week's duration. The Bucs are due to dock at Cincy late tonight. From the Ohio city the Pittsburghers will travel to the home of the Cards.

Seven league battles are listed for the trip. The humble Reds will entertain the Pirates in four games, a dual bill being slated for Wednesday. Three singles will be staged at St. Louis.

Next Monday is open on the Pittsburgh playing chart, but the Bucs will be busy in Indianapolis where they will cross bats with the Hoosiers of the American Association. One week from tomorrow the Pirates will be back at the home lot to inaugurate a three weeks' stay in Oakland.

HOMER FOR PEPPER

Heinie Meine and Waite Hoyt were too much for the Redbirds in the last fight. Meine pitched shutout ball until two were out in the seventh. At this point Pepper Martin put his club in the game with a two-run homer. Heinie retired the next hitter, but he was bothered so much by the heat he was taken out in favor of his brother righthander. Meine's diving assist on Durocher's tap was a high spot of the game.

Hoyt was so keen on the warm afternoon he snuffed out six St. Louis hitters to clinch the victory. Waite had the topnotchers hitting the ball he wanted them to hit.

Timely hitting plus loose battery work on the part of the invaders enabled the Pirates to win. Tex Carleton had so much on the ball the Pirates did not get a blow until the fourth, when Traynor singled with one out.

Vaughan followed his captain with a single and each runner advanced on a wild pitch by Tex. Pie scored on Suhr's out. Tommy Thevenow came through with a lucky double in the fifth and Meine doubled in the same round to bolster the Pirate lead.

PIE SCORES AGAIN

Traynor scored again in the sixth. Pie singled and Arky advanced him with a sacrifice. Suhr flied out, but Woodie Jensen singled and Pie galloped home with the winning run, as late events proved.

Martin's blow came in the seventh, but this damage was partly discounted in the eighth. Vaughan walked and moved up on a passed ball. He was on third with two out when Thevenow singled for the run.

Manager Frank Frisch, of the Cardinals, recorded his two thousandth National League game as his club lost. Frank broke in with the Giants in the middle of the 1919 season.

Chillysauce.

Pitcher Hal Smith was not with the Pirates when they left for Springfield today. Smith has a throat ailment which may need the attention of a surgeon. He will see a specialist.

Fred Lindstrom had a fine workout yesterday and the injured outfielder was aboard when the Buccos departed for the West. Fred thinks he may be able to play before the week is over.

Wallie Roettger is the type of outfielder who shows at his best when in a winning lineup. Wally has won the fans of Pittsburgh in no uncertain way. He drove in five runs on two hits in the Bucs' victory of Saturday.

Roettger's brother Oscar, who pilots the Toronto club of the International League, is in a hospital recovering from a blow on the head sustained in Saturday's play. The Pirate player called his brother by telephone and was able to speak to him.

Pittsburgh fighters seem to thrive on the Coast. The Zivic kids cut a wide swath in California and the later bulletins show George Susce to have won a one-punch scrap at Los Angeles.

The Calico Hill catcher started a nice riot as he dropped a pitcher who clipped George with a pitched ball. Susce has been catching regularly for the Hollywood Stars.

Manager Frisch saw Pepper Martin playing volley ball with a bunch of playground kids in Oakland, so he decided to let the "wild horse" swing back into action.. A pretty fast recovery for one who was almost crushed by Shanty Hogan a few days ago. Francis is so big he's afraid to get on the scales.

MAJOR LEAGUES PROFIT AS FLAG RACES BECOME TIGHTER

TEAMS BUNCHED FOR LEADS IN BOTH LOOPS

Associated Press.

If close pennant races mean money in the pocket for baseball magnates, prosperity must be right at hand instead of just around the corner for several owners of big league clubs.

The standings in both major circuits today showed the keenest competition for the top places the season has produced so far with three clubs in a virtual tie for the National League lead and another trio grouped in the space of a single game at the American League apex.

BUCS CHECK CARDS

It took three of yesterday's four games to bring the National League tangle into its present status. Pittsburgh's Pirates knocked off the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, 4 to 2. That left the Cards only a few percentage points in front of New York and Chicago, who once again went into a tie.

The Phillies, led out of their seven-game slump by Irvine Jeffries, turned back the Giants, 6 to 2, while the Cubs pounded out a 7-to-1 triumph over Cincinnati. Jeffries walloped two homers to back up some expert elbowing by Curt Davis. The Cubs piled up 15 blows, including Gabby Hartnett's eleventh circuit swat of the year.

The fourth National League game aided Pittsburgh's return to fourth place after a day in the second division. With Emil (Dutch) Leonard on the hill, the Brooklyn Dodgers snapped a seven-game winning streak of the Boston Braves by a 5-to-1 count.

YANKS LEAD AGAIN

The New York Yankees returned to the American League lead with a 5-to-3 victory over Philadelphia in a battle of the home run kings. Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig hit a homer apiece for the Yanks and Jimmy Foxx drove out two for the A's. It made 13 apiece for Gehrig and Foxx and nine for the Babe.

Detroit trailed a half game behind the Yanks into second place with a smashing 11-2 triumph over the Chicago White Sox.

The St. Louis Browns knocked the Cleveland Indians from first place to third, winning a 12-to-8 slugfest on the strength of a seven-run outburst in the sixth. The Browns, incidentally, advanced to fourth place as the Boston Red Sox pounded out a 7-to-2 decision over Washington behind Fritz Ostermueller's steady flinging.

Pigeon Is Close Winner in Race

A bird flying to the Herman loft of the Lawrenceville Center turned in the best speed average in the 400-mile race from Terre Haute, Ind., staged by the Pittsburgh Racing Pigeon Concourse yesterday, but its margin of victory was so scant as to hardly be discernible.

The Herman bird was clocked in 1313.736, while a bird to the Deuber loft finished with a mark of 1313.732. A Knuth bird was timed in 1313.47.

Pfirman Battles With Irate Fan

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP.)—A lively fistic encounter between an unidentified fan and Umpire Cy Pfirman provided a climax to yesterday's game at the Polo Grounds in which the Phillies defeated the Giants, 6-2.

As the fans left the stands after the final out, one of them dashed across the diamond, seized the umpire by the sleeve, whirled him around and began to throw punches. Pfirman grabbed his opponent's necktie, hauled him around a bit and retaliated with some rather wild swings.

HEIDELBERG VICTOR

The Heidelberg soccer team defeated Curry, 1 to 0, at Curry yesterday to clinch the Keystone League title. P. Pawlik scored the lone goal of the game. The lineup:

Heidelberg—1.		Curry—0.
Ramous	C.	Stanko
M. Kuten	R.B.	Gimarolli

Hillen	R.H.	G. Bookie

Dolinar	O.R.	Supinski
F. Urbanic	I.R.	Kirk
P. Pawlik	C.	Molly

FORMER STAR, NOW COACH OF PIRATES.

To the Sports Editor:

Cincinnati may not stand so high in the National League, but they are at the top in the Union Terminal League. They have got the niftiest railroad station of any in the country and it is worth a trip there just to see it. You don't have to be such a oldtimer to remember the dumps they had there not so long ago. In those days you didn't mind the station so much because you knew you were pretty close to some of that good Cincinnati beer, but now you forget all about beer when you walk around the station admiring it. A fellow named Henry Waite, who, they tell me, now is with the PWA in Washington, was the engineer on the Cincinnati station.

Here is the working plan for the William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup motorboating regatta to be held under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club at Oakmont, Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15. Drivers from all over the country will compete, and the event is expected to attract upwards of 200,000 spectators. The pits are the tie-up barges, where the boats will be docked between races. Three bouys at each end of the course will mark the turning points for the boats. All of the officials and the loud speaker apparatus will be on the judges' barge. The course measures 1¼ miles.

The champion Book nine, defending titlist in the City League, opens a busy week of play this evening.

This evening the Beltzhoover tossers, under Bill Hite, invade Olympia Park for a tussle with the champion. Last week, at McKinley Park, the Hitemen had the Books well on the run until a rookie shortstop proceeded to toss the game away.

Women will be admitted free this evening at Greenlee Field as the Crawfords and Newark Dodgers wind up their four-game series. The Dodgers hold a two-to-one edge, having taken both ends of a double bill from the locals yesterday. They won the first game, 16 to 1, slugging Bell and Streeter hard, and then came back to take the second, 10 to 5, Hunter being the victim of the easterners' bats in this encounter.

In the Greater Pittsburgh circuit yesterday, Lincoln topped the State Highway nine, 8 to 6, and Resurrection walloped the Native Sons, 15 to 6.

Playing at West Newton, the Parmelee team, of the City League, defeated West Newton, 9 to 1. The Knapils won over the Stowe Cards, 11 to 8, in a slugfest. Mt. Oliver took the Duquesne Collegians, 13 to 3, and the Homestead Grays won a double header in Michigan, beating Somerfield first, 16 to 3, and then knocking off Flint, 14 to 4.

PIE TRAYNOR, OF PIRATES . . . . VOTED BEST THIRDSACKER IN MAJORS—AGAIN

Back in 1924 Babe Ruth's All-America Board of Baseball began to pick its all-star major league teams. Pie Traynor, of the Pirates, was named at third base. Since then he has been similarly honored by the Board every year with the exception of 1925, when Ossie Bluege got the call, and 1928 and 1930, when Freddie Lindstrom was named. In other words, above he's looking at his 1933 All-America sweater and certificate, his seventh of each, just received, and wondering how long this will continue. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

With the possibility that he may go to Europe for a series of three bouts this summer, under the direction of Jeff Dickson, the famous promoter, Teddy Yarosz, of Monaca, the uncrowned middleweight champion, may be making his only start of the outdoor season at home tonight, when he boxes gratis as the headliner of the benefit show for the family of the late Mike Ray, his former second, at Hickey Park, Millvale.

Yarosz had been looking forward to an active summer here, topped off by a championship match of 15 rounds with Vince Dundee at Forbes Field, but the fates have intervened, in the form of Dundee's refusal to try conclusions with him with the title at stake after having lost to Teddy twice before winning the crown, and Teddy is not inclined to sit down and cry over spilled milk, but rather to seek his fortune where he may find it.

LITTLE FINANCIAL RETURN

That fortune, by the way, is not so eager to fly to Yarosz for all of Teddy's class and winning form. Feeling himself going stale from lack of work, he recently invaded West Virginia and got a bout with Fritz Heinz under his belt, for which the pay was very, very poor, hardly more than training expenses, and when Mike Ray died Yarosz offered his services entirely free for the benefit show to be held tonight, in which he will be encountering a tough war horse in Pete Latzo, the former welterweight champion. That can't be considered very heavy financial return for two successive engagements. At the same time Yarosz turned down a reputed offer of $5,000 to meet Anson Green because he did not believe the latter's limited experience justified the making of such a match from the standpoint of the customers, who pay the freight.

Some idea of just where Yarosz stands in the middleweight scheme of things may be gained from the fact that Dundee, after months of negotiating, passed him by, and a number of other middleweight contenders did the same thing when asked to box him at the benefit. They placed their price so high that to engage them would leave little or nothing for the beneficiaries.

SHORT CUT FOR LATZO

Latzo is taking on Yarosz as a business stroke. Pete is doing a comeback after a considerable layoff and already has engaged in a few bouts, and he believes that with his ruggedness and experience he may give Teddy a great fight and take a short cut back to the heights, and the bout very well may turn out to be another such tough test for Yarosz as his meeting with Tommy Freeman, another former welterweight champion, in the same ring last summer. Incidentally, Latzo will be the fourth man to hold a title met by Yarosz. Teddy boxed Dundee, pion, twice, Freeman and Ben Jeby, a former middleweight champion, winning all of these bouts.

Because of the length of the card—there are seven six-round preliminaries—tonight's show will get under way at 8 o'clock. Here are the preliminaries:

Mose Butch, Pittsburgh, vs. U. S. Chocolate, Detroit.
Max Elling, Pittsburgh, vs. Jimmy Belmont, Braddock.
Charley Burns, Johnstown, vs. Dario Marino, Detroit.
Johnny Durso, Pittsburgh, vs. Patsy Severo, Meadville.
Al Quaill, Pittsburgh, vs. Bearcat Jones, Pittsburgh.
Joey Speigal, Uniontown, vs. Billy Holt, Pittsburgh.

PRO-AMATEUR PLAY TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

The first pro-amateur tournament scheduled by the Caddie Masters and Assistant Professionals' Golf Association, is being played this afternoon over the links of the Churchill Valley Golf Club, where 25 members of the association teamed up with selected amateurs of the home club.

While the pro body has been holding these affairs regularly, this is the first time that the junior body has put on such an event.

The Fox Chapel Golf Club today will see the Interscholastic Conference crown pass from Kiski for the first time in three years, or since the inception of the organization. Sewickley, conquerer of Kiski, and Turtle Creek will battle it out over 18 holes for the title.

Denny Shute, British open champion, and Tom Hudgins, trick short artist from Pasadena, Cal., finished all square with Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, and Emil Loeffler, of Oakmont, in their four-ball best ball exhibition match at the Oakmont Country Club yesterday afternoon.

Little spectacular golf was offered the large gallery. Both teams had the same best ball, 73's one over par. Loeffler saved the day for the local stars, when with his side 1 down coming to the last green, he shot a par four while the others took fives.

Fred Brand, Jr., Appendicitis Victim

Stricken with appendicitis while playing at Shannopin yesterday, Fred Brand, Jr., young golf star, of Sewickley, was recovering today in the Valley General Hospital following an emergency operation. His condition was reported as good.

Brand is the son of the veteran professional at the Allegheny Country Club and is the former Penn State College golf and basketball captain. He is one of the leading amateur golfers in Western Pennsylvania.

MODEL HOUSE USES AIR SYSTEM

CHICAGO, June 4.—That home Mr. and Mrs. Average American have wanted to build for years is being constructed at A Century of Progress so that at least 2,000,000 visitors from every part of the land may have their first feel of the year-round comfort that comes from air conditioning.

Announcement of construction of the Frigidaire air conditioned house on the shore of Lake Michigan near the General Motors building was made by E. G. Biechler, president of Frigidaire, and Rufus C. Dawes, president of the World's Fair.

MODERN DESIGN

Modern in architectural design, the air conditioned house will be of the type 80 to 90 per cent of the great middle class of Americans would like to have, Mr. Biechler said. Not a wonder home with gadget after gadget that none but the well-to-do can afford and none but the mechanically minded can operate, the Frigidaire house will reflect in design, furnishings and appliances the simplicity most people desire, he said. The home is proof of Frigidaire's and General Motors' belief that air conditioning has arrived as a practical and potent factor in every day life.

Two outstanding features will dominate the house, Mr. Biechler said:

First, the comfort that is possible under all weather conditions and in all climates by use of home air conditioning.

Second, a lifetime kitchen, immaculate in its appearance, outstanding in its efficiency, but inexpensive in its cost.

KITCHEN IMPORTANT

Motive behind the construction of the house, Mr Biechler said, is the desire to offer Worlds Fair visitors the opportunity to feel for themselves the wonders of home air conditioning, a relatively new accomplishment that insures healthful and refreshing atmosphere in summer, spring and fall as well as winter. He said:

"The kitchen has been given special attention because we believe that housewives generally obtain a great deal of pleasure from an efficiently designed, attractive kitchen equipped with ample work space, cupboards, electric refrigeration and other necessities. Gleaming white porcelain-on-steel appliances are outstanding features.

"The way in which various types of air conditioning are applicable to the average home is clearly demonstrated. The first floor of the home is air conditioned with a duct system operated from a central system in the basement. The upstairs rooms have units of various types to insure comfortable conditions to meet the individual requirements of the occupants, and demonstrate how individual rooms can be equipped.

"The house is thoroughly insulated and has double-pane glass to prevent temperature loss during either the heating or the cooling season. We sincerely believe the air conditioned house will be the most comfortable spot at the fair and will be a mecca for visitors on hot and sultry days as well as on cool days."

The sunken garden in which the house is under contsruction will be landscaped in a manner fitting to the design of the house and resting place for visitors will be provided on the Lake Michigan side. The house will face the lake, the entrance and working quarters opening toward Leif Ericson drive, main thoroughfare of the exposition.

The new construction will carry out Japan's policy of covering the whole of Manchukuo with a network of commercial and military railroads.

Drought Hits Prospect For Trade Activity

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

FACED WITH THE greatest destruction of crops since the drought of 1894 business is becoming seriously worried about the weather.

The wheat producing areas of the West are the hardest hit, but other regions also are being hurt. One estimate places the destruction of the wheat crop at 1,000,000 bushels for each day the drought continues. Lack of pasture lands may force government agricultural control units to bring about the slaughtering of 500,000 to 1,000,000 cattle faced with starvation and lack of water. In many areas the growing wheat has been damaged to such an extent that the parched fields will not produce enough seed for next year's crop. In others, rain still could stave off much of the loss.

In spite of this devastation, however, it is improbable that there will be any shortage of wheat. Carryovers from previous years give assurance that the supply will be adequate. Business is worried because of the destruction in purchasing power in the drought areas and also from the fact that the drought may result in high prices for milk and vegetables in all parts of the country and that this may affect the ability of consumers to buy products other than food.

Gasoline Sales Drop in West

THE FIRST tangible indication of the effect of the drought on business has been seen in the sales of gasoline in the Dakotas and Minnesota. Consumption has dropped 25 per cent under a year ago which was not a good year. Many jobbers of gasoline are cutting down the number of stations in these states while some of the major companies are reducing the number of bulk plants.

Operators of chain stores and mail order houses report that the drought in the Northwest and Middle West as yet has had no serious effect on sales. The chains, however, are keeping close check on the drought situation The point was made that trade in not only the drought areas, but in the large cities contiguous to and dependent upon these sections would be adversely affected. Merchandise shipments to stores in the drought areas are being curtailed by the chains and the purchases of smaller merchants in the areas are expected to be curtailed. The drought, of course, does not immediately affect money in the pockets of farmers, but its effect will increase as the summer goes on and farmers fail to get their usual income.

Cotton Not Seriously Hit

UP TO THE present time cotton producing areas have not been seriously hurt, although precipitation has been less than normal in some sections. Good rains can still save the corn crop, most of which is planted in May. So far the effect on corn has been in retarded germination. Rains can still make the seed sprout, but this would result in a late crop, which would be endangered by early frosts.

Reflecting the drought, wheat prices surged upward last week and crossed the $1 a bushel line for the first time since August, 1933, only to react sharply on Saturday, when all deliveries except December dropped slightly below $1. The break on Saturday followed reports of rains in Canadian wheat areas and may have been influenced by the fact that prices had surged upward too rapidly on disaster news. The break uncovered stop loss orders and the market did not have the steadying influence of short covering.

PITT WORKERS TO REPORT

Final reports of the 500 workers in the drive for $1,650,000 to complete the Cathedral of Learning will be made at a meeting in the William Penn Hotel at noon Thursday. To date $564,443 has been subscribed.

An invitation to speak at the meeting has been sent Hervey Allen, former Pittsburgher and author, who is coming to Pittsburgh this week to receive an honorary doctor of letters from the University of Pittsburgh, his alma mater.

DOHERTY LINKED IN POWER DEAL

WASHINGTIN, June 4.—(AP.)—Telegrams purporting to show that Henry L. Doherty, head of the Cities Service Utility System, attempted to stop Charles E. Mitchell, former head of National City Company, from financing what Doherty described as a raiding competitor were presented today to the Trade Commission in its utility investigation.

The telegrams consisted of an exchange between Doherty and Mitchell, who was summoned to testify, in which Doherty said that a $20,000,000 loan to finance a gas pipe line from Texas to the East would "smash rates" and demoralize the natural gas business in the area covered.

Mitchell, however, the telegrams said, approved the loan and the pipe line was constructed.

The pipe line, built by Frank Parish, was undertaken with the help of Columbia Gas and Electric Company of Ohio.

Robert E. Healy, commission counsel, said Parish was under indictment in Chicago on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Doherty characterized Parish in one telegram to Mitchell as a "bad risk from a business and moral standpoint."

BANKER FREED ON BOND

Leonard B. Shannon, former president and conservator of the Jefferson County National Bank, at Brookville, was at liberty under $25,000 bond today following his arrest late Saturday on charges of misapplication of $52,534 of the bank's funds.

Arrested by Deputy United States Marshal D. A. Goldman, Shannon was taken before United State Commissioner John Fordsythe, at Clearfield, where he posted bond for an appearance in Federal Court at Erie in September.

Shannon, defeated Democratic nomine for State Treasurer in 1932, was accused of shortages following a thorough investigation of the bank by Department of Justice agents.

NEW GRADUATES CAN BRING HOPE, COURAGE TO JOB

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Mr. Rukeyser

NEW YORK, June 4.—The economic consequences of an important new crop—a crop of graduates from the schools and colleges of the country, who will soon come on the labor market—need to be assessed.

With millions of older men still unemployed, youth starts out under unquestioned obstacles.

Nevertheless, the ferment resulting from the "New Deal" creates opportunities for open-minded persons who are free from the prejudices and settled habits of the old-timers. In general business needs a leadership which can combine technological skill with a recognition of social values. Private initiative and enterprise will survive by demonstrating that they can provide higher living standards and greater human happiness than other systems.

Curiously enough, the colleges and universities, which unleashed academic critics of established business, are beginning to find the fruits of their sowing reflected in depreciation of their own security portfolios. With huge income and inheritance taxes, it is open to serious question whether in the years ahead such institutions will be as liberally endowed as in the past by wealthy business men.

COURAGE OF YOUTH

As for the new graduates, they can thrive in proportion as they bring new hope and courage to their work. A head of one large corporation remarked to me:

"I prefer the courage of youth to the timidity of age."

The advantage of youth is freedom from tradition. Youth must understand the new appreciation of applying bookkeeping methods to the totality of business. They should b estirred by the realization that high living standards and liberal pay for workers create the foundation for thriving business.

Youth must understand that new frontiers of economic progress remain to be conquered, but, starting out during a period of unemployment, they must be prepared for initial disappointment and barriers.

There is a marked advantage over the long pull in starting near the bottom and getting in early under a new regimen of business.

Some recession in business, drought and the threat of legislation which the conservative financial community regarded as deflationary tended to break stock prices toward the close of the week. The market position was weakened also by the new disposition of some important financiers to accumulate uninvested cash. When, if and as conditions arise to give them renewed confidence, there would, of course, he a scramble for securities.

The actual setback in business—largely seasonal in character—is slight, compared with the jolt to sentiment. June may prove a decisive month, as Congress adjourns, the nature of the drought becomes better revealed, and the labor situation becomes clarified.

RECESSION SLIGHT

One outstanding businessman expressed the view that the setback in business would not exceed 5 per cent from the recent peak. He thought that the best way for the administration to influence the "managed recovery" constructively was to facilitate the attainment of a balanced economy through further raising farm prices.

When comparisons are made with a year ago, the current record looks distinctly more cheerful.

Now that the stock exchange control bill is about to become law, Wall street can cease worrying about its internal troubles and grinding its own axe, and resume its function of reflecting the views of buyers and sellers concerning the economic outlook.

Of course, the margin provision permitting loans up to 75 per cent of the lowest price in the test period takes some of the immediate sting out of the new margin requirements.

Nevertheless, unless the law is weakened, the tendency as time goes on, will be to narrow the range of trading—and put the market nearer an investment basis.

This would mean that the brokerage business is no longer a Klondike.

NATIONAL DRY GOODS MEN MEET

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Of greatest interest to the entire retail trade is the convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association which opens its four-day gathering at the Palmer House in Chicago today.

For the first time the New Deal as it affects the retailer will be put under the microscope in a cold, concrete major, through the presentation of facts and figures on just how the retailer has fared under the NRA, how he benefitted, how he has been affected, and of real importance, how the consumer has been helped or hindered, as seen by the retail trade.

There are several subjects scheduled to come up during the convention, which are seen as offering a challenge to retailers, and depending upon what action is taken regarding them, may result in far reaching changes which will affect the entire trade.

While up until the present time much has been written and said about the effect of the NRA upon business and industry, the large and small businessman, little or nothing has been said about the effect of the NRA upon the consumer and how he has reacted.

The retail trade, the nation's major channel of distribution, is the only form of industry or business which deals directly with the entire population , and on the basis of the contacts of stores in different parts of the country will be presented a picture of the change in the consumer since the NRA was started.

With more than 1,000 retailers from every section of the country scheduled to attend, and armed with facts and figures on their operations since the code became effective, many interesting findings are expected to be presented.

Topics in Wall Street

Rains in Drought Area, Labor Accords Buoy Sentiment in Stock Market

While stocks continued to hover around the May low points, which market analysts considered a crucial level, somewhat better sentiment was evident today in the firmer tendencies of share prices through the forenoon. Reported agreement for settlement of the Toledo strike and rains in some drought areas influenced a little buying in motor and mail order groups. With only 170,000 shares changing hands on the stock exchange during the first two hours, the market was still an exceedingly thin affair.

Rumors were abroad around brokerage houses that a group of speculators, having been successful on the bull side of the grain market recently and finding stocks too dull to invite participation in that market, had switched their operations to the cotton market, anticipating that the crop would deteriorate from this point. Cotton news lately, however, has not been favorable to bulls on the staple for growing weather in the cotton belt has been good.

Rains in Nebraska and other drought areas of the Middle West stimulated a little buying in mail order shares, which had been depressed on assumption that crop losses would cut farm purchasing power. May sales of mail order houses began to reect the effects of drought. Montgomery Ward's May sales in St. Paul and Kansas City territories, Wall street heard were ahead of last year but gains in those districts, covering most of the drought area, did not match the improvement shown in other sales territories. Retail trade reportts from other sources also emphasize the blighting effect of drought upon trade as well as crops.

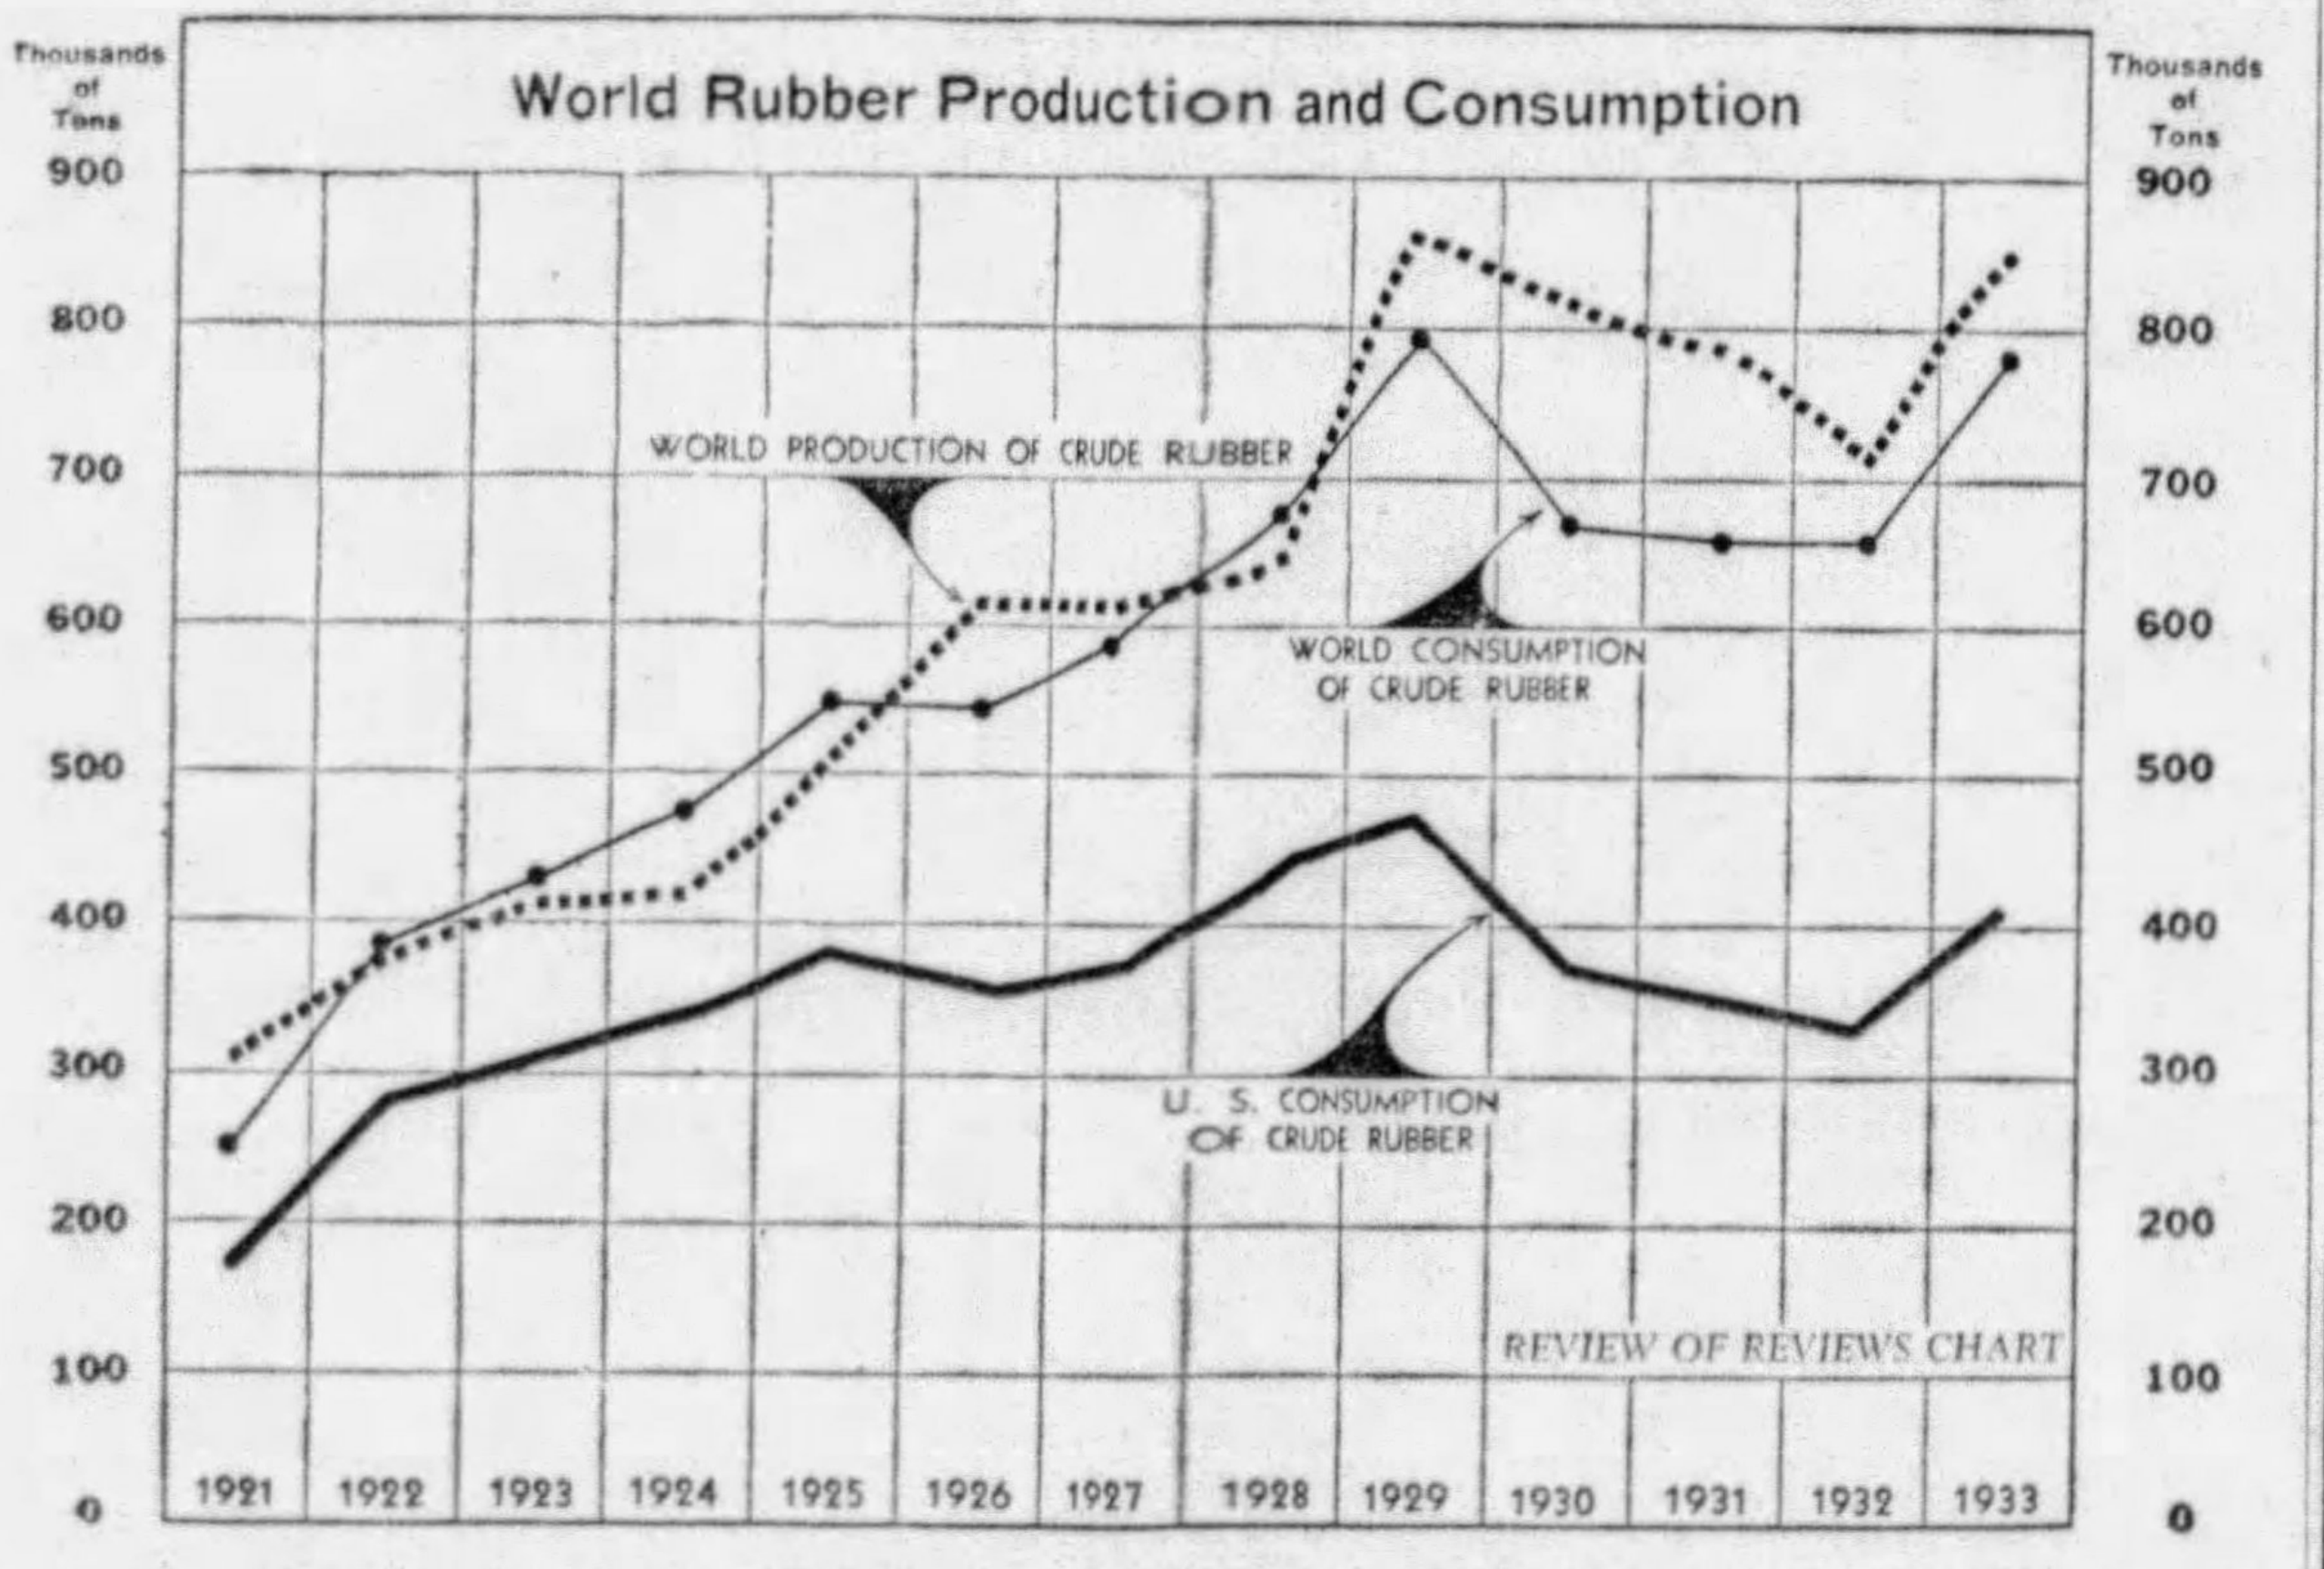
June Treasury financing, as announced over the week-end at Washington, was much smaller than Wall street had expected until recently. Earlier in the spring it was thought the government would undertake a huge refunding operation in June. However, no early let-up in government spending to promote business recovery was indicated in the week-end news, for it included details of favorable action in the House Appropriation Committee on a bill placing $6,000,000,000 in funds and credit at disposal of President Roosevelt for relief and recovery expenditures, the largest peacetime allocation of its kind. Cash appropriation included $1,172,000,000 for highway, public works and other projects which would benefit heavy industries.

Competition in the low-priced automobile field is expected to become more intensive as the result of price reductions on passenger cars announced by the Chevrolet Motor Company, subsidiary of General Motors. About 75 per cent of passenger car sales are concentrated in the low-priced field. Wall street interpreted the price cuts as an attempt to spur retail demand in face of seasonal tendencies to decline and ass a retreat from the advance in prices made in.

Ford failed to follow the spring price advance made by his principal competitors, with the result his sales have been holding relatively well in contract with declines elsewhere.

Further improvement in the financial position of railroads is indicated in the expansion of freight movement recently at a somewhat better-than-seasonal rate. Finances of some carriers have improved sufficiently to ecourage hope of additional dividend resumptions or increases. Attention is focused on the directors' meeting of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe schoduled tomorrow, in view of official forecast that the road would more thin cover its $5 dividend on preferred stock for the 12 months to end June 30. The Santa Fe has been paying only part of the preferred dividend.

World Rubber Output Running Ahead of Current Consumption



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews

The accompanying chart shows the world production of crude rubber, its consumption, and the best part played in the rubber picture by the United States. At the present time approximately one-half the total output of rubber is consumed in this country.

During recent years, particularly since the application of the Stevenson plan, the proportion of the total output consumed by the United States has tended to decline. This is due partly to a general world increase in rubber consumption, more rapid than that experienced in the United States, and also to the greater use of reclaimed rubber in this country.

In spite of the diminished importance of the United States as a preponderant market for the rubber producers, it nevertheless remains a vital factor and it is important that the rubber producers proceed warily in their efforts to raise prices. The United States has always been anti-monopoly minded, and this aversion to control expresses itself much more forcibly against a foreign than a domestic combination.

One weakness in the rubber picture may be noted in the gap between consumption and production This gap first appeared in a serious way during 1926. Consumption then kept up with output, but was again exceeded by it in 1929. Since then tnere have been five years in which crude rubber output exceeded consumption.

During these years excess production amounted to 455,000 tons, equal to more than seven months' consumption by the world. This situation of course will be helped to some extent by a revival in consumption, but it nevertheless means that the consumer is protected for the time being at least against any undue exploitation by the rubber producers.

STOCKS FIRM AS WALL ST. WAITS NEWS

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP.)—Stocks found a few friends today and prices tended to firm moderately, but the extreme dullness of trading during the greater part of the session caused most speculators to maintain their "watchful waiting" policy of the previous week.

Scattered showers in the drought districts, which indicated that some of the crops may yet be saved in part, brought some demand for farm, merchandising and grain-carrying railroad issues. Other groups, recently depressed, also displayed a better undertone. Strike news and Washington developments were still holding the attention of Wall street.

Grains dipped and rallied nervously. Wheat, off nearly 2 cents a bushel at one time, recovered most of this decline notwithstanding the apparent break in the heat wave. Cotton was barely steady. Silver was slightly higher, but rubber eased. The dollar moved up in foreign exchange dealings. Bonds were quiet and indecisive.

Settlement of the textile labor controversy, together with adjustment of the Toledo strike situation, while cheerful market factors, had been generally anticipated Saturday.

With the Washington authorities considering ways and means of averting a walkout in the steel industry, the financial district was a little more hopeful that some solution will be found for this problem. Further conferences between Gen. Johnson and steel labor leaders were expected tomorrow and Wednesday. At the moment the employes and union officials were said to be far apart in their views.

In the meantime market commentators were stressing the importance of the adjournment of Congress. With the President meeting prominent Senators and Representatives for a discussion on legislative matters, there were expectations of a quick agreement on the enactment of measures which the administration considers necessary before the session is brought to an end.

While most forecasts of business over the next several months are of an extremely cautious character, trade analysts reported that commercial failures during May dropped to the lowest level for any month since January, 1920. One review found 977 insolvencies in the United States in May, compared with 1,052 in April.

The Treasury's June finance announcement, while somewhat disappointing to traders in listed United States government securities because of the relatively small amount involved and the closeness of the coupon rates to the market, seemed to meet with the approval of most bankers, because of its orthodox nature.

BUYING RALLIES COTTON PRICES

The early selling tapered off after the close of Liverpool and prices rallied in sympathy with a steadier turn in the wheat market. Buying was encouraged also by an idea that the eastern belt was getting too much rain.

October sold up from 11.85c to 11.95c with active months generally recovering with 3 or 4 points of Saturday's closing quotations, but the bulge met further liquidation with the market at mid-day showing net declines of 6 to 10 points.

GRAIN VALUES TAKE TUMBLE

CHICAGO, June 4.—Sharp setbacks of grain values took place early today. Partial moisture relief and indications of more put sellers into a majority for at least the time being.

Opening unchanged to 1⅞ lower, July 97½-98½, wheat prices later underwent an irregular general fall. Corn started ⅜-1⅛ down, and subsequently receded further.

TESTIFY PUSEY WAS FLORIDAN

Efforts to show that George W. Pusey, former millionaire wall paper merchant, of the North Side, had established his home in Orlando, Fla., were made today at the Pusey will hearing before Judge Thomas P. Trimble in Orphans Court.

Florida beneficiaries of what is purported to have been the last will of Pusey, dated August 22, 1933, nine days before he died, called as witnesses John L. Lyon, former Pennsylvania Railroad auditor at Chicago, who spent his winters at Orlando, and his daughter, Mrs. Ella Beals.

Roosevelt, Storm, Then Darrow in Art Array

CHICAGO, June 4—(AP.)—Art, said attaches of the Art Institute today, imitates life.

They pointed to an exhibit where two busts, one of President Roosevelt and the other of Clarence Darrow are spaced six feet apart.

The group was arranged a week before Darrow's recent report on the NRA stirred up a storm of argument, institute officials said.

POLICEMAN HIT, MAN HELD

Richard Medinsky, 37, of 1409 Spring Garden avenue, was being held today pending the outcome of the injuries to Patrolman Timothy Donahue, of 2526 Mulberry way, whom he is alleged to have struck while being arrested for drunkenness yesterday morning, according to a police report.

The officer, suffering from concussion of the brain, said he was struck by a club wielded by his prisoner as he was calling the patrol. He said Medinsky also took his revolver from its holster and struck him on the head with it. The attack occurred at Twenty-fifth street and Mulberry way.

Residents of the Nineteenth Ward, opposing the proposed construction of a garbage incinerator in Sawmill Run boulevard, will hold a protest meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the South Hills High School auditorium. A parade through the neighborhood will precede the meeting.

CABLES DRAG COTTON DOWN

NEW YORK, June 4.—Cotton futures opened barely steady, 8 to 11 points lower, due to lower Liverpool cables, liquidation and foreign selling. July, 11.65; October, 11.90; December, 12.02; January, 12.07; March, 12.16; May, 12.25.

The showers reported in the Middle West and some western belt sections, accounted for part of the early selling both here and abroad, and Liverpool was a seller of the later months locally. This was coupled with July liquidation and scattered realizing in later deliveries from local or commission house sources.

The decline extended to 11.63 for July and 11.97 for December, which represented net losses of about 13 to 15 points on the more active positions.

COURTS IN PACT ON 80 MILLION

By an agreement announced today, the Common Pleas Court has joined with Orphan's Court in establishing a system for the handling of investments in mortgage pools from estates under the jurisdiction of the two courts.

In order to provide equal distribution among those holding interest in the pools, the two courts have arranged that no payments may be made from the mortgage pools without an order of court.

Under this agreement, all requests for payments from the pools will be referred to the Orphans' Court which will decide the amount that may be had as a proportional share of the funds available.

The system was designed to aid those in "distress" who need funds from the pools that otherwise would not be available.

It is estimated that $80,000,000 are invested in mortgage pools in Allegheny County.

MISSING CHILD FOUND ASLEEP

CLEVELAND, O., June 4.—(AP)—Asleep in high weeds near a golf course, Stephen Miklos, 5, was found today by searchers 24 hours after he became lost and caused a hunt for him by Boy Scouts, school children and neighbors.

He became separated from a group of other youngsters who set out yesterday to catch minnows in a shallow pond.

U. S. Moves to Supplant Short Term Debt

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—A definite trend toward longer-term securities to replace much of the government's large short-term debt was seen today in Secretary Morgenthau's offer of two issues totaling $800,000,000.

This financing operation—which may go far beyond the $800,000,000 and reach $1,320,000,000—also indicated to some observers that the administration expects increased emergency spending during the summer.

Some congressmen feel that as much as $1,000,000,000 may be needed for drought relief. Public works outlays also are expected to be heavy.

Secretary Morgenthau offered investors two security issues—$300,000,000 in 12-14 year 3 per cent bonds and $500,000,000 in 5-year 2⅛ per cent notes. In addition, the Treasury reserved the right to increase the bond issue by a maximum of $520,198,100.

This would be sufficient to exchange new bonds for $174,905,500 in ¼ of 1 per cent certificates maturing June 15, and for $345,292,600 in 2⅛ per cent notes maturing August 1.

This means that after garnering the $800,000,000 to meet expenses of recovery, the Treasury stands willing to increase the 3 per cent bond issue by whatever amount holders of maturing certificates and notes wish to swap them for bonds.

Another feature of the announcement was the interest rate. The 3 per cent figure on the bond issue was the cheapest to the government since "Mellon's 3s," a $755,000,000 sale of 24-year bonds in the fall of 1931.

In addition to the August 1 maturities for which new bonds will be issued, the government must meet huge maturities during the 1935 fiscal year beginning July 1. Besides more than a billion in three and six months bills already outstanding, the Treasury has obligations totaling $4,007,242,000 falling due.

The youngest Insull wanted to see all the sights, so when he was left alone Samuel, Sr., headed for the electrical exhibits where he spent the remainder of his visit.

LOCAL MARKET MOVEMENTS NARROW

Trading was quiet and prices continued to range over a narrow scope as the new week opened on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Early dealings were very light, showing no change from the dull markets witnessed last week. On the "big board" a firmer tone was in evidence, but the turnover remained around the recent low levels which have set a new mark for a decade or longer.

Market circles were cautious, continuing to remain aloof from both the buying and the selling sides. Brokers reported a little more interest in odd lots for purchase, but the big operators seemed to be out of the market. With the textile strike averted there was hope that the threatened steel walk-out would be prevented also. Scattered rains in some of the drought stricken grain territory provided a little cheer to the markets, but inability to judge the extent of the summer business lull served to deter any but minor operations in stocks.

STEEL BUYING HOLDS UP

CLEVELAND, June 4.—(AP.)—An increase in specifications and shipments as well as steelworks operations, which went up 3 points to 60 per cent, was reported by the magazine Steel today.

Pointing out that the general trend in steel consumption was slightly downward, however, the magazine's weekly review pointed to two important factors in the situation. It said:

"The first of these is the reluctance of consumers to lose their equities in second quarter contracts, with the certainty of higher prices beginning July 1 than they are now paying; and the second is the artificial stimulus supplied by fears of a steel strike.

"Steelmakers continued to take heavy shipments of scrap, but lack of new buying has resulted in further price reductions at Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, lowering Steel's iron and steel scrap composite 38 cents to $10.33. For the first time in six weeks, however, the downward trend in scrap prices at Pittsburgh halted, leading to the belief that with strike uncertainties overcome, the market will show more stability. Pig iron shipments still are increasing moderately."

President to Push Labor Aid Plan

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

A BAD WEEK for stock prices and a good week for grain prices only because of bad weather.

Trade and industrial news is unusually mixed.

Apprehension that summer will bring considerable recession in activity has become more pronounced.

LABOR OUTBREAKS, actual and threatened, are widely regarded as an extremely grave menace. Employers fear that political considerations may induce Washington a carry favor with organized labor leaders, especially since nation-wide congressional elections impend. A battle may therefore be staged between politically-supported labor and employers, who are determined to defend the open shop at any cost.

Until the outcome becomes less beclouded, hesitancy will be logical.

I UNDERSTAND THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS ANXIOUS TO PATCH UP LABOR QUARRELS PENDING THE FORMULATION BY HIM OF A VERY COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM TO ENHANCE THE WELL BEING OF WORKERS, EMBRACING UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE AS WELL AS OTHER GUARANTEES CALCULATED TO INCREASE THE SECURITY AND CONTENTMENT OF THE WAGE-EARNING CLASS.

Meanwhile, the largest employers in our most important industries are striving to convince President Roosevelt that passage of the Wagner labor bill this month would aggravate rather than ameliorate labor disputes. At this writing the President's intention is not definitely known.

SO MANY far-reaching bills and proposals are before Congress that uncertainty is unlikely to disappear until they have been disposed of. The Wagner bill occasions throughout industry most concern of all.

The Fletcher-Rayburn measure in its final form is less obnoxious to the financial world than the measure originally was. President Whitney, of the New York Stock Exchange, wisely announces that every effort will be made by the institution to make it operate effectively. The prescribed 45 per cent margin need not prove fatal to normal dealings in stocks.

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION'S record has been so strewn with mistakes of judgment, as determined by the courts, that the setting up of an independent body to administer the act is welcomed. But if, as Washington dispatches declare, Commissioner Landis be selected to head the new commission, very rigid interpretation is anticipated, as he was the main author of this piece of legislation.

In my opinion, the law will not prove half as harmful as Wall street has predicted.

THE SKYROCKETING of wheat, corn and oats prices has been more spectacular than reassuring. Dearth of foodstuffs is not conclusive to genuine national prosperity and happiness, despite the Brain Trust's fetish for wholesale destruction of crops and food animals.

Already the shares of leading mail order concerns have reflected prospective shrinkage in agricultural purchasing. And railway tonnage, of course, will by and by suffer.

NOTWITHSTANDING the dwindling of optimism in industrial, financial and business circles, buying of consumers merchandise maintains notable vitality. The predicted fall in steel orders has not yet occurred and the automobile industry is still busy.

WILL THE ADJOURNMENT of Congress bring sufficient relief to stem unusual slackening of the general business pace during the summer?

DRY WEATHER FORCES FARM STOCKS DOWN

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 4.—Last week the stock averages gave ground slowly but steadily, losing 2-3 points from the close of the preceding week. Bonds also declined slightly.

Most weakness appeared in "farm stocks (mail order and agricultural machinery), steels and motors. Sears, Roebuck fell back 3⅞ points and U. S. Steel 2⅛ points.

Doubtless the drought and its effects upon rural purchasing power were among the most important factors in all these cases. This is serious enough, and it is gong to be difficult to work up a bull movement in the market while the nation's crops are literally being burned up.

It should be remembered, however, that speculative markets are likely to overdiscount such developments and to get oversold. Furthermore, this disaster is not without its benefits, for it is bound to produce a more realistic psychology. It will teach the New Dealers a lesson concerning what can't be done by passing laws. It will draw us all together, as is the way with men when they confront a common danger.

LABOR SITUATION

The other immediate depressant marketwise is the labor situation. That is also bad, but has its bright side, too. Whenever labor resorts to violence and widespread stoppage of economic life is threatened, we may know how the general opinion will react. The show-down comes and the national unity and interdependence will assert themselves.

In this case, again, the New Dealers must realize that there is a limit to social disorder and class conflict.

Both these problems bring us up against the elemental forces of "nature" and "human nature," and unreal ideals have to go.

So, while one cannot be sure that some further setback may not affect the stock market, I, for one, am hopeful that more sensible policies may soon come to prevail, and that the basis for a sounder market will be laid.

'BAD NEWS' OUT

So it is with the bill to regulate the stock exchange, which now awaits the President's signature. Wall street leaders are disposed to say that it might have been worse, and to make the best of it. The "bad news" is all out. If, now, the public gains the confidence in stock market values which the bill is designed to give, all is not lost.

Finally, the President plainly wants Congress to adjourn. To this end, it seems likely that much of the "must" legislation will be abandoned, and as the financial community seems still to fear Congress more than a dictator, an early adjournment may be considered "bullish."

About the same time the liquidation resulting from the reorganization under the banking act, including the segregation of "affiliates," may be completed.

The recent action of the market does not seem bad. After the selling in the last hour Friday, most stocks have still held above the low of May 14. On Saturday they closed well up in the day's range, after showing good resistance on increased volume. Several of the old-line leaders did relatively well, and bonds held a little better.

The economic visibility is low, and the business outlook not bright. It is possible that we may see further weakness, particularly in steels, cans and "farm stocks," before June is over. But I think we are close enough to bottom in the case of the more reasonably-priced issues to warrant holding through and adding to holdings on recessions.

I would doubt the wisdom of buying on the technical rally which may come here.

HOLC ISSUES WARNING

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Additional drastic power to curb swindlers who seek to mulct home owners applying for mortgage relief from the government is provided in the amended Home Owners' Loan Act, it was stressed by the Board of Directors of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in a statement commenting on a one-year prison sentence recently imposed by a Buffalo, N. Y., judge. The convicted man was found guilty of collecting $110 in three "fees" from a home owner, under the pretense of aiding him to obtain a loan.

Since the first offices were opened the Corporation and applicants for loans have been embarrassed in many localities by persons collecting fees from home owners for so-called "influence" in the expediting or granting of a loan, or for "legal" or other advice.

The new law makes it a felony even to solicit or "attempt to collect" unauthorized fees or commissions from applicants, regardless of whether or not money is actually received. Convicted violators are subject to imprisonment up to five years or a fine of $10,000 or both. Many racketeers are serving jail sentences for the offense and others have been indicted. Warnings have been issued by the Corporation in every state, urging applicants to avoid such solicitation.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Raw sugar was quiet early today and while no sales were reported, it developed that over the week-end about 58,500 bags of Philippines in nearby positions were taken in by local refiners at 2.73c, a decline of two points. Futures opened unchanged to one point advance on a little covering and trade buying, but soon weakened under renewed July liquidation and selling by commission houses. The market at midday was ruling around the lowest.

In refined a continued good inquiry was reported and prices were unchanged at 4.10c for fine granulated.

IRON AND STEEL IMPORTS DROP

Imports of iron and steel products into the United States during April totaled 26,862 gross tons, compared with 38,393 tons in March and 28,061 tons in April, 1933, according to the Commerce Department's Iron and Steel Division.

Of the 34 classes of material included in the April, 1934 total, the trade in 16 was greater than in the preceding month. In 13 classes it was lower, while there were four classes in which there was no trade and one class in which the trade was the same in both months. The only increase of the moment was in merchant and other steel bars, with the outstanding decrease being registered in pig iron.

During the first four months of the current year imports of iron and steel products totaled 113,315 tons, an increase of 21,797 tons over the corresponding period of 1933. Increases in pig iron and in scrap receipts formed the basis of this gain.

Imports were received in April from 17 countries, as compared with 16 in March. Considering only those countries from which imports were received during both months there were eight instances of increased importations against seven decreases. The principal improvement was that registered by Belgium, while the more outstanding decreases were those in the imports from The Netherlands, British India and Canada.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"I doubt it. How about letting that dido rest while we get some dinner?"

The telephone rang, and I said I would get it. It was Dorothy Wynant. "Hello, Nick?"

"The same. How are you, Dorothy?"

"Gil just got here and asked me about that you-know, and I wanted to tell you I did take it, but I only took it to try to keep him from becoming a dope fiend."

"What'd you do with it?" I asked.

Synopsis

Nick Charles, noted detective, who tells the story of "The Thin Man," and Nick's wife, Nora, meet Dorothy Wynant, daughter of a former client, in a speakeasy. Dorothy asks where her father is and Nick refers her to Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney. Macaulay tells Nick. Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting Wynant.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

While a Mr. Norman is telephoning to Nick a loud report as of a shot is heard and his words end abruptly.

Police find Dorothy's automatic in Nick's apartment. Dorothy, beaten by Mimi, seeks shelter at Nick's, and tells new story about gun. Julia served time for working badger game. Guild tells Nick. Wynant's letter urges Nick hunt slayer. Nick talks with Studsy. Guild and Nick quiz Nunheim. Nick convinced that Mimi is hiding evidence.

Now go on with Charles' narrative.

"He made me give it back to him, and he doesn't believe me, but, honestly, that's the only reason I took it."

"I believe you."

"Will you tell Gil, then? If you believe me, he will, because he thinks you know all about things like that."

"I'll tell him as soon as I see him," I promised.

There was a pause, then she asked: "How's Nora?"

"Looks all right to me. Want to talk to her?"

"Well, yes, but there's something I want to ask you. Did—did Mamma say anything about me when you were over there today?"

"Not that I remember. Why?"

"And did Gil?"

"Only about the morphine."

"Are you sure?"

"Pretty sure," I said. "Why?"

"Right, I'll call Nora." I went into the living room. "Dorothy wants to talk to you. Don't ask her to eat with us."

"Now what's up?" I asked.

"Nothing. Just 'How are you' and all that."

I said: "If you're lying to the old man, God'll punish you."

We went over to a Japanese place on Fifty-eighth street for dinner and then I let Nora talk me into going to the Edges' after all.

The Edges

Halsey Edge was a tall, scrawny man of fifty-something with a pinched yellow face and no hair at all. He called himself "a ghoul by profession and inclination"—his only joke, if that is what it was—by which he meant he was an archaeologist, and he was very proud of his collection of battle-axes. He was not so bad once you had resigned yourself to the fact that you were in for occasional cataloguings of his armory—stone axes, copper axes, bronze axes, double-bladed axes, faceted axes, polygonal axes, scalloped axes, hammer axes, adze axes, Mesopotamian axes, Hungarian axes, Nordic axes, and all of them looking pretty moth-eaten. It was his wife we objected to. Her name was Leda, but he called her Tip. She was very small and her hair, eyes and skin, though naturally of different shades, were all muddy. She seldom sat—she perched on things—and liked to cock her head a little to one side. Nora had a theory that once when Edge opened an antique grave, Tip ran out of it, and Margot Innes always spoke of her as the gnome, pronouncing all the letters. She once told me that she did not think any literature of 20 years ago would live, because it had no psychiatry in it. They lived in a pleasant old three-story house on the edge of Greenwich Village and their liquor was excellent.

A dozen or more people were there when we arrived. Tip introduced us to the ones we did not know and then backed me into a corner. "Why didn't you tell me that those people I met at your place Christmas were mixed up in a murder mystery?" she asked, tilting her head to the left until her ear was practically resting on her shoulder.

"I don't know that they are. Besides, what's one murder mystery nowadays?"

She tilted her head to the right. "You didn't even tell me you had taken the case."

"I had done what? Oh, I see what you mean. Well, I hadn't and haven't. My getting shot ought to prove I was an innocent bystander."

"Does it hurt much?"

"It itches. I forgot to have the dressing changed this afternoon."

"Wasn't Nora utterly terrified?"

"So was I and so was the guy that shot me. There's Halsey. I haven't spoken to him yet."

As I slid around her to escape she said: "Harrison promised to bring the daughter tonight."

I talked to Edge for a few minutes—chiefly about a place in Pennsylvania he was buying—then found myself a drink and listened to Larry Crowley and Phil Thames swap stories until some woman came over and asked Phil—he taught at Columbia—one of the questions about technocracy that people were asking that week. Larry and I moved away.

We went over to where Nora was sitting. "Watch yourself," she told me. "The gnome's hell-bent on getting the inside story of Julia Wolf's murder out of you."

"Let her get it out of Dorothy," I said. "She's coming with Quinn."

"I know."

Larry said: "He's nuts over that girl, isn't he? He told me he was going to divorce Alice and marry her."

Nora said, "Poor Alice," sympathetically. She did not like Alice.

Saw Jorgensen

Larry said: "That's according to how you look at it." He liked Alice. "I saw that fellow who's married to the girl's mother yesterday. You know, the tall fellow I met at your house."

"Jorgensen?"

"That's it. He was coming out of a pawnshop on Sixth avenue near Forty-sixth."

"Talk to him?"

"I was in a taxi. It's probably polite to pretend you don't see people coming out of pawnshops, anyhow."

Tip said, "Sh-h-h," in all directions, and Levi Oscant began to play the piano. Quinn and Dorothy arrived while he was playing. Quinn was drunk as a lord and Dorothy seemed to have something better than a glow.

She came over to me and whispered: "I want to leave when you and Nora do."

"I said: "You won't be here for breakfast."

Tip said, "Sh-h-h," in my direction.

Dorothy fidgeted beside me for a minute and whispered again: "Gil says you're going over to see Mamma later. Are you?"

"I doubt it."

Quinn came unsteadily around to us. "How're you, boy? How're you, Nora? Give him my message?" (Tip said, "Sh-h-h," at him. He paid no attention to her. Other people looked relieved and began to talk.) "Listen, boy, you bank at the Golden Gate Trust in San Francisco, don't you?"

"Got a little money there."

Get Into Brawl

"Me and the French hoard gold."

He shook his head solemnly. "It's fellows like you that put the country on the bum."

"And it's fellows like me that don't go on the bum with it," I said. "Where'd you get the skinful?"

"It's Alice. She's been sulking for a week. If I didn't drink I'd go crazy."

"What's the sulking about?"

"About my drinking. She thinks—" He leaned forward and lowered his voice confidentially. "Listen. You're all my friends and I'm going to tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going to get a divorce and marry—"

He had tried to put an arm around Dorothy. She pushed it away and said: "You're silly and you're tiresome. I wish you'd leave me alone."

"She thinks I'm silly and tiresome," he told me. "You know why she don't want to marry me? I bet you don't. It's because she's—"

"Shut up! Shut up, you drunken fool!" Dorothy began to beat his face with both hands. Her face was red, her voice shrill. "If you say that again I'll kill you!"

I pulled Dorothy away from Quinn; Larry caught him, kept him from falling. He whimpered: "She hit me, Nick." Tears ran down his cheeks.

Dorothy had her face against my coat and seemed to be crying.

We had what audience there was. Tip came running, her face bright with curiosity. "What is it, Nick?"

Tip was not for that: she wanted them to stay at least until she had a chance to discover what had happened. She urged Dorothy to lie down awhile, offered to get something—whatever she meant by that—for Quinn, who was having trouble standing up now.

Nora and I took them out. Larry offered to go along, but we decided that was not necessary. Quinn slept in a corner of the taxicab during the ride to his apartment, and Dorothy sat stiff and silent in the other corner, with Nora between them. I clung to a folding seat and thought that anyway we had not stayed long at the Edges'.

Nora and Dorothy remained in the taxicab while I took Quinn upstairs. He was pretty limp.

Alice opened the door when I rang. She had on green pajamas and held a hairbrush in one hand. She looked wearily at Quinn and spoke wearily: "Bring it in."

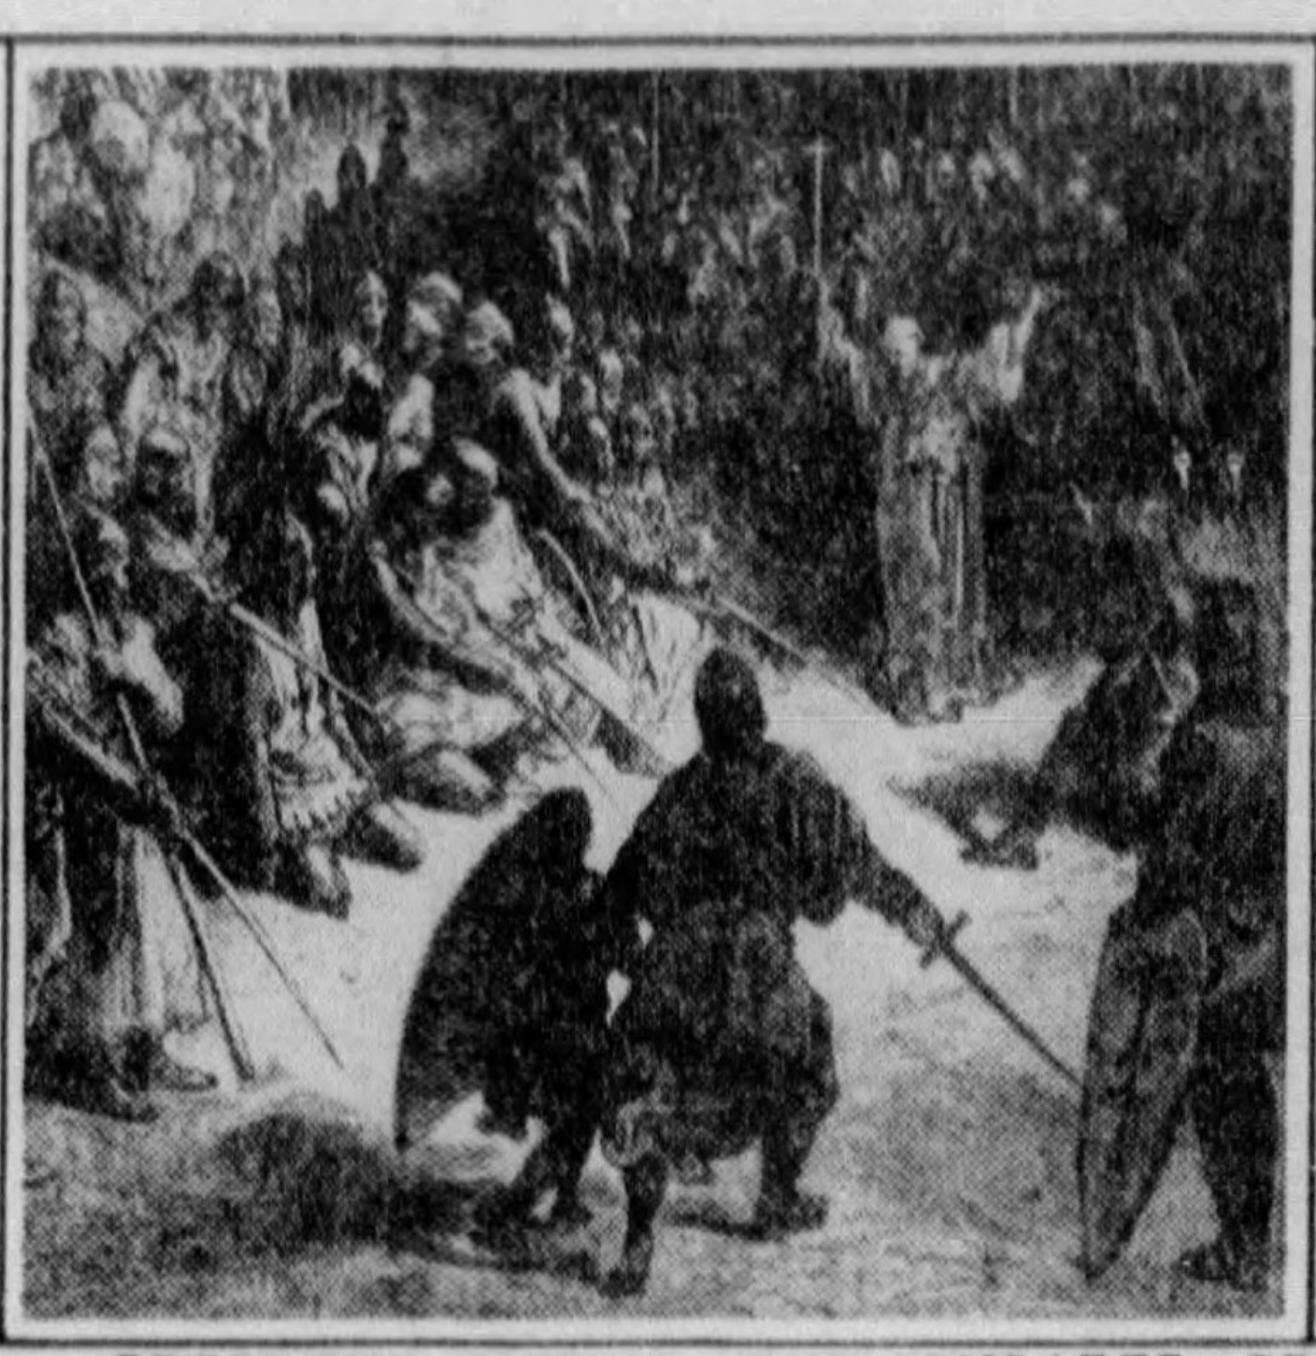
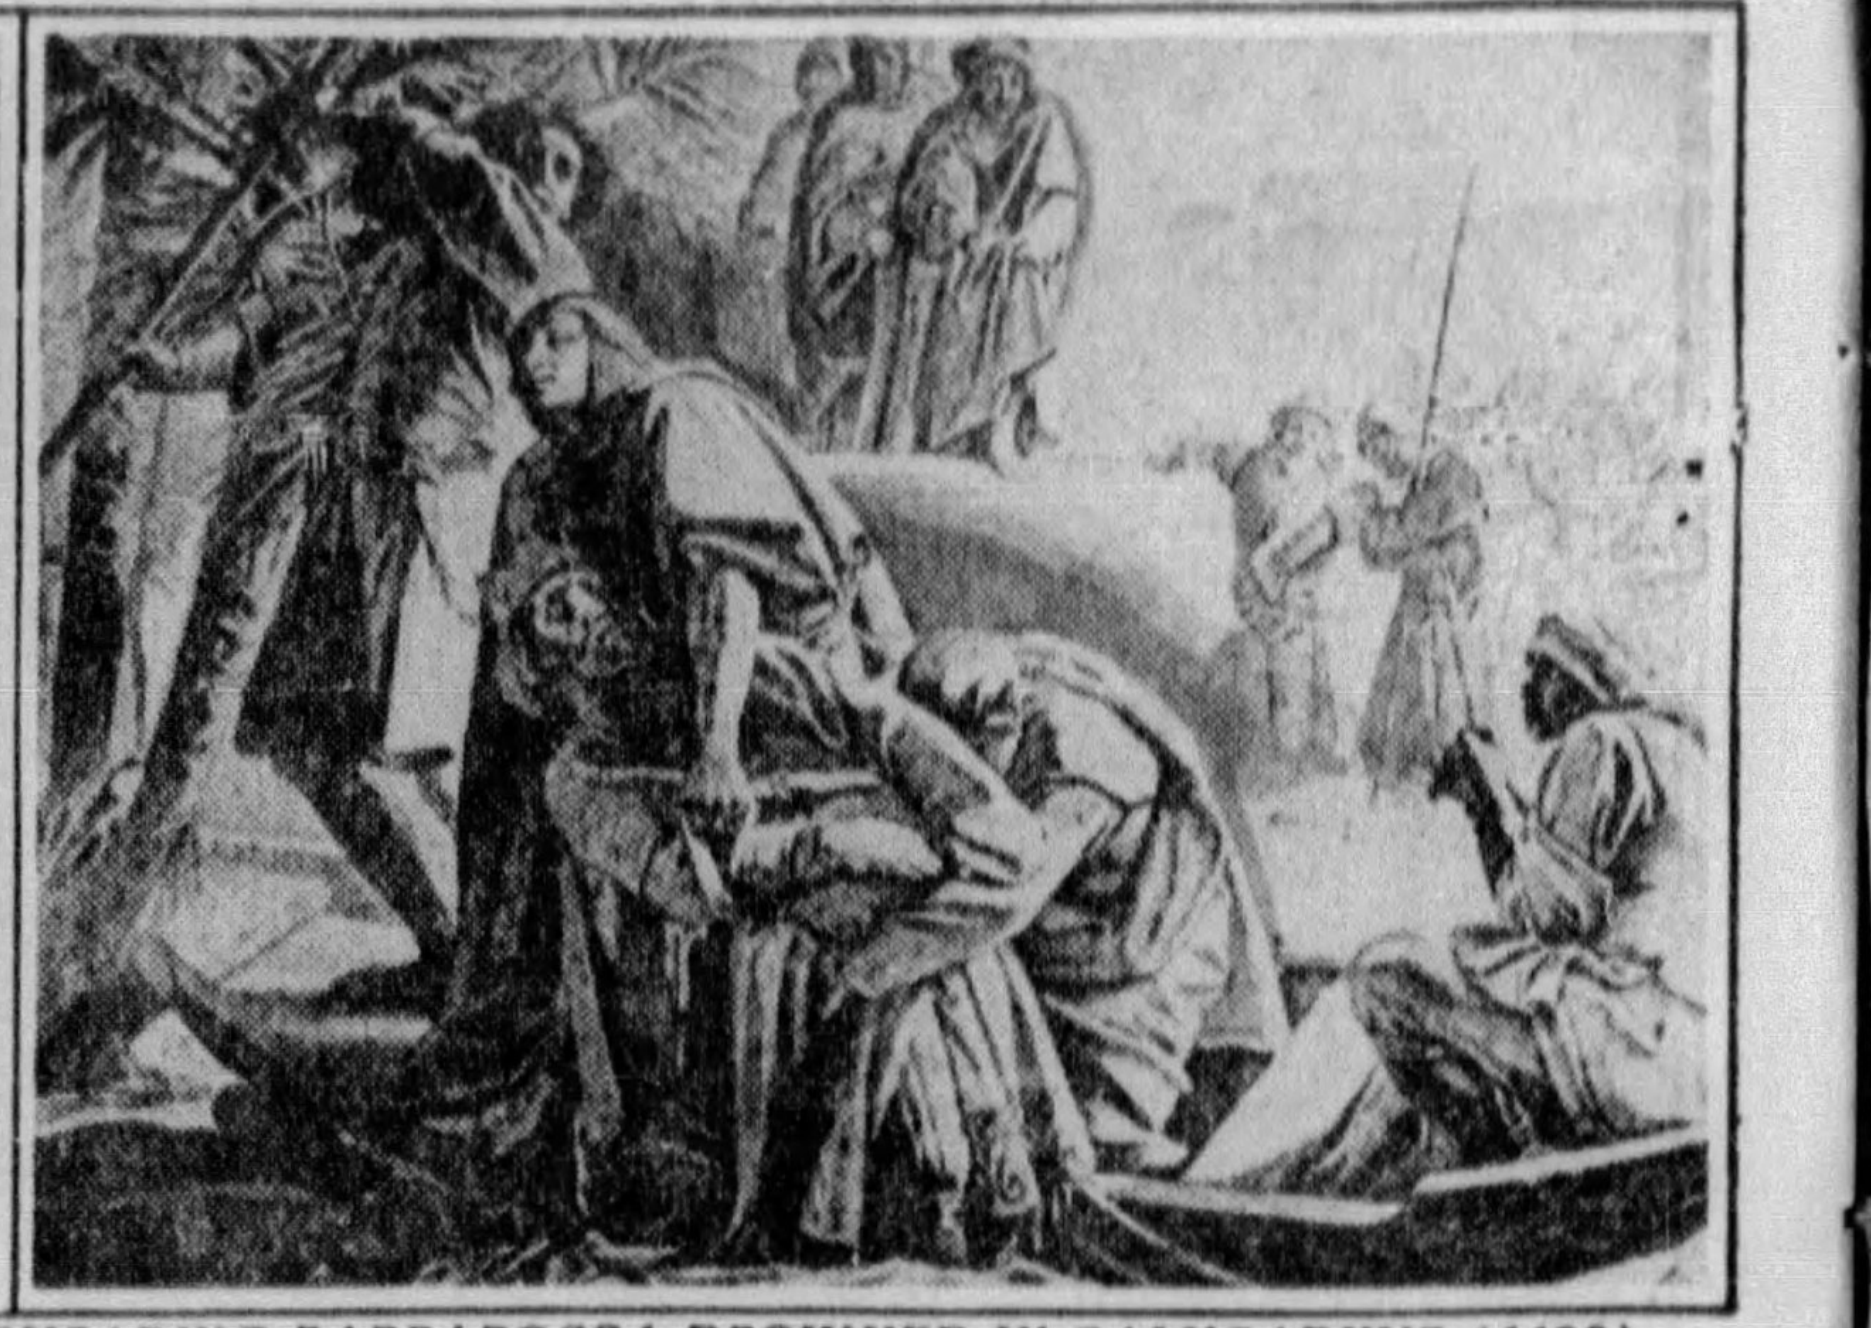
SIGNING OF THE TREATY OF GHENT (DEC. 24, 1814)—WAR OF 1812 ENDS

The British-American War dragging from 1812 threatened toward the end of 1814 to exhaust the resources of the young United States, facing besides economic bankruptcy, also political disruption. Great Britain was also anxious to end this war, as she anticipated a renewal of the fight with France, which actually followed, when Napoleon returned from Elba (1815). The treaty of Ghent was thus mandatory but not satisfactory to both parties. It did not secure the principle of freedom of the seas for which the U. S. fought, nor did the British gain anything. Since then U. S. had no armed conflict with Britain. Painting by Forestier





PETER THE HERMIT—THE CRUSADES—CRUSADING BARBAROSSA DROWNED IN CALYCADNUS (1190)

Beginning in the seventh century, Mohammed anism spread through Asia. Pilgrimages of Christians to the Holy Land went on undisturbed, however, until the Seljuk Turks conquered Palestine. Cruelty toward the Christians prompted Peter the Hermit, a French pilgrim, to cross Europe, preaching war to liberate the Holy Land. Pope Urban II, in his address, joined this action (1095), and the first Crusade started. Kings Richard Coeur de Lion, of England, Louis IX of France, Frederick I, the Barbarossa, of the Germans, princes, knights, soldiers, adventurers took part in the Crusades, yielding little, costing much blood. Palestine, except for a short time, remained in possession of the Moslems. The end of the crusades is considered 1291, when the last Christian possession in Palestine was lost. By transplanting the higher culture of the Byzantine empire into western lands, developing means of transportation, exchanging ideas the Crusades advanced civilization.

HEROES OF THE "BIRKENHEAD"

The British ship "Birkenhead" sank near South Africa in 1852. Women, children filled the life boats; 454 soldiers, sailors, stood in line and went down with the ship. They faced inevitable death courageously, a virtue admired and sought in all ages. (Character Building)

STEPHENSON'S "ROCKET" 1829

George Stephenson, English engineer (1791-1848) built a traveling steam engine superior to any in use in his time. In 1822 he opened the first railway, 8 miles long. With his improved locomotive, the "Rocket" (above) he won in 1829 a £500 prize. It incorporated principles, which, developed, are still in use in the modern steam locomotives. (Transportation)

WATER SOFTENING BY ARTIFICIAL ZEOLITES

Zeolites are decomposed rock. They are artificially produced (called permutit) by fusing together silicia or quartz, alumina or kaolin with carbonate of soda to form soda zeolite: $Na_2O, Al_2O_3.5SiO_2$, with manganese compounds they give manganese zeolite.

Hard water filtering through a zeolite bed is softened: $Ca(HCO_3)_2 + 2Na.zeolite = 2NaHCO_3 + Ca.(zeolite)_2$. The calcium zeolite can be reconverted into soda zeolite (regeneration) by salt water: $Ca.(zeolite)_2 + 2NaCl = 2Na.zeolite + CaCl_2$; thus one charge of zeolite in a water softening plant (above) may be used many years. After filtering predetermined quantity of water through the zeolite bed, thus softening the water, salt water is introduced from the top tank; the zeolite is regenerated; softening process then resumed. FISHES, SIMPLE VERTEBRATES—ANATOMY OF BONY FISH

In lower fishes (sharks, rays), the endo-skeleton is composed of a firm, elastic tissue, cartilage. From the higher, bony fishes (pisces) up to man, most of the skeleton is ossified, transformed into bone by being impregnated with lime salts. Fishes are aquatic animals, breathing by gills, though one subclass, the lung-fishes, have their swim-bladder functioning as a lung. Fishes have great economic importance as food, and as raw material for manufacture of gelatine, glue, fertilizer. (General Science) 93 III B

Standing in With the Outs

Right now a battle in the Republican sector is two impersonations short of mimic warfare.

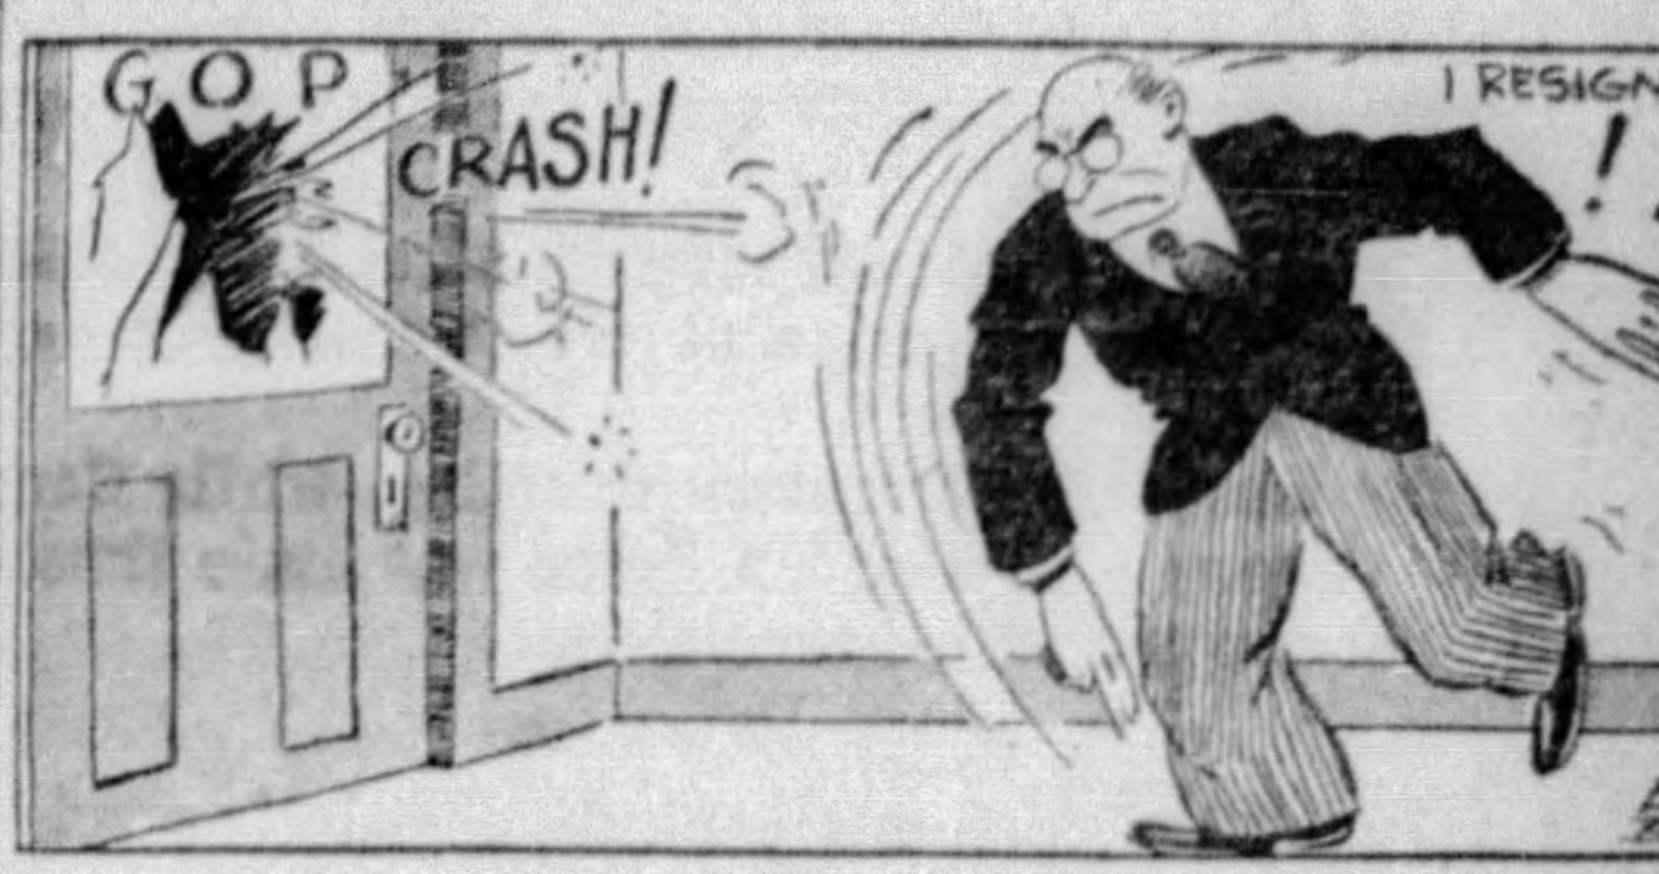
The boys ain't going any where until they skin the hides off 1936. Your optimistic telescope may see that far. But it will not bring it any closer.

The old guard is lined up against the young clique and Mr. Hoover. 'Tis a sad and morose panorama. The old guard bitters weepily when it thinks that it is now reduced to ringing doorbells.

The new guard represents active congressional Republicans. They were the only ones who reached the 1932 boats. They want young votes in the party. And are willing to take them from 12 to 16 years of age.

Mr. Hoover has his friends. At present they are the crows of the lost caws. But they are gathering strength and represent an important cross-section of G. O. P. manpower.

Things have been so quiet in headquarters that chairmen resign by throwing rocks through glass doors. Not because they are angry. But because they want to attract a little attention.



GOP
CRASH!
I RESIGN !

Looking ahead to 1936 is a long strain on a short neck. These be lean years for the outs. The battle for the Republican toga has a striking resemblance to a fight in the pilot house of a river boat in dry dock. The whistle is mute when the boiler is empty.

Nevertheless, it indicates the stirrings of political consciousness. The old guard has fought since 1870. And it ain't going to quit biting just because it has lost its teeth.

We have never discovered why Everett Sanders resigned the chairmanship. Possibly for the same reason that nobody wants to live in a haunted castle. Mr. Sanders said he wasn't feeling well. But that's no excuse when nobody is.

By the time you read this the electioneering, will be over and a new chairman will be in office. We don't know what he promised the boys. Patronage is as scarce as footholds in the Alps.

But, whatever he promised, he won't have to make good until 1936. And that's a slow note on any bank.

ODD FACTS

A skull lies, yellow with age, in a recess behind the curtain of an old farm house near Chapel-en-le-Firth, Derbyshire, England. Every time the skull is disturbed, disaster overtakes the farm.

Taxpayers who do not pay up in Turkey are to have a bad time, if a novel suggestion, whereby six drummers will perform outside their houses for one hour a day, becomes a law.

Les than 55 per cent of the world's merchant marine now depends entirely on coal; and 3,908 steamers, of 20,135,000 tons, are fitted for burning oil fuel.

Presidential Commission Should Guide Nation Into New Financial Era

THE formulation of the stock exchange control bill completes the trinity of basic measures which will reconstitute the financial machinery of the United States.

The securities act and the banking act of 1933 are the two others of these constructive reform measures, of which President Roosevelt was the fountain head of inspiration.

The policies adopted are intended to make the banking machinery of the country more amenable to the social needs of the American people.

* * *

AFTER Congress adjourns, the President should appoint an expert commission to correlate these three laws and make them thoroughly consistent with one another.

Unless the unworkable features are eliminated, a reaction against them will inevitably occur, and the broad public benefits will be lost.

In the German stock exchange control law of 1896 the country went to fanatical extremes, and in due course the entire measure was withdrawn.

In the haste of emergency drafting, while Congress rushed headlong toward a new order, there was little time to weigh the practical consequences of each clause.

* * *

AS ADVOCATES of the banking legislation, which should be perpetuated, the Hearst newspapers call upon the President to appoint a thoroughly competent commission to co-ordinate, integrate and implement the new financial policies already recommended by the administration and adopted by Congress.

Such a commission, properly set up, could perform a job as practical and as intellectually useful as the famed MacMillan commission rendered in Great Britain in 1931.

The proposed commission would not deal with broad policy, which has already been passed upon, but with the more specific task of weaving this array of constructive reforms into an organic whole.

On it the President should give representation to the best qualified financial minds in the Senate and the House of Representatives. The commission should also include experienced commercial and investment bankers of high integrity and practical experience.

* * *

THE objective of the presidential commission would be to make these new policies workable and helpful to business and employment—and thus to assure their continuity.

The public wants the reforms, and they can be perpetuated through ironing out defects of drafting and inconsistencies.

On the other hand, unless the technique of dealing with practical problems is improved, the whole program will be jeopardized, and the benefits of the progressive trend will be lost.

It could bring to the American administrative agencies the lessons learned under similar circumstances in Great Britain, Germany and elsewhere.

* * *

SPECIFICALLY, there remains the problem of reopening the capital market in order that job-creating private projects can be financed. The new legislation has destroyed old instruments for long-term financing without replacing them with new.

Though it is desirable to divorce security affiliates from banks, it would be helpful to permit banks to engage in true underwriting of issues, that is, to contract in advance to purchase for their own accounts unsold portions of new security offerings. This would be in accordance with the sensible methods of the London money market.

Likewise, it would be useful to make the liability provisions, affecting officers and directors of corporations, identical in both the securities act and the stock exchange bill. The differences lead only to confusion and paralysis.

Furthermore, the cleansing of the commercial banking system, as advocated by the President, has been only partly accomplished.

* * *

THE LINK between commercial banks and investment banking firms remains unbroken as long as partners of the latter are permitted to remain on the directorates of the former.

There is still laxity in permitting interlocking directorates among commercial banks.

The basic problem of creating a unified banking system has not yet been directly dealt with.

Branch banking and deposit insurance need to be treated more decisively.

The welfare of the country calls for prompt decisions on the future of banking.

If the President appoints men of character, wide knowledge and broad experience to such a commission, it will be ready to make concrete recommendations to Congress when it reconvenes for consolidating and perpetuating the financial reforms.

* * *

WITH proper integration, the steps already taken will pave the way for a better financial system than the country has ever had.

It would be a lasting manument to the President if during his administration a financial system for public service, instead of for exploitation and racketeering, were created.

But, to endure, the new system must be one under which honest men can live and flourish and move goods freely from makers to users.

The administration is already approaching such a setup, but basic refinements and improvements are needed.

The proposed presidential commission could suggest adjustments necessary to heighten the confidence of honest business and financial leadership.

The New Voting Plan

The Proposal to Mail Ballots Offers a Remedy For Civic Ills.

The people are becoming sick and tired of being cheated at the polls by unscrupulous machine politicians.

That, it seems likely, is the main reason for the increasing interest that is being shown in Alonzo P. Ingram's plan to have all voting done by mail. Under this scheme citizens would mail their ballots to a central bureau. Secrecy would be assured.

Even the boldest crooks hesitate to tamper with the United States mails. And with 944 district election boards done away with in Allegheny County—all replaced by one central bureau of high-class men—there would be less likelihood of cheating than is the case now, when the election officials are often "ward heelers" of a rather low type.

Elimination of the district election boards would greatly reduce the cost of elections and save the taxpayers many thousands of dollars annually. It is estimated that it now costs $3 a vote to hold an election in Allegheny County, while under the Ingram plan it would cost 25 cents a vote.

The maintenance of a polling place in every neighborhood, within walking distance of every citizen's home, is a relic of oxcart days, no longer necessary in these days of rapid mail delivery. The system should be modernized.

If people are permitted to mark their ballots in their own homes, instead of being compelled to visit polling places which are often in uninviting locations where one must rub shoulders with disagreeable persons, there will be a great increase in the vote of self-respecting and independent citizens. Many of this class do not vote now, with the consequence that the results of elections are often determined by minorities controlled by organizations of self-seeking politicians.

Voting by mail should make for better government.

Blue and Gray United

The Dedication of the Confederate Monument Is a Happy Symbol.

The dedication of the Confederate monument on the North Side Saturday is happily symbolic of the reunion of the Blue and Gray.

The monument was unveiled by Anne Louise Cowan, a descendant of fighters on both sides in the Civil War. One of her great-grandfathers on her father's side was John Cinnamond, who served in the Mexican War in the same regiment with Gen. U. S. Grant, then a subaltern, and was killed at Vicksburg while fighting under Grant. One of her maternal great-grandfathers was Col. Richard Lewellen, a veteran of the Mexican War and commanding officer of the Twelfth Virginia Regiment, Confederate States Army.

The local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, under whose auspices the monument was dedicated, was organized with the help of Col. J. M. Schoonmaker, a brave Union officer. The monument was erected by the Pennsylvania Historical Commission to mark the spot where 118 Confederate officers were imprisoned.

In numerous ways the memorial typifies the end of ill-feeling.

Flower Sunday

The Nation's Florists Plan Another Kindness For Invalids and "Shut-Ins."

Under the appropriate name of "National Shut-in-Sunshine Day," the florists of America are to repeat on June 10, and to surpass, the remembrances of invalids which they instituted last year.

On the corresponding occasion in 1933, more than 150,000 bouquets were sent to sick people the country over—to patients in private homes, as well as in hospitals.

This year, it is anticipated, 350,000 or more visitations will be made by the donors' messengers.

As previously, the flowers thus distributed will be the gifts jointly of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and of the Postal Telegraph Company.

A simple request by any friend or relative of a bedridden sufferer will bring a bouquet to the "shut-in." Not only the large cities, accustomed to convenient services, but smaller towns are to be included.

As the originators of the well-known slogan, "Say It With Flowers," the nation's florists are demonstrating that they themselves can do it exceedingly well.

CALIFORNIA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—Irving Thalberg seems saddest of the movie princelings. He has the detachment of a merman and the crackly coral smile of one who believes all is delusion. In his 30's, he has squeezed more success out of life than 20 ordinary men, but appears buried in dry, bitter rinds.

Not long ago he went gipsying for a year, but came back to the treadmill. A frail fellow, whose slumberous eyes are banked with eager fire, he is at his desk a human dynamo. He works harder than any other associate and is petulantly impatient with those who show fatigue.

But away from the confusion, he has the moody languor of the ascetic who might be lashed by inward consciousness of a material worship. Worn down, as it were, to a gentle bleakness. It is not pose; he wants sincerely to get away. He does. But they will never let him go. He will never be free!

His only let down in the daily grind is the 4 p. m. telephone conversation with his 3-year-old son, Irving, Jr. Nothing must interfere with this and he submits with happy martyrdom to the childish prolongations. Tortured by chronic insomnia, he often sits by a window the night long.

* * *

Although Thalberg's wife, Norma Shearer, is deservedly one of the major stars, he is happiest when she is not working. Then he feels freer to accept the comfort of her conversation during his sleepless stretches. He is the type who requires, expects and receives a lot of mothering. As what husband doesn't?

I ran into handsome Peter Arno, deeply tanned and as snappily garmented as a Lyendecker ad, at the Vedome. He has been, he says, "attending the high school classes" at the studios. Arno, successful at everything else, had the most devastating theatrical flop of a recent New York season. But he's the burnt moth again and taking a hoist in his silken suspenders will shoot another bankroll on a revue just to show 'em.

Los Angeles's residental district known as West Adams is redolent of an old granduer. It swings wide with aristocratic hauteur but like Chicago's Gold Coast is beginning to droop, going down hill with an air. Under its socialized morality, the Hollywood that has feathered out of the brush-heaps is grotesque, outrageous and often obscene. Now and then an elderly lorgnetted marchesa drives out of a palm studded lawn in a fairly tolerable carriage with crest and footman. Every large city has one of these vague, achey areas, sustaining itself bravely in the surrounding change, a sentimental anchorage in the riptide. Reminders, too, that the sedate old things are often preciously responsible for the flashier new.

There are few streets here that would not be a paradise for the isolated movie fan. Today for instance, I noticed Wallace Beery running up the steps of the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. Joan Crawford, a lovely vision in cerise, gazing from a richly upholstered limousine. James Dunn strolling through a bright patch of park. Tullio Carmantai lifting a canary colored glove for his car in front of his hotel.

Beauty and hair dressing parlors, more so than on Broadway, are perpetual founts of gossip. Here are juggled the latest tidbits before they reach the distortions of the gossip writers. Long before marital clouds engulfed Pickfair in the prints, beauty parlors were hep to the real breach. The scattering of such salacious crumbs in the salons brings the birds of paradise. Scandal comes from below stairs so servant quarters are pipe lined to the beauty parlors. It is proverbial that lady's maids are coiffured and beautified free for their evenings out.

I motored to the Beverly ranch where Will Hogg and I spent two winters housekeeping several years ago. Tom Mix's home is still in especial plume and his name remains spelled out in the shrubbery. But Tom no longer lives there. Buster Keaton's green stepped castle hard by is also there. But Buster, too, moved away. The area seemed a little lost without them. Down towards town was Norman Kerry's old home, scene of so many joyous festivities. Kerry, too, has gone elsewhere. So doth the old order, etc.

They cling to the hardwood floors here. Even out at George Young's, my local Simon Legree. I was brought up on rough planking and can't handle them. Stepping onto the first Oriental rug, I generally do a scoot, pss-s-s-t!, under the piano. Then there's the memory of the first hardwood floor craze in our town. Almost every evening the quiet was shattered by the cracking of a middle-aged fibula.

Thought Is Like That

All day the light moves across the strip of ground which I can see from the window where I work.

It is a common corner, such as one might find in any back yard. Not in the least exciting. Nor, I'm afraid, very tidy. There is one tree, a young pine. Red soil. A pile of rock, some sticks of wood, two or three empty flower pots. Sometimes, if the breeze is right, a tossed spray from the white climbing rose.

A few neglected feet of earth. Yet, with the changing light, it is transformed—slips from one phase of beauty to another. In the whole circle of the hours it is never quite the same.

Very early in the morning, when I begin to write—often before sunrise—the place seems bubble frail. There is no weight or substance to it; shape or color. Shadowy as a dream it lies there in the pearly light.

Slowly, imperceptibly, the dawn quickens. The rocks take shape. The earth warms, soft as ash. The pine trunk rounds into a shaft of smoke. Then suddenly, like a quick peal of music, there's the sun! The light clings to the kindling in a bright, wet web—trails gleaming from the roughness of the rocks—spreads, till the air is filled with silver threads. A small bird flashes like a bobbin through the loom of light. A brief breeze shakes a bending blade of grass—like scattered beads of dewdrops roll along the dust. A moment more, the world is rose and gold!

Hot noon. Again there are no shadows. Now, again, the place seems drowned—in sunshine, as it was in night. Drowned, drenched and drained of color by the heat. Light falls, rebounds, hangs in a quivering film of flame. Almost one hears it clang against the hot, white anvil of the earth. Is it like this, one wonders, on the moon?

Two. Three. Now shadows spread their pools again beneath the stones. The whole place glows with color. It seems a bright mosaic, set in amber glaze. The empty pots are bowls of cinnabar. The stove wood's carved from bronze inset with platinum. The pine tree's pewter, set with coral tiles—wrapped, on the north, with green moss, deep as fur. Cool ivory, the old rose bush trails its wreath. And, blue as flame, three moths hang quivering in the air.

Twilight—The mountains merge into a round, black rim. And, for a moment more, the sunshine lies along that rim in one bright, molten line, then spills—and my small corner cups the afterflow. Through one last bird call, everything is still—sealed, like a dream world, in that amber flood.

And then, as though a spell were broken, everything dissolves. Rocks, sticks and pine trunks all flow into one warm blur of violet. Caught in the rose wreath, gleams the crescent moon.

Deep night—and magic. Rocks and trees all gone! Green moonlight on a darkness—peacock blue. And in the midst, a blackness that's a crouching gnome. Above, a towering shaft that leaps—and then is lost within the maze of stars.

A patch of earth. A common corner in a yard that for six years I've seen, each hour of the day. Yet never seen the same, because light swept it with the magic of its brush.

Thought is like that! It can touch common life—some shabby corner where one's years are spent—and make it flame like some Alladin's night!

Falsehoods About Lindy Are Disproved

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WHEN President Roosevelt gets around to it, he will doubtless put a stop to mendacious misrepresentations of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, which some of the unofficial "press" agents of the administration are believed to have inspired in recent weeks.

This sniping at America's greatest living hero of the air is so foreign to the gallant spirit of the American hero in the White House as to be obviously unworthy of an administration that glories in the name of Roosevelt.

This sniping seems to come from stupid understrappers who are striving to make the public forget the colossal blunder that wrecked the federal air mail, crippled American air transport and sent 12 of the bravest pilots who ever flew the colors of a mighty nation to an utterly unnecessary death.

The latest falsehoods put in circulation concerning Col. Lindbergh have to do with his recent appearance as a witness before the Roosevelt board, headed by President Wilson's Secretary of War—Newton D. Baker—which is making the most thorough and impartial investigation of military aviation that has been made since the Morrow board, appointed by President Coolidge.

* * *

Lindbergh Not Invited to Serve

THE allegation that Col. Lindbergh ever declined to serve on the board, of which Mr. Baker is the able chairman, is wholly false. He was never invited to serve on this board. The board upon which he was offered an appointment was headed by a major general of the United States Army and a majority of its members were Army officers.

As originally organized, this board appeared to have as one of its major missions an inquiry into the advisability of turning over the transportation of the federal airmail to the Army Air Corps, and of the readiness of that corps for such a mission.

In view of the fact that Col. Lindbergh was opposed to turning over the federal air mail to military control but believed in the wisdom of the Morrow board's unanimous recommendation that commercial aviation and its development be kept separate from military and naval aviation, he was honorable enough to decline the offer of such an appointment and to give his reasons for so doing.

But simultaneously—in fact in his letter of declination—he offered to hold himself in readiness to appear before that board as a witness and give testimony if it was believed this would be helpful to the inquiry.

Upon further consideration, the Secretary of War wisely decided to broaden the inquiry and to appoint a new board to be headed by the most eminent civilian competent to preside over its sessions that he could find. It was also decided to appoint a majority of civilians as members of the board.

Came to Washington At Own Expense

MR. BAKER was then selected and prevailed upon to accept the chairmanship of this new Roosevelt board. Col. Lindbergh was never invited to serve on this board and neither the President nor the Secretary of War would arrogate to himself the right to say what Col. Lindbergh's answer to an invitation to serve on a board with a majority of civilian members would have been.

Another falsehood broadcast to the country is this whispering campaign against Col. Lindbergh misrepresented him as treating the invitation of Chairman Baker with contemptuous silence and of waiting until he was begged in order to appear before the board as a witness.

There is not a word of truth in this slanderous story. As soon as Col. Lindbergh, who was in the West when the first invitations arrived at his office along with the thousands of letters that burden his mail, found out that the board really desired his presence, he promptly, cheerfully and with characteristic courtesy came to Washington at his own expense and made one of the best witnesses that has yet given testimony in this most useful inquiry.

For so appearing and for the assistance he rendered by the testimony he gave, Chairman Baker, on behalf of the board, expressed the deep appreciation of himself and its every member.

In view of these facts, which are taken from the record, the sooner the sniping at Col. Lindbergh stops, the better it will be for the prestige of the administration. It is not only poor sportsmanship but it is the worst of bad politics.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Face Toward the Sun

I have turned my back to the shadows,
I have set my face towards the sun,
And my life shall be as a syllable

The frailest, bright-winged insects
That sways on a blade of grass
Take joy in the light and the flowers
Ere their moments of living pass.

And each one is patterned and painted
With an exquisite design,
With an infinite care for perfect hues
And power and faultless line.

Then dare I to doubt a purpose
Which runs thorugh the limitless scheme,
From amoeba which thrives with its single cell
To man and his noblest dream?

Now I set my face towards the sunlight,
To life's rapture I open my soul
And I go, made strong by the perfect trust
Of a heart which is sure of its goal!

Jean Le Roy, Who Invented Moving Pictures, Did Not Win The Millions His Genius Deserved

By Edwin C. Hill

THE mills of Hollywood grind swiftly, nor yet exceeding small. The product of film entertainment, poured into 20,000 theaters, seen and heard by perhaps 50,000,000 persons every week that rolls along, has, in the past year, achieved notable improvement.

New ideas—or old ideas with a new slant—new faces and personalities, an improved standard of taste—all these have contributed to an obviously increasing public interest in the swift simulation of life which the pictures give us. Better direction, better acting, better photography, all these factors have helped.

In many respects sound pictures and their making constitute the most romantic industry in the land, one with singular complexities and curious problems; a gigantic interest which, at last, seems to be finding itself.

And yet, had it not been for one little-known inventor, only recently departed into the shades, it is at least problematical as to whether there could have been motion pictures as we know them now. The story of this man, one of the little-known inside stories of pictures, furnishes in itself an instance of the inexplicable workings of fate.

Labors 50 Years On His Great Idea

IF ever there was a story which illustrates the dreamy unworldliness of many inspired inventors, it is the story of Jean Le Roy. A photographer from boyhood, he began to experiment many years with lantern slides. Then he began to play with the film which Thomas A. Edison had perfected. Month after month and year after year he toiled away with the almost mystical devotion that such men have when they are tracking down a miracle.

Fully 50 years of his life he poured out as he labored day and night on his great idea. And finally he had it, and on February 5, 1894, Jean Le Roy, in a little optical shop in Beekman street, in New York City, made pictures move and live upon a screen. Quaint and crude, but the same pictures, after all, that give pleasure to millions today and have made no man knows how many millionaires.

But Le Roy was not one of them. He went drifting along through his flowered fields of invention, never giving a thought to the untold fortune that was slipping from his hands like the sands from an hourglass. And one day, after a friend told him that he should have patented his motion picture projector, he went to a lawyer about it. The lawyer looked at his blueprints and papers and put a hand on his shoulder.

"I'm sorry," he told Jean Le Roy, "but you're six months too late. Your invention is now public property."

For the last three years, content and always cheerful, this man who could have rolled in millions, sat in his old chair, completely paralyzed on his left side, looking at the mementoes of his career and pictures of movie stars—Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks and Charley Chaplin—all millionaires. Does fiction ever match the true stories of life?

Nikola Tesla Active at 77

NIKOLA TESLA pauses long enough in his lifelong and self-appointed task of establishing communication with the other planets to tell us that we would eat better, sleep better and think better if we would charge our bodies with 1,000,000 volts of electricity.

Now that Thomas A. Edison is gone, Nikola Tesla is probably our greatest inventor. Long and lean, he is still extremely active at 77, and most interesting in his theories and prophecies. He came to America from his native Austria at the age of 28, fresh from the Gratz Polytechnic and the University of Prague. Shy and unknown at the start, it was only a few years before his arc lighting system, the Tesla coil, and his discovery of alternating current light and power transmission had made him a world figure.

As far back as 1901 Tesla startled science with the announcement that from the top of Pike's Peak he had caught signals from the planet Mars. A sharp controversy followed, without proof one way or the other. Some astronomers and physicists are convinced that one or more of the planets are inhabited—that there are "people" of some kind, even though they may be very different from us human beings.

Tesla, for one, is sure of it—sure that the people of Mars have been eagerly sending signals to us for many years, and that we have been too dull to catch them. And now Dr. Tesla tells us that he is persisting in his efforts to reach Mars and Venus and that he believes that he will be able to do it through electrical transmission and the magic of radio.

"It is mathematically certain," Tesla tells us, "that the other planets are inhabited," and who is bold enough to gainsay this worker of marvels, who as a 10-year-old boy in the Austrian mountains, said that some day he would build a power wheel big enough to harness Niagara, who foresaw television as far back as 1896, who took the Nobel physics prize in 1915, who predicted that the World War would last five years and who said well in advance of the battle that Gene Tunney would defeat Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship of the world.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Isn't it especially true as your condition improves?

You are not punctual in following specified time for taking medicine

You do not accurately follow the menu he plans for you.

You subject yourself to conditions he has warned you against.

You reason that there is no use in carrying out the doctor's schedule when you're on your way to recovery.

You fail to subject yourself to an examination which he says you should have.

Because of the frequency of your recurring ailments you feel that your position is not what it should be.

But certainly you cannot benefit yourself by allowing these afflictions to continue.

ISN'T IT SO?
